Nobody can explain why wild birds do certain things, nor why tame ones do, either. A domestic hen in the road is as big a puzzle as a partridge in the woods. But naturalists study acts and tell us what certain birds do, even if they cannot tell how or why. For example, at this season of the year the swallows begin to combine in great flocks. They are to be seen now in various parts of the country, ranged along the telegraph or telephone wires and in enormous flocks filling the air and actually clouding the sky. They are getting ready for their flight south. But how come these speechless birds to be able to pass the word along to meet? Some call, covering many miles must have gone out to assemble them. Presumably the most of them are young birds, hatched this summer. What do they know of the flight south? They have never taken it. And now they are preparing to go hundreds of miles away to a region entirely strange to them. Who calls them together? Who gives the signal to start? One day they are here and the next all are gone. They go because we have cold weather here, but they go before it becomes cold, and they return here to meet the returning summer and be warm, but they get here before the warm weather is assured. Hence it is evident that cold does not drive them away nor warmth bring them back. The notion entertained years ago by Gilbert White (and not by him alone) that swallows hid themselves in the mud at the bottom of ponds doesn't go, these days.

Fernie, B.C., Nov. 4.—The riot act was read in Fernie Thursday night by Mayor Bleasdell after a violent outbreak on the part of the miners, when a train arrived from Coal Creek with men on board, who had gone to work in the mines without waiting until the agreement, now under consideration at Frank, had been signed and ratified.

Couple Commit Suicide.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—A suicide agreement is believed to have wiped out the family of Henry Letch Saturday. Letch, his wife and their 12-year-old son, Leroy, were found dead in their home in Irving Park, a residence suburb, Saturday. There were no signs of violence, nor escaping gas, and the first examination indicated they had died from mushroom poisoning.

That the deaths were the result of both father and mother becoming life weary after at least three years of struggling to get up courage for suicide was indicated by a note written in German found in one of the rooms.

The letter contained statements that Letch and his wife were dissatisfied with their church affairs, and had planned suicide for the last three years.

Fruit Grower Hurt.

Hamilton, Nov. 6.—Fred. Bell, a wealthy Burlington fruit grower, was perhaps fatally injured near Burlington Junction early yesterday morning, when the G.T.R. newspaper train from Toronto crashed into the rig which Bell was driving.

The injured man was brought to this city on the newspaper train and taken immediately to the City Hospital, where he now lies in a critical condition. Compound fractures of both legs, severe scalp injuries and internal injuries were suffered by Bell.

Both horses attached to the wagon which he was driving were killed.

CANADIAN WOMEN AND THEIR WORK

By Marjory MacMurchy

(Copyright by Publishers Press Limited, Montreal.)

CANADIAN WOMEN IN MEDICINE

The first woman who practised medicine in Canada was Dr. Emily Howard Jennings Stowe. She attended the New York College for Women, since she could not study medicine in Canada, and graduated in 1867. Dr. Emily Stowe practised in Toronto. She was for long a familiar figure in the life of the city. Her death occurred as recently as 1903. It may be taken for granted that any Canadian woman who practises medicine has a strong bent for being a physician. This statement, perhaps, is true of any country. On the whole, it seems to be easier in Canada for women to follow any calling they desire to follow than it is in older countries. Yet feeling in Canadian socially is conservative, and, as it was said before, any woman who practises medicine in Canada is certain to have a strong inclination for being a doctor. The average Canadian woman is far from being either listless or lacking in decision of character. The average Canadian woman physician has a marked individuality. It can be said truly of most of them that they are "born doctors". This was the character of Dr. Emily Stowe. Since her day it has become an easy matter for a Canadian woman to study medicine. For a woman physician to care for a large practise is regarded now as a matter of course.

MISS MARJORY MACMURCHY

The first woman to take a medical degree in Canada was Dr. Augusta Stowe Gullen, daughter of Dr. Emily Stowe. She graduated from Victoria University, Cobourg, in 1883. In the same year the Women's Medical College, Toronto, was founded, and Dr. Stowe Gullen was a member of its first staff, continuing this work during the history of the College which lasted for twenty-three years. The Medical Faculty of the University of Toronto became open to women students in 1907, and in the same year the Women's Medical College ceased to exist. There is at present only one woman instructor on the Medical Faculty of Toronto University. Dr. Helen MacMurchy is a clinical assistant in gynecology. When the staff of the Toronto General Hospital was reorganized about the same time that the Medical Faculty of Toronto University first received women students two women physicians were appointed as clinical assistants in gynecology. These two are Dr. Ida Lynd and Dr. Helen MacMurchy of Toronto. Besides Toronto, the medical courses at the Universities of Dalhousie and Manitoba are open to women. Women have graduated in medicine from Queen's University, Kingston. The medical faculty of Bishop's College, now merged in McGill University, also had a number of women graduates in medicine. The medical faculty of McGill does not admit women students. But Dr. Maude Abbott is on the staff of McGill University as Curator of the Pathological Museum.

Dr. IDA LYND

These are probably the only Canadian university appointments in medicine held by women in Canada. Outside of Canada, Canadian women hold a number of teaching appointments on medical faculties in the United States and India. Dr. Elizabeth Hurdon is one of the best examples of a Canadian woman in medicine outside of Canada. She is on the staff of Johns Hopkins University and her work is held in much regard. Dr. Hurdon is a graduate of the Toronto Medical College for Women. She is the joint author with Dr. Howard Kelly of a well-known medical text-book.

One of the most remarkable fields for the work of Canadian women in medicine has been in the East. The missionary appeal early took a strong hold on the women of Canada. Numbers of them have qualified as medical practitioners and have gone to pursue their calling in countries where women can be aided only by women physicians. In India, the North India School of Medicine for Women has a number of Canadian women doctors on its staff. Dr. Margaret Wallace is Professor of Medicine, Dr. Leila Davis is Professor of Physiology and Hygiene. Dr. Margaret Patterson, now in Canada, was also on the staff of the North-West College of Medicine. Dr. Patterson's work in India has been unusually interesting. She was for nearly seven years in charge of the Seward Memorial Hospital at Allahabad. In the great epidemic of Bubonic plague in 1901, Dr. Patterson was of effective help to the British Government in organizing plague relief camps and establishing plague hospitals. The people had confidence in her since she was well-known to them. For this service she was included in the honour list at King Edward's Coronation, and was given the Kaiser-i-Hind medal. A number of women physicians from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick hold important medical positions in the far East. These include Dr. Annie Young of Nova Scotia; two sisters, Drs. MacKenzie in Cawnpore; Dr. Alice Ernest in Jhansi, with two women associates both from Eastern Canada; and Dr. Blanche Wilson Stead, who is one of the best known women physicians in Persia. Other Canadian women physicians in India and China include: Dr. Marion Oliver, Dr. Elizabeth McMaster, Dr. Margaret McKellar, Dr. Cbone Oliver, Dr. Margaret O'Hara, Dr. Jean Dow, Dr. Mitchell, Dr. Haslam, Dr. Lennox (Japan), Dr. Annie Henry, Dr. Austen and Dr. Rae. These ladies are sent out by Canadian missionary boards. Dr. Susan Carson Rijnhart did famous work as a physician in Thibet and is the author of "With the Tibetans in Tent and Temple". She and her sister, Dr. Carson, who is Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Guild of Toronto, are daughters of Inspector Carson of London, Canada. Dr. Bertha Dymond, daughter of the late Dr. A. H. Dymond formerly head of the Institute for the Blind at Brantford, who practised for some years in Toronto, is now physician on an Indian reserve in Western Canada. It is not over-stating the case to say that Canadian women physicians are with the foremost among the world's missionaries.

Dr. MARY E. CRAWFORD

Dr. Mrs. ADAM SHORTT

There are in the neighborhood of from fifty to sixty women physicians practising medicine in Canada. About seven or eight are practising in Montreal and eighteen or twenty in Toronto. Among these fifty or sixty women doctors, biographical notes on a few typical instances will show the training undertaken by Canadian women in medicine and the average career which lies before a medical woman in Canada. Dr. Grace Ritchie England, a native of Montreal, graduated from McGill in 1888, one of the first class of McGill women graduates. She obtained first class honors in natural science with her degree of B.A. She took post-graduate work in Vienna and began general practice in Montreal. She holds the degree of M.D.C.M. Her husband Dr. Frank Richardson England, is also in general practice. Dr. Ritchie England specializes in the diseases of women. She is interested in the National Council of Women, and at the International Congress of Women held in Toronto in 1909 she was convenor of the section on hygiene. As well as conducting a general practice, Dr. Ritchie England maintains a dispensary for women. The Hon. Sydney Fisher is a cousin and Mrs. Roswell Fisher is Dr. England's sister.

Dr. Maude Abbott of Montreal was the first Canadian woman to receive an honorary degree from a Canadian university for merit in scientific work. Dr. Abbott's first medical degree was received from Bishop's College. She is a graduate in arts of McGill. Her training includes years spent in medical work at the universities of Zurich and Vienna. She took the Edinburgh Triple Qualification in 1897, and began medical practice in Montreal in 1896. She was appointed Assistant Curator of the Pathological Museum in 1899 and Curator in 1902. In 1911 she was given the status of lecturer and the degree of M.D.C.M. honoris causa. Dr. Abbott was born in the village of St. Andrews East, Quebec. Her grandfather, the rector of St. Andrews, was the uncle of the late Sir J. J. Abbott. Dr. Maude Abbott contributed a monograph to Dr. Osler's well-known "System of Medicine".

Dr. STOWE GULLEN

Medical school inspection in Montreal is carried on by twenty-four physicians who visit the large schools daily, and the smaller schools and colleges occasionally. During school vacation, the medical officers inspect employees in buildings where large numbers of working people are employed. They vaccinate employees who do not show marks of vaccination or who are unable to produce certificates. Two of these medical school officers are women, Dr. Helen Macdonald and Dr. Marion Hansford. Dr. Hansford may be taken as a representative of the Canadian medical woman who is a school medical officer, since her training and experience are fairly typical. She was born in Perth, Ontario, the daughter of a Methodist minister. Like other daughters of the parsonage, she has lived in a large number of Ontario towns for the short time of a Methodist pastorate. Her medical course was taken at Bishop's College from which institution she graduated in 1898. Beginning general practice in Montreal ,she was appointed a school medical health officer when medical school inspection was begun in 1907.

Mrs. Shortt, wife of Professor Adam Shortt, Civil Service Commissioner, for the Canadian Government, was born on a farm near Winona, Ontario. She was educated at Hamilton Collegiate Institute and at Queen's University, being one of the first women in Canada to take a medical degree. On her marriage to Professor Shortt of Queen's University, she gave up general practice, but she is keenly interested in public questions, especially in questions of public health. She now resides in Ottawa where she is an active member of the Local Council of Women. She was a joint convenor of the section on women's occupations at the International Congress of Women in 1909.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy was born in Toronto. Her father, Archibald MacMurchy, LL.D., was for many years Principal of the Toronto Grammar School, afterwards known as the Jarvis Street Collegiate Institute. Dr. Helen MacMurchy taught for a number of years in the Jarvis Street Collegiate Institute, taking her medical course while she was teaching. She is a graduate in medicine of the Women's Medical College, Toronto, and of the University of Toronto. She took post graduate work in Philadelphia and at Johns Hopkins University and has contributed articles to The Lancet, the British Medical Journal, etc. Dr. MacMurchy is in general practice in Toronto, and has done as well much work with regard to public health, especially in infant mortality, medical inspection of schools, and the care of the feeble-minded. She was appointed Commissioner of the Feeble-Minded by the Ontario Government in 1906. She is a member of the International Council of School Hygiene, having been appointed at its Paris meeting in 1910, and she is also a member of the Council of the American School Hygiene Association.

Dr. MARGARET PATTERSON

There are a number of women practising medicine in Western Canada. Dr Mary Crawford of Winnipeg, who is at present abroad, is one of the best known of these. She is a medical inspector of schools in Winnipeg. No account of Canadian women in medicine would be complete without a notice of a typical woman physician who is in country practice. Such a practioner is Dr. Annie Backus ,of Aylmer. She was born near Port Rowan and is of United Empire stock. She went to school in Port Huron and later attended Bishop's Strachan's School in Toronto. Dr. Backus did not begin to study medicine until after her marriage to her cousin, A. H. Backus. She took her medical degree at Ann Arbor. Afterwards she studied diseases of women in Chicago. She followed general practice in the States, then studied in Great Britain, practised in the States again, and finally returned to Canada where she is in general practice at Aylmer.

These are some typical instances of the work is being done by Canadian the work which is being done by Canadian women in medicine. The present account does not aim to be anything but an indication of how naturally and effectively such medical work may be done by women in Canada. It is not at all unlikely that when Canadian women as a whole begin an active part in civic improvement, on school boards, and in work for public health, much of the impulse will come from leading women in medicine. Dr. Augusta Stowe Gullen was for several years a member of the Public School Board of Toronto. Canada is a country in which development is taking place on essentially normal lines and those of its women who are physicians follow their calling from much the same motives which influence Canadian men who become doctors. They like medical work, and they believe that there is work in medicine which they can do effectively.

Marjory MacMurchy.

THE CANADIAN NURSE

By Marjory MacMurchy

New types emerge more rapidly in new countries than they do in old. The population of the Dominion of Canada at Confederation was a little over three millions, and Confederation took place only forty-five years ago. Yet already in one professional calling Canadian women have made so distinctive a position that the Canadian nurse is generally accepted as a national type. Her Canadian accent is sometimes called "American" by her friends from overseas and "English" by Americans. The color in her cheeks is apt to be brighter than if she had been born south of the line. Her eyes are likely to be blue or grey rather than black or brown. Her hair is generally yellow-brown, dark brown or auburn. Altogether her type is a trifle more northern and less nervous than that of the young women of the United States.

It is reckoned by historians that the first nurses came to Quebec in 1639. They were Sisters of St. Augustin. Mademoiselle Jeanne Mance arrived at Montreal in 1641. These are the beginnings of the famous history of nursing in Canada. It is a notable fact that Canadian women make remarkably fine nurses and that a fairly large proportion of the women of Canada who engage in profitable occupations enter the nursing profession. The names of many Canadian nurses may be given who are regarded as leaders in their calling. Such a list must include the names of Canadian nurses in the United States as well as in Canada since very many Canadian born women are among the leaders of the nursing profession in the United States. Mrs. Hampton Robb whose lamented death took place not very many months ago was a Canadian nurse. Her work will always be remembered in nursing annals. Miss Snively who was for more than twenty-five years at the head of the Training School for Nurses in the Toronto General Hospital and who has recently retired is another Canadian women who is regarded as a leader among nurses. Miss Nutting, joint author of the well-known "History of Nursing", is a native of Newfoundland. All through the various States of the Union Canadian nurses are to be found at the head of training schools and hospitals. Miss Lauder Sutherland, a native of Coburg is in charge of the hospital at Hartford, Conn. Miss Mary Smith is at the head of The Babies' Hospital, New York. Miss Samuel once the head of the Roosevelt Training School is now head of the Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland. These are but representatives of a large number of Canadian nurses whose work has taken them to the United States.

Among the most widely known names of nurses eminent in Canada are these of Miss Georgina Pope who went out charge of the nursing sisters with the First Contingent to South Africa in 1899. She remained in South Africa fifteen months, and went out again in January, 1902, remaining till peace was declared. Miss Pope received the Royal Red Cross given among King Edward's first Birthday honors. Miss Pope is Matron of the Military Hospital at Halifax. Miss MacKenzie, head of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada, is a university graduate and has had much experience in nursing in the United States. From Prince Edward Island to Victoria, Canadian nurses are in charge of hospitals in the various towns and cities. Typical among these are Miss Ross in Charlottetown, Miss Malony at the Jeffrey Hale Hospital in Quebec. Miss Henderson, Miss Gilmour and many others in Montreal, Miss Meiklejohn in Ottawa, Miss Stewart, Miss Brent, Miss Scott and many others in Toronto, Miss Johns in Fort William. Miss Wilson in Winnipeg and Miss McFarlane in Vancouver. These names stand as representative of a hundred others which might be mentioned. School nurses in Montreal, Toronto, and Hamilton are occupied in what is already a successful development of nursing.

The work of the Canadian nurse may take her as far east and north as Dr. Grenfell's mission to the fishing people of Labrador. She may care for well-to-do, and sometimes for very wealthy patients in cities like Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. She does district nursing among the poor in the same prosperous cities. She may organize new hospitals in hastily-built shacks. These shacks are succeeded quickly by permanent hospital buildings and the nurse, working single-handed one month, may find herself by the next with four or five probationers and an improvised training school for nurses. The Victorian Order of Nurses was first instituted in Canada by Lady Aberdeen. The cottage hospitals of the Order were inaugurated by Lady Minto. The Lady Grey Country District Nursing Association is a further scheme of the same character designed to serve a new and widespread country with trained nursing aid. Victorian Order nurses are to be found in every part of Canada. The head office of the Order is at Ottawa. These nurses often help to man or rather to woman — the staff of a small hospital in a new town where a short time before there had been no means of affording skilled attention to the sick. Further west still, Canadian nurse will be found at work in some little logging hospital where lumber-jacks and prospectors come to be nursed back to health. Thus a study of nursing in Canada reveals more intimately perhaps than an account of any other occupation for women in this country the conditions likely to be experienced by self-supporting women in Canada.

Conditions for trained nurses in Canadian cities are fairly represented by the fortunes of a typical nurse at work in Toronto. There are five training schools for nurses in Toronto, one in each of the large hospitals. No difficulty is experienced in securing good material for probationers, a significant fact considering that from twenty to twenty-five thousand young women are employed in the factories of Toronto, while permanent advertisements on factory walls, calling for workers, show that manufacturers need more women helpers than they are able to attract.

Many nurses after graduating from one of the Toronto training schools remain to nurse in the city. Others return to their homes or enter professional life in the United States. Besides nurses in hospitals and other institutions, there are over five hundred trained women in private nursing in Toronto. The largest registry for trained nurses has more than three hundred and fifty names on its books. A subordinate hospital position for a nurse in Canada carries with it a salary of from twenty-five to forty dollars a month. The superintendent of nurses in a small hospital sometimes receives four hundred dollars a year. From five to six hundred dollars is a usual salary for a superintendent of nurses who is head of a training school. A salary of twelve hundred dollars is a prize in Canadian hospital work. In private nursing, a trained nurse with ability and good connections is likely to make six or seven hundred dollars a year in Toronto. An exceptional nurse may make as much as nine hundred dollars, but this is doubtful. Should the Canadian nurse go to the States, as many of them do, she makes more money, and her expenses are correspondingly greater. The cost of living in Canada, however, is tending to approximate to that in the United States. Any difference between the two countries in the social position of the trained nurse is slight, but it is in favor of the nurse in Canada. The professional standing of the Canadian nurse is so good that there is no discrimination against her employment in the United States. There may even be said to be a prejudice in her favor.

LADY TAYLOR, (HAMILTON)

Takes a warm active interest in all branches of Women's Work

The more adventurous and exceptional work of the trained nurse in Canada is outside the cities. The life of such a nurse is also exceptionally exacting. The trained nurse of the Victorian Order with Dr. Grenfell in Labrador is a typical instance of exceptional experience in work. Working under a physician who has four hundred miles of coast under his care, the nurse sometimes is compelled to assume great and varied responsibility. In one of her letters to the Chief Superintendent of the Order she writes that there are two things which make the Labrador people easy to deal with, their faith in the power and knowledge of the nurse, and the absence of liquor. It is not only nursing care which is required from the nurse in the Canadian Labrador. She teaches the young girls of the settlement to cook, to nurse, and to sew. Two years ago, she instituted a flower show and offered prizes for vegetables, flowers, bread, cake, pies, and the more strictly Labradorean requirements, hooked mats, skin boots, models of komatik and dogs, model of boat with sails, and litter of puppies with their mother. Much of the philosophy of life for a woman in a new country is contained in this list of prizes offered by a Canadian nurse in Labrador.

The greatest need for trained nursing in Canada is among the settlers' wives in the West. Hundreds of Canadian young women go to be trained in the hospitals of the States and remain in that country. One of the leading New York hospitals has in a training-school of one hundred and over no less than thirty-six Canadian born women. One hundred and ninety of the graduates of the same hospital are Canadians. A training-school in a Boston hospital has thirty-four Canadian girls in a school of about one hundred nurses in training. Out of a staff of twenty-three graduate nurses in this hospital no less than eleven are Canadians. Even with this great drain on the nursing resources of the country, the majority of trained nurses in western Canada are still Canadian women. So far there is but one Lady Grey Country District Nursing Association in Southern Alberta. The nurse makes one ranch where she is needed her head-quarters and rides on horseback to make calls on her patients within riding distance. The scheme offers great possibilities. Many districts are so sparsely settled that a nurse would find difficulty in obtaining enough employment for support. A trained nurse would need at the least an income of five hundred dollars. The Country District Nursing Association is one way in which this difficulty will be overcome. A woman journalist in Winnipeg made the suggestion last year that the women in town and country should form clubs and employ a trained nurse to care for the members of the club. Conditions in the West are changing steadily. But trained nursing aid has still to be brought within reach of many of the women of western Canada.

MISS GEORGIE M. MOLONY
Lady Supt. Hales Hospital, Quebec.

There is no keen demand for additional trained nurses in cities like Toronto and Montreal. Yet it is true that there is no place in Canada where a competent, well-trained, able nurse will not find it possible to make her way. In the large cities especially, she will need some little capital until she gets an opportunity to show that she can do good work. But if she is an excellent nurse she is certain of employment. Trained nurses are needed in the West. But patients are widely scattered and government aid, a women's club, or some nursing order like the Victorian Order of Nurses is required to organize a system of country nursing. To those who have worked for some solution of the nursing problem in the West of Canada, it is good to recognize in the trained nurse of the Country District Nursing Association ,riding across the dipping and rising prairie with her supplies on the saddle-bow, a new and fit disciple of the Lady of the Lamp. In the prairie country the advent of the trained nurse on horseback brings with it a promise of better conditions for the women on farms and ranches.

Marjory MacMurchy.

MISS M. A. MACKENZIE,
Victorian Order of Nurses Ottawa

Mere Man and the Hat Pin

"The hat pin," remarked a magistrate lately, "is dangerous, superfluous, and ought to be abolished."

Quite so. And he might have added that it is neither so efficacious for the purpose it is intended to serve as was the old-fashioned elastic, nor becoming, as were the "strings" our grandmothers wore.

Change is not necessarily progress, and many modern so-called "improvements" are not really improvements at all.

Every woman knows, for instance, how the newfangled curling tongs crack and destroy the hair, unless skilfully used by an expert.

Nor do any of the many patent wire "curlers" give the soft waviness obtainable by the use of the time-honoured tag of soft rag, or the wisp of tissue paper.

"SHE BURNS GREEN."

How the Phrase Came to Be a Classic Yell Among Prospectors.

Although the prospector is generally supposed to be associated with the search for precious metal his attention is by no means confined to that. A writer in the Los Angeles 'Times' tells of a group of valuable claims in the Silver Mountain mining district, which includes the whole of Black Mountain.

It was long considered worthless until an up-to-date prospector recognized it as 'cement rock', the principal ingredient from which Portland cement is made.

Another example is furnished by the discovery of borax in Death Valley, one of the most valuable strikes ever made in California. The discoverer, Aaron Winters, was at that time living in a lonely little shack on the Amargosa flats at the south end of the valley.

Thither, attracted by the light, came one night a vagrant prospector from Nevada. He had with him a sample of borax brought from a small deposit across the border. This Winters instantly recognized as being the same curious stuff which he had seen lying in great beds in Death Valley, but of which he had never known the name.

Adroitly questioned the wanderer explained to Winters the simple but little known test for borax. No sooner was their visitor safely gone than Winters and his wife, carrying food and water, a pick, a saucer and a bottle of alcohol, set out on foot northward into the valley. At night fall the next day they arrived at the first of the strange beds.

Without even waiting to moisten his parched throat Winters fell upon it with pick and bare hands till a little of the surface crust was removed. He scraped up a handful of the loose stuff, piled it in the saucer, moistened it with alcohol and struck a match. An instant later he hurled his hat in one direction, his pick in another, and seizing his wife, waltzed that astonished lady round the strange, flickering flame, whooping: 'She burns green, Rosie! She burns green!'

Winters realized a fortune from his discovery. Even to-day the man of the valley, lighting upon something new heralds his find with the classic yell, 'She burns green!'

Long Speeches.

M. Jaures is not at all pleased with the proposal before the French Chamber to limit the duration of speeches to ten minutes. All that really need be said on most matters could, if the speaker clearly grasped his subject, be spoken in ten minutes, but probably the Socialist leader is jealous of the latitude recently allowed the Austrian Deputy Kotlerach, who spoke for three hours. But his record is beaten by an instance in England, when an opponent of O'Connell obstructed one of his bills by speaking for eight hours. Senator Summer at the time of the American war of secession, delivered an oration lasting eleven hours. At the Assembly at Bordeaux in 1871 the Mayor of Strassburg brought about his death from the exhaustion followed upon his speech.

THE LATE KING OF SIAM

The late King of Siam, whose full title was Somdet-Phra-Paramindmaha Chula - Longkorn-Chula - Chom-Klao, was one of the eighty-four sons of Maha-Mongkut. He had completed the fifty-eighth year of his life and the forty-third of his reign, the longest in the history of the nation. He was considered one of the broadest minded and most cultivated rulers of the far East. Under the tuition of an English governess in the royal household he learned to speak English and French perfectly. He instituted numerous reforms in his Government, abolished slavery, lowered the taxes, opened up canals for irrigation and transportation, instituted a superb system of highways for the development of commerce, built telegraphs and hospitals, guaranteed religious liberty, reorganized the army and built a navy of twenty vessels. Though Siam is an autocracy, the king was democratic in his spirit and gathered about him a Cabinet Council of six royal princes and thirteen ministers of state.

If I Should Die To-night.

(Revised Version.)

If I should die to-night
And should you come to my cold corpse and say,
Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifeless clay—
If I should die to-night
And you should come in deepest grief and woe
And say, "Here's that ten dollars that I owe"—
I might arise in my large white cravat
And say, "What's that?"
If I should die to-night
And you should come to my cold corpse and kneel.
Clasping my bier to show the grief
you feel—
I say, if I should die to-night,
And you should come to me and there and then
Just even hint 'bout payin' me that ten
I might arise the while;
But I'd drop dead again.

Free Fare, Little Salary.

In some foreign countries a liberal allowance in the way of travelling expenses makes a meagre salary a respectable one. In Italy, for instance, the journalist, with barely one or two exceptions, works for a salary which we pampered ones in Canada would laugh at. But he has his compensations. He—and not only himself, but his wife and family, too—travels free on all the railways, whether the journey is on business or not. If he wishes to go to the theatre, and to take his friends, he has only to ask, and the requisite box or stalls are at his disposal—and that, however humble his professional rank may be. On the whole, the Canadian journalist prefers not to be paid in this kind.

SPRINGVILLE ANNIVERSARY

Large Congregations Heard Rev. J. D. Morrow of Toronto

The services yesterday at Springville Presbyterian church were, as anticipated, of an exceedingly interesting character. Both morning and evening all available accommodation was taken up, and the occasion will long be remembered by the congregation and pastor, Rev. Dr. Marsh, who celebrated the fifth anniversary of his induction.

From Rev. J. D. Morrow, B.A., of Toronto, the pastor of Dale Presbyterian church, the congregation heard two splendid discourses, and to show their appreciation of the man and his work a substantial gift of money was made to him during the service, Mr. Wm. Whitfield reading an appropriate address, while Mr. Robert Colin made the presentation.

The music in the morning was pleasingly given by the choir, and forty young men gave the music at night. Rev. Mr. Morrow was also heard in three solos, which were appreciated. The evening service was proceded with a psalm service by the young men.

For his evening discourse Rev. Mr. Morrow told of his work in the slums of Toronto.

To-night a splendid concert has been arranged for. Miss May Peskey, of Toronto, will give elocutionary numbers. Talent from Peterborough and other places will assist, and altogether the program is one that should be heard by a large attendance.

BETHANY TO BE BUILT UP AGAIN

An Up-to Date and Commodious Town Hall is Planned

Mr. Anson Delong, contractor, of Bethany, was in the city this morning and when interviewed by a Review representative as to the effect of the recent fire in that town he stated that there would be more modern buildings erected to take the places of the ones destroyed. Men were busily engaged clearing the debris off the site of the town hall and it was the intention of the council to have an up-to-date commodious building erected. Dr. L. G. Brereton also intends rebuilding and though Mr. Charles Reynolds and Mr. L. E. Sason have not stated their intentions as yet it is confidently expected that they will also fall into line.

Mr. Delong also said that the fire started in the rear of Mr. T. B. Jackson's store house, and not in A. Monk's and was first seen by Mrs. W. Brown, from her home.

The man who was injured in falling from the roof of Dr. J. J. Hamilton's home was attended by Dr. Hamilton, and is able to be about again. He was one of the C.P.R. men who did such good work in checking the fire. He was endeavoring to protect Dr. Hamilton's house from the fiery cinders and the shingles becoming slippery, he fell.

BETHANY NEWS

The Review correspondent at Bethany writes as follows regarding the Bethany fire last week:

Thursday night at about eleven thirty-five fire broke out in the Sisson block here from an unknown cause. It quickly spread to all the building. The shoemaker's, barber's and butcher's shops were soon in flames. Next it spread to the town hall, and from there to Mr. Charles Reynolds' buildings. These being frame, burned like tinder. Some oil was destroyed, and for a few minutes bullets whistled through the air in all directions from cartridge which had not been saved.

Next it spread to the drug store belonging to Mr. T. G. Burton, and soon it was a mass of flames.

The small fire engine now came upon the scene, and by hard labor Preston Bros.' office, about thirty feet west of the drug store, was saved. It is understood that there is scarcely any insurance.

The Bethany people offer their thanks to the fire chief of Peterborough for taking the trouble to come out. Even if the danger was over when he arrived, still they appreciate it very much.

THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE

The article which will be found of most interest in the Canadian Magazine for October, is entitled "The Tragedy of Reciprocity," by M. O. Hammond. Few persons apart from the negotiators themselves had a better opportunity than the author of this article to observe the various stages of this famous international pact. Mr. Hammond was at Washington for four months, before, and while the agreement was being discussed by Congress. In his article he writes intimately concerning the whole campaign and with a broad knowledge of the subject. "Ottawa Society and the Duke," by H. T. Franch, is a most timely and readable contribution. There are four other well-illustrated articles and several fine short stories.

Shot by Burglars.

New York, Nov. 6.—Burglars, frustrated in their attempt to rob the country home of Isaac Guggenheim, the millionaire copper magnate, at Port Washington early yesterday, shot down and killed the night watchman, Alfred Crooker. The burglars escaped in a boat.

After the sound of shots members of the Guggenheim family and their servants ran out of the house and found Crooker lying dead on the lawn in a pool of blood. A revolver was clutched in his hand, but none of the chambers had been discharged, showing that his assailants had dropped him before he could fire a shot. There are no clues beyond footprints on the piazza.

Three railway men were killed when a freight engine broke through a bridge at Salt Creek, Ill., and fell 75 feet.

LEADER ROWELL'S PLATFORM IS SUBMITTED TO THE PUBLIC

Liberals Policy is Enunciated---Abolition of Three-Fifths Clause and Reform of Taxation Features.

Toronto, Nov. 7.—After an exceedingly busy day at the courts, N. W. Rowell managed to find sufficient time yesterday evening to complete the policy on which the Liberal party will ask the support of the people on Dec. 11.

Mr. Rowell, it is said by his law colleagues, has worked with but very little time spent for sleep since Monday of last week, when he accepted the leadership of the party. Last night Mr. Rowell coupled his final forming of the platform with work on his law cases. He expects that by Friday of this week he will have his professional work entirely closed off, and will then be free to devote himself and his time completely to the Liberal cause.

His announcement was handed out last night at 11 o'clock, and is, in part, as follows:

To the Electors of Ontario:

By the action of the Government the Legislative Assembly of this province has been dissolved before the expiry of the legislative term and the electors are called upon to bear the trouble and expense of an unnecessary general election during an inclement season of the year. Nominations take place Dec. 4, the election on Dec. 11.

The Government of Sir James Whitney has disappointed the progressive forces in our province by its failure to grasp the urgency and importance of New Ontario, by its failure to devise an adequate policy to promote the great agricultural interests of the province, and by its failure to manifest practical sympathy with progressive measures of social and moral reform.

The Liberal party considers the development of New Ontario one of the supreme opportunities and most urgent obligations of the Government, requiring the whole time and thought of a responsible Minister of the crown; and it believes that its successful development means increased prosperity to every citizen of Ontario. We recognise that agriculture is the basic industry of this province, and that an intelligent and far-sighted policy demands a great advance on all progressive lines.

More important than the successful material development of the province is the promotion of the social, moral and industrial welfare of the people and the development among us of the highest type of citizenship. The rapid growth of industrial centres has created new and important problems with which our Provincial Government should deal. It is the duty of the Government by wise measures to contribute to social, educational and moral reform.

Holding this Liberal faith, as leader of the Liberal party of this province, I beg to submit the following statement of policy and to appeal to all electors, irrespective of party, to rally to its support.

In order that the Government may enter seriously upon the problem of the settlement and development of New Ontario, we propose the creation of a Department of Immigration and Colonization, to be presided over by a Minister of the crown, who shall devote his whole time and energies to this important work, among other matters, to the promotion of settlement, building of roads, insuring other necessary transportation facilities, providing drainage requirements, assisting pioneer settlers to secure loans to a limited extent on the security of the lands occupied by them, repayable over a term of years, giving special assistance to pioneer schools.

Our further policy is the maintainance of the colonization character of the Temiskaming and Northern On-

A PROVINCIAL LICENSE BOARD

Toronto, Nov. 7.—Steps will be taken by the Provincial Government in the very near future to appoint a commission, with provincial jurisdicton, to take charge of all liquor licenses in the province, and to administer the license law. The Liquor License Act will be widened, and the administration of the law will be taken out of politics.

This action was foreshadowed during the last session of the Legislature, when the Hon W. J. Hanna announced that it was one of the questions and it is one that will be dealt with immediately. While no definite announcement has been made, it is understood that the Provincial License Board will supersede all local license boards. If this action is not taken the Provincial Commission will have jurisdiction over the Boards of License Commissioners. The provincial body will be non-political, and in this way the entire liquor license question will be removed from politics.

SIR JOHN CARLING IS DEAD AT LONDON; AN ACTIVE LIFE

Former Postmaster-General and Minister of Agriculture Suffers a Relapse as a Result of an Attack of Pneumonia—Was Born In Middlesex In 1828 and Was a Wealthy Brewer—One of the Old School.

London, Ont., Nov. 7.—Senator Sir John Carling, former Postmaster-General and Minister of Agriculture, died of pneumonia at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his residence. He was in his 84th year. He had been ill for some time last spring, but during the summer rallied, though at all times weak because of his age. Early Friday morning pneumonia developed and from the first there was no hope.

His children, including Fred and Mrs. Nicholson of Ottawa, were present when the end came.

One of Canada's grand old men has passed away. Hon. Sir John Carling, K.C.M.G., while not exactly one of the fathers of Confederation, was nevertheless an active participant in the political vicissitudes of those uncertain days in the history of Canada.

Sir John was the youngest son of the late Thomas Carling, a native of Yorkshire, England, who came to Canada in 1818 and settled in Middlesex, Ontario. Born in the Township of London, Middlesex County, on Jan. 23, 1828, he was educated at the local schools and joined his father in business as a brewer. For many years he has been president of the Carling Brewing & Malting Co., which controls a large share of the Canadian trade.

He was elected to public office for the first time in 1850 as school trustee, and continued as a member of the Board of Education for four years. He became member of the Town Council in 1854 and afterwards served as an alderman when the town was incorporated as a city.

In December, 1857, he was first elected to Parliament—the old Parliament of Canada—and continued as a representative in that House until Confederation. In 1862 he was appointed Receiver-General in the Macdonald-Cartier Government of old Canada, and was returned by acclamation on accepting office. He continued in Parliament after the defeat of that administration on a general appeal to the country, the late William McBride being his opponent. At Confederation dual representation being then in vogue, he accepted office as Commissioner of Agriculture and Public Works in the first Ontario Government, holding at the same time his seat in the Commons. In the contest of that year he was opposed by the late James Durand for the local Legislature, and the late James Peacock for the Commons. He continued in office in the local Legislature after the election of 1871, in which the late Frank Cornish was his opponent, still holding his seat at Ottawa. He resigned with the Government, however, in the fall of that year.

In 1882 he entered Sir John A. Macdonald's Government as Postmaster-General and became Minister of Agriculture in 1885, an office he continued to fill under Sir John Abbott, but ceased to hold under Sir John Thompson. He was called to the Senate in 1891, but resigned the following year to become a candidate for the House of Commons.

He was created a K.C.M.G. in 1893, and called to the Senate for the second time in 1896.

BRITISH CAPTAIN CHARGED WITH GROSS CRUELTY BY MEN

Three Sailors Make Complaint to the British Consul at New York.

New York, Nov. 7.—Charges of gross cruelty practiced by Captain James Robinson of the British steamer Drummeldie were made to the British consul yesterday by three sailors, who had just arrived here on the steamer from South American ports. They declared that decayed meat with which they were served, alleged blows and curses from the captain, and the forcing of fever-stricken men to work long hours had driven some of the crew to mutiny at sea and to plot to poison the captain.

Six of the alleged conspirators were taken off the vessel at Montevideo and sent to a British prison, and after this the sailors assert, the treatment the remainder of the crew received grew worse. One of them told of being dragged from his bunk while he lay sick with fever and forced to go aloft. The three men declared that they would rather go to jail than serve the remainder of their two-year contract under Captain Robinson. The consul took the case under advisement. [illegible]

Made Good His Boast.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Charles Schultz, a baker, made good a boast Sunday night that he would not be afraid to "tackle an armed robber," and yesterday lies fatally wounded. Schultz had barely spoken the words when two armed highwaymen walked into a Wentworth avenue saloon, where Schultz was. He sprang upon one of the thugs and was shot twice. His wife next door heard the shots, and running to the place was knocked down by one of the escaping thieves.

NO CLUE HAS BEEN FOUND

Not Enough Evidence Can be Secured.

Provincial Detectives Cannot Solve Mystery.

Toronto, Nov. 7.—The inquest into the death of J. Walter Dick has been brought to a close and a verdict of death on Oct. 7, as the result of being struck by a man unknown to the jury, at the corner of Toronto and King streets.

Every clue has been followed, but without result. Several times the Toronto police have felt sure of their man, but have not had sufficient evidence on which to convict.

The provincial constabulary department, a fortnight ago, was instructed to investigate. Every man under Chief Rogers was instructed regarding the whole affair and some were specially commissioned to follow up every possible clue, whether it at first sight appeared to be well grounded or not. This merely meant that the provincial police interviewed the same people that the Toronto detectives had done. They could go no farther, and the result is that the case stands with no arrest having been made.

It is quite possible that the two Toronto detectives working on the case will effect an arrest within a short time. They have not given up hope, and are still pinning hopes on remarks made by friends of deceased, and also by those who were near the scene of trouble. This hearsay is possibly poor stuff on which to work, yet forms a picture of a fairly young man whom these sleuths have been fixing their eyes on for some time.

On the other hand, however, the provincial detectives believe that there is absolutely no ground on which to work.

CANAL TO BE BEGUN

Appropriation for The Georgian Bay Scheme Considered

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—The question of an appropriation for the Georgian Bay canal in the estimates for the coming session is now under consideration by the members of the cabinet with a good prospect that work will be started next year. Hon F. D. Monk, minister of public works, is a strong advocate of the scheme.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Mr. Hall's Great Opportunity

R. R. Hall is asking the people of Peterborough to elect him as their provincial representative. Such a man should be in full sympathy with any movement that would help his city or town.

The Liberal platform, announced to-day, says not one word about the extension of the hydro-electric power policy to Central Ontario. Sir James Whitney says that he intends to extend it to Central Ontario.

Will not Mr. Hall as a loyal Peterborough man, desiring to help the city forward, reject the Liberal platform which promises nothing in the power line for this district, and cleave to the Whitney promise of hydro-electric power for us? If he is in full sympathy with this forward movement for Peterborough he will.

Or will Mr. Hall reject the Whitney substance of power relief for Peterborough, for the shadow of Rowell's platitudes? Will Mr. Hall feel compelled to say to the voters of this riding:

"I can't get away to help you out to-day
My friends won't let me."

FALL OF PEKIN IS NOT TRUE; CABINET FORMED IN SHANGHAI

Rumor That Gained Wide Currency Yesterday Is Believed to Be a Canard to Assist the Rebel Cause—Local Cabinet Is Formed By the Revolutionaries at Shanghai—Two More Cities Go Over to Rebels.

Shanghai, Nov. 7.—A Chinese report that Pekin has fallen and the Emperor has fled has caused a wide sensation, but a private telegram from Pekin, timed two o'clock yesterday afternoon, makes no mention of such an occurrence.

It is thought here that the report is intended to assist the rebel cause locally.

No Mention Of It.

London, Nov. 7.—The Reuter Telegram Co.'s latest despatch from Pekin direct, dated yesterday, 7.28 p.m., makes no mention of the fall of the city.

Local Cabinet Formed.

Shanghai, Nov. 7.—The most interesting development in Shanghai yesterday was the completion of the organization of a local Cabinet by the revolutionaries. Wu Ting Fang, who formerly held the post of Minister at Washington, has been appointed head of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Wang Jih Ting, Trade and Commerce; Shen Wan Yung, Finance; Li Ping Hsu, Civil Administrator, and Lee Hsieh, Military Administrator.

The appointments, however, are not taken seriously, the appointees denying knowledge of the action of the revolutionaries, except in the case of the Civil Administrator, who has been acting in the official capacity throughout.

Wu Ting Fang, while declining to acknowledge any participation in the revolutionary administration of Shanghai, openly sympathizes with it, although criticizing some of the methods. He is bitterly opposed to the Manchu clique in Pekin. Dr. Wu says that if the revolution hopes to win it must scrupulously regard the the rights of foreign nations and individuals. This, as time progresses, will be found difficult because of the conflicting views held in different provinces.

The Government at Pekin has instructed the Viceroy of Nanking not to oppose the reformers. Nanking, therefore, is expected to turn over to the revolutionaries in a few days.

Perfect order prevails at Shanghai. The arsenal, which was captured by the rebels, has resumed work. The revolutionary committee has ordered the return of the rifles and ammunition which were given out indiscriminately. Those retaining the rifles without a certificate will be immediately beheaded.

Shaohing, in the Province of Chekiang, famous for its mines; Quinsan and Kashing, in the some province, surrendered peacefully to the rebels late yesterday. Order is being maintained.

With the exception of Wusih all important points on the railroad from Shanghai to Ching Kiang are now in the hands of the revolutionists.

Nanking is still outwardly loyal and quiet, but the Tartar general is so unpopular that an upheaval threatens.

Amoy Not Captured.

Amoy, Nov. 7.—The report of the rebel occupation of Amoy is unfounded. The situation here is tense, but there are no disorders.

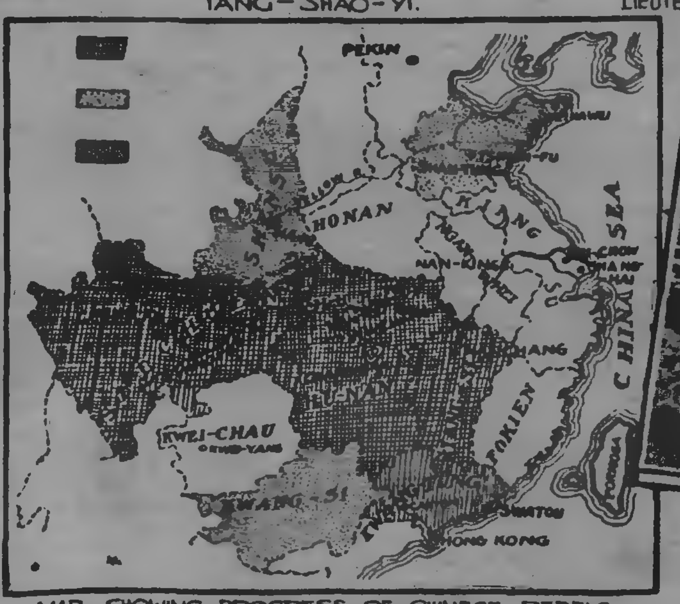
REVOLUTIONARY FORCES IN CHINA GAIN IN STRENGTH—GOVERNMENT MAKES IMPORTANT CHANGES

YUAN-SHIH-KAI.

TANG-SHAO-YI.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL FENG KWO-CHANG.



MAP SHOWING PROGRESS OF CHINESE REBELS.

CANTON, ONE OF THE GREAT PAWNSHOPS.

Changes in the personnel of the Chinese army are following each other in rapid succession in an effort on the part of the government to check the widespread revolt. Sheng-Hsuan-Huai has been dismissed as Minister of Communications and Tong-Shao-Yi appointed in his place. Lieutenant General Feng-Wo-Chang, director in chief of the General Staff, will replace the Minister of War, General Yin-Chang, as commander of the First army, which is now nearing Hankow.

The change was indicated by Yuan-Shih-Kai, who, despite his rumored indifference, is actively directing the movement against the rebels. The recall of General Yin-Chang was inspired by the fear that the Chinese, who comprise the main body of the soldiers at the front, will prove unreliable under a Manchu commander, in view of the rebel effort to draw racial lines.

Above is also shown a scene in Canton, which is reported to have been captured by the rebels after great slaughter. The map indicates the various provinces now in the hands of the rebels. The cross shading shows the provinces captured on October 23, the dotted shading, provinces captured on October 25, and the vertical shading shows the provinces captured on October 28.

WHITE MEETS NO TROUBLE

Finance Minister Returned by Acclamation.

Liberals Thought Better of it at the Finish.

Brockville, Nov. 7.—The expected happened at Delta yesterday, when at the bye-election nomination for Leeds, Hon. W. T. White, the Dominion Minister of Finance, was returned by acclamation.

The hinted opposition from the Liberal ranks did not materialise, the Leeds Reform Association, to which was left the choice of a candidate, deciding that it would be unwise to fight Mr. White.

The occasion was marked by a speech of over an hour by the new M.P., who gracefully acknowledge the honor conferred upon him and his appreciation of being returned unopposed. Mr. White covered much the same ground as in his addresses of the past week at Lansdowne and Gananoque, and received a most attentive hearing from the audience of nearly 300 present. George Taylor, Rev. S. J. Robins, John Webster, M.P., and Rev. Frank Chisholm spoke briefly.

The last mentioned, a former Liberal candidate for Leeds, and still a staunch member of that party, spoke at the invitation of the chairman, John R. Dargavel, M.P.P. The veteran Methodist preacher, speaking for the Liberals, desired that it should be made plain that Mr. White was not opposed for lack of a candidate, but rather as a matter of courtesy to a Cabinet Minister.

Mr. White came to Brockville last evening and left shortly afterwards for Ottawa.

The Liberals of Brockville riding have called a convention for the 13th inst., to select a candidate for the provincial elections.

MEN IN THE CHURCH

On Sunday night in St. Paul's church Rev. Mr. Pogue gave a very forcible sermon on the Work of the Church as a Man's work. Mr. Pogue recounted the many movements in the church which were initiated and supported by men alone, and pointed out that some of the biggest business men of the world were at the head of these men's movements. There is a great deal to be said for the need of awakening the men of the land to a realization that church work is a work worthy of the greatest manhood.

Apart from the question of religion, does it not stand to reason that the strengthening and spreading of the influence of Christianity on the world is a great work, a work worthy of the efforts of the keenest business intellects of the age? We go through this life but once. When we come to the end, shall we wish it said of us that we were so concentrated in self, so steeped in our materialism that we were unable to leave in the world more than a pot of gold, and perhaps an untarnished name? A writer—if our memory is correct, it was Bruyere—has said that the greatest happiness and contentment in this world consists in being chiefly concerned about promoting the happiness of others. There is much truth in this, and while each man faces the duty of providing for himself and those dependent on him, and safeguarding their interests at every turn, why should he neglect to keep an interested eye on the higher welfare of his neighbors?

The great majority of men are not unsympathetic toward the church and its movements as a regulating force on the world. They are willing to say "That is good. We hope you succeed." But they do not remember that it is some of their effort in the same good cause, which lends invaluable assistance to the work. If seventy-five men out of every hundred were concerned about doing something for the betterment or the elevation of their fellows, and were willing to put just a little energy each into that work, how soon would the standard of life advance! Business men and professional men, and men in whatever category they may be, can find something to do in the church or out of it, to help make this a better world for humanity at large, and be the richer themselves in character for the effort.

THE HALL MEETING

The Examiner's report of the Hall meeting on Saturday night reveals two curious features. One is the fact that Mr. Hall and his associates confined themselves entirely to a discussion of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and that not a word was said about the power business.

Of course it is not to be expected that Mr. Hall et al would undertake to tell about school books, and the cost being cut in half; about Hon. W. J. Hanna's great humanitarian prison scheme where offenders are treated as men and not as criminals, recovering many of them into the ranks of honest men and good citizens. It is not to be expected that Mr. Hall and his assistant hood-winkers would tell the public about Whitney's [illegible] the hydro-electric power policy to Peterborough district; or that Whitney put a stop to the steals and the scandals that disgraced the Ross administration, etc., etc.

Mr. Hall is possibly not aware that the election is not being run entirely on the question of a Workmen's Compensation act. This has been seized on as a political "steer"—to divert attention from the great general record of the Whitney administration. The workingmen of Peterborough who know Mr. Hall, however, should be able to classify his wondrous zeal in their cause, without undue effort.

Mr. Hall has been a power corporation and other corporation man all his life. His interests are those which are directly opposed to the labor unions, to the workingmen in general seeking to better their condition. Does not it seem like a conversion at one of the old Methodist revivals—this beautiful right-about-face which the Liberal candidate is perpetrating!

There could have been no more conclusive evidence of the utter weakness of the opposition and the lack of real ground for complaint against the government that only a couple of subjects were touched on by the Liberal speakers. Unless they want to ring changes on the same old tune all the time, they will have to face the question; "What on earth am I to talk about? Where is there some real flaw in the Whitney record by which I can make an impression?" There could not have been a better illustration of the entire failure of the Liberals to advance anything really big or worth while than this Hall meeting.

As regards the Workmen's Compensation Act, Mr. Peck has said that if elected he will do what he can to get it brought into line with the legislation adopted by England and Germany. If the workingmen of Peterborough really want a change in this, Mr. Peck is the man to do it, because as an opposition man Mr. Hall would be instantly bowled out.

OLD GLORY IN PICTURES

There has been considerable comment on the American side because the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors has refused to pass some films that unduly glorified "Old Glory" and were derogatory to the Union Jack. Canadians have been subject to the flag-waving of the Americans through moving pictures, on the stage, and in many other ways. As a matter of fact, when Canada is so deluged with Americanisms, it is a wonder that it has remained so staunchly British.

It is gratifying to know that Canadians as a rule have enough common sense not to have "flag incidents" and that they can afford to pass in silence the "Stars and Stripes business." But some of the moving pictures that Canadians have objected to are objectionable from every standpoint. They are harmful to the young Canadians who see them, because they are wantonly misrepresentative of British habits and institutions. The censors are certainly justified in rejecting the "yellow" films, because the exhibition of such films in Canada could only have the effect of arousing an anti-American sentiment which Canadians should be above exhibiting.

Following is a letter in the New York Sun, from a subscriber, protesting against the Americanism shown in these pictures, and showing how utterly disagreeable these films must be to Canadians:

"Many dispatches from Canada distort the main issues of the campaign there that is being waged against moving picture films from the United States. One picture shown recently was called "A Mother of '76." While the mother weeps over her first-born killed in battle, her younger son of 12 seizes a rifle, gets on a cliff overlooking the British camp, and picks out the officers as they sit before their tents. As the frantic mother searches the valley for her boy, the British locate the smoke of his rifle and fire a volley at the crest. Clutching his throat in hideous convulsions, the lad falls over the cliff and lands at his mother's feet. She rushes home with the body and is weeping over it when a party of red-coats take up the trail of blood and follow it to the house, where an officer drags the mother roughly from the son's body and flings her to the floor. The boy is provided with rifles, when they find he is dead they drive the mother to the cellar for drink. So she poisons the wine. They then force her to drink with them, and in a moment all are writhing in a hideous heap on the floor, while in a sudden rift in the clouds above is seen the British flag hauled down, their general giving up his sword, and at the same time the Stars and Stripes are hoisted.

I hold that patriotism is poorly cloaked in such a revolting picture. There are scores of others on just this order, and they are certainly a direct insult to anyone of British blood and an insult to intelligence anywhere. This same boy actor in another scene is beaten and executed by a British officer for helping a rebel. Now Canadians don't forget that Loyalists were very cruelly treated by the American revolutionists and Canadians have not forgotten the signal victories which they gained against the revolutionary invaders, even if American histories have."

Student Is Arrested.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—Ross Courtney, 174 Robert street, a student at the university, fearing that a Canadian Express Co.'s wagon strolling down Yonge street on Saturday evening would probably knock some one down and perhaps do them bodily injury, stepped from the sidewalk and seizing the horse's bridle brought the animal to a stop.

Policeman Wilson stopped at the same moment, and then started ahead, leading the young student towards Court street station. Other young fellows belonging to the university paraded noisily behind the officer. When on Toronto street, Alexander Macdonald, 72 Prince Arthur street, tried to enthuse the followers into an attack on the cop.

An attempt was made, in which Wilson lost his helmet, and as a sequel Macdonald lost his liberty. The lost helmet was recovered in a somewhat dilapidated condition in one of the university residences.

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—In another wild flurry wheat to-day sold lower than at any time since the government began suit against the U. S. Steel Corporation. The chief cause of the break in price was a false report that a federal indictment had been returned against the Armour Grain Co. as the result of an alleged corner in wheat. At the close the market was comparatively steady, but at a net decline of 1c to 1 1-2c and 1 5-8c. Corn showed a loss of 3-8c to 1-2c from Saturday night. Oats finished unchanged to 1-8c and 1-4c off and hog products at an advance of a nickel to a dime.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d to ¼d lower than Saturday on wheat, and ⅛d higher on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged, Berlin ½c lower, and Budapest ½c lower.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 4 were 2700 cattle, 3800 sheep and lambs, 4300 hogs and 675 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1800 cattle, 2000 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 300 calves.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for butchers' cattle, and prices ruled 10c per 100 pounds lower than a week ago, which was due to the increased supplies which came forward from Ontario points.

The gathering of buyers on the market was fairly large, including some from Quebec, and, as they all wanted some beef, the demand was fair, and a moderately active trade was done.

Choice steers sold at $6.00 to $6.30; good at $5.65 to $7.25; fairly good at $5.50 to $5.60; fair at $5 to $5.25, and the lower grades at $4 to $4.75 per 100 pounds.

On the other hand, the market for canning stock was stronger, owing to the increased demand from packers for supplies of such, and sales of bulls were made at an advance of 10c to 25c per 100 pounds, at $3 to $3.50, and cows were 25c to 50c higher, at $1.75 to $2.00 per 100 pounds.

Since this day week a stronger feeling has developed in the market for hogs, and prices have advanced 50c to 60c per 100 pounds. Supplies were large this morning, but this was offset by the good demand from packers, and an active trade was done in selected lots, at $6.40 to $6.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. Heavy hogs and sows sold at $1 per 100 pounds less than the above quotations.

The condition of the market for small meats was unchanged. The offerings were large, but prices were fully maintained in a good demand from butchers and packers, consequently an active trade was done, with sales of lambs at $5.25 to $5.50, and sheep $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $4 to $15 each, as to quality.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

MEXICO IN '42

By D. Lewis

He saw no reason for those being left to lie there, but a good one against it; so, stooping cautiously forward, he gathered up all, stowing them away in his pockets. Then turning and taking hold of the halter, with as little noise as possible, he hoisted himself up to the crest of the cliff.

The soldiers engrossed with their game, and the dwarf, though but a spectator, having also become interested in it — none of the three either saw or heard him. And the last he heard of them as he stole silently away was the corporal delightedly calling out—

"The dagger's mine, darling Perico!"

CHAPTER XLV

A Series of Surprises.

When Jose reached home he went straight into the patio. There he encountered Pepita; soon as he set eyes on her, asking:

"Where are the senoritas?"

"What's that to you?" saucily retorted the maid.

"Nothing, if I only knew they were safe."

"Safe! Why, what's the man thinking — talking about? Have you lost your senses?"

"No, Pepita. But the ladies have lost something. Look here!"

Gliding swiftly forward, she recognized every article at a glance, amazement overspreading her countenance.

"What does it all mean, Jose?" she exclaimed.

"Just what I want to know myself, and why I am asking after the senoritas. But where are they?",

"In the garden, or the grounds somewhere.

"Pray God, they're still alive! Come with me, Pepita. Let us look for them. I have terrible fears."

Side by side they hastened toward the ornamental grounds. But they had not far to go before hearing sounds that set their minds at rest — the voices of the ladies themselves. They were not only alive, but laughing.

To Jose and Pepita this seemed strange as anything else—a perfect mystery. But if their behaviour mystified their servants, not less were they themselves puzzled when Jose presented himself before them.

"I ask your pardon for intruding, but don't these belong to your ladyships?"

They saw their watches and other effects obtained from them by "false pretenses," as they soon learned.

The treachery of the hunchback and his intentions were manifest. He meant to guide Santander and his soldiers to the old monastery, where they would take the patriots by surprise.

"What is to be done, Isabel?" despairingly asked the Donna Luisa. "How can we give them warning?"

To which the groom, not the countess, made answer:

"I am to do that, senorita."

His confident tone reassured them; more still his making known the design he had already conceived and his ability to execute it.

It needed not their united appeal to urge him to immediate departure. He was off the instant after, and long before the clock of Talpam had struck the midnight hour he was well up the mountain road with eyes looking to the right, in the direction of the Cerro Ajusco.

CHAPTER XLVI

Monks No More.

The goings on in the old monastery were of an unusual kind. There were some 50 men in it; but not one of them now affected either the garb or the behavior of the monk. All were in warlike guise.

It had got to be midnight, and they were still in the midst of the revelry, when Rivas, who headed the table, rose to his feet in that formal manner which tells of speech to be made or toast proclaimed.

"Comrades," he said, as soon as the buzz of conversation had ended. "This dispatch I hold in my hand is from an old friend, Gen. Alvarez, who is as brave a soldier and pure a patriot as any in the land. He tells me his men are ready for a rising, and only wait for us, with some others he has summoned to join him in the revolution. By his messenger I have sent answer that we, too, are ready, and will respond to his summons. You all approve of that, I take it?"

"All," was the exclaim in chorus, without a dissenting voice.

"Moreover," proceeded the speaker, "I've told the general we'll be on the march tomorrow morning, and can meet him at a place he has mentioned the day after. His plan is to attack the town of Oaxaca; and, if we succeed in taking it, then we move direct on the capital. Now, comrades, I've nothing more to say, only that you're to scatter after your horses and lose no time in mustering again — the old rendez-vous, this side La Guarda."

So ended the speech of the leader; but despite the suggestions of immediate departure, the circle around the table did not instantly break up.

There was yet a toast to follow, the same which always wound up their festivals. Their leader, as often before, now again pronounced it:

"Patria y Libertad!"

And never before did it have more enthusiastic reception, and a cheer rang through the old convent, louder than any ever heard before.

Ere it had ceased reverberating, the door was suddenly pushed open, and a man rushed into the room, as he entered, crying out.

"Treason!"

"Treason!" echoed 50 voices as one, all again starting to their feet, and turning faces towards the alarmist. The major-domo it was, who, as the other warriors, was half equipped for a journey.

"What mean you, Gregorio?" demanded his master.

"There's one can tell you better than I, Don Ruperto."

"Who? Where is he?"

"Outside, senor. A messenger who has just come up — he's from San Augustin."

"But how has he passed our sentry?"

"Ah! captain, I'd rather he told you himself."

"Call him hither!" commanded Rivas.

No calling was needed, the person spoken of being close by, and Gregorio, again opening the door, drew him inside.

It was Jose, though Rivas and the Texans knew not his name. Only the note of the condesa's, saying that he could be trusted.

Announced as a messenger, neither the captain nor Florence Kearney needed telling who sent him. An intuition told them that. Rivas but asked:

"How have you found the way up here?"

"Senor, I've been here before — many's the time. I was born among these mountains — am well acquainted with all the paths everywhere around."

"But the sentry below? How did you get past him? You haven't the countersign!"

"He wouldn't have heard it if I had, senor. He'll never hear countersign again — nor anything else."

"Why? Explain yourself!"

"He is dead! He lies at the bottom of the cliff, his body crushed—"

"Who has done it? Who's betrayed us" interrupted a volley of voices.

"The hunchback, Zorillo," answered Jose, to the astonishment of all. For in the dialogue between the dwarf and Santander, he had heard enough to anticipate the ghastly spectacle awaiting him on his way up the mountain.

Cries of anger and vengeance were simultaneously sent up; all were eager to rush from the room. They but waited for a word more.

Rivas, however suspecting that the messenger meant that word for himself, claimed their indulgence and led him outside, inviting Kearney to accompany them

CHAPTER XLVII

"Only Empty Bottles"

About the time the patriots were burying their comrade in the cemetery of the convent the gate of San Antonio was opened to permit the passage of a squadron of Hussars going outward from the city. There were about 200 of them, in formation "by fours", — the wide causeway allowing ample room for even 10 abreast.

At their head rode Col. Santander with Maj. Ramirez by his side, other officers being distributed along the line.

The parley was brief, and quick the action which accompanied it.

"Into your saddle, corporal," commanded the colonel. "Take [illegible] closely up behind you, and bring it along."

[illegible] spot their guide passed with something like a shudder. It was here he had appropriated the dagger taken from a dead body. His shuddering was not due to that, but to fear from a different cause. The body was no longer there. Those who dwell above must have been down and borne it away. They would now be on the alert, and at any moment he might hear the cracking of carbines — a volley; perhaps feel the avenging bullet!

Santander was himself irresolute, and would willingly have turned back. But Ramirez, a man of more mettle, at the point of his sword commanded the hunchback to keep on, and the cowardly colonel dare not revoke the order without eternally disgracing himself.

They had no danger to encounter, though they did not know it. Neither vidette nor sentinel was stationed there now; and, without challenge or obstruction, they reached the platform on which the building stood.

There was a summons to surrender, which received no response. Repeated louder and a carbine fired, the result was the same.

When the Hussar colonel, with a dozen of his men, at length screwed up courage to burst in the doorway, they saw but the evidence of late occupancy in the fragments of a supper, with some dozens of wine bottles, empty as the building itself.

Disappointed as were the soldiers at finding them so, still more was their commanding officer that his hated enemies had again escaped him.

He was not the only one of the party who felt disappointed at the failure of the expedition. Its guide had reason to be chagrined, too, for not only had he lost the goods obtained under false pretenses, but the hope of reward for his volunteered services.

Still the dwarf had another arrow in his quiver — kept in reserve for reasons of his own — a shaft from which he expected more profit than all yet spent. And as the Hussar colonel was swearing and raging around, he saw his opportunity to discharge it.

I have no use for the loafer who goes about telling how liberal he would be if he had an industrious man's money.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. Frank Emsley, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration.

Another Railway Strike?

London, Nov. 6.—The joint executive committee of the railroad trade unions, which has been in session for several days, to decide its attitude towards the findings of the royal commission, Saturday determined to take a ballot of the members of the union on the question of whether they would accept the commission's report or strike on the demand for a complete recognition of their unions.

The ballot papers are returnable on Dec. 5. The enginemen as a rule seem to be opposed to a strike, but the other railroad employes appear determined to force the crisis.

Grain Vessels Stalled.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Nov. 6.—Six steamers and nine barges, all laden to full capacity with grain for Montreal, are held up by low water in the lifting lock of the St. Lawrence Canal. Work in lightering the half-million bushels of grain to vessels of less draught has begun, as there is no prospect of normal water, and the navigation season is drawing to a close.

Detective Shot Two Men.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 7.—Wm. J. Walter, aged 40, of Paducah, Ky., was shot and killed and Robert Finley, aged 41 his companion, was probably fatally wounded Sunday evening in a quarrel with Detective William Wilson. Wilson is locked up.

Murder and Suicide.

Boston, Nov. 6.—Drawing a revolver when he met his two young daughters on a street in Winthrop early Saturday afternoon, Ludwig E. Jaeger, a book agent, shot and killed the children, and turning the weapon on himself, inflicted a wound which caused his death two hours later.

Witnesses of the tragedy rushed to the aid of the little ones, who, with their father, were removed to the hospital. The children, Olly, aged 5, and Anita, 4 years old, died within a short time.

The cause of the shooting is thought to be domestic troubles. Mrs. Jaeger divorced her husband in this city last year and she re-married. Jaeger was born in Germany 30 years ago.

Furniture Ablaze.

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 6.—Fire broke out in a load of furniture which Richard Simmons of Blenheim was moving to Chatham Saturday afternoon and completely destroyed the whole load before it could be extinguished. Simmons had to leap hurriedly from the top of the load and unhitch his horses. In a few moment furniture and wagon were reduced to ashes. Simmons does not know what caused the fire, as there were no matches anywhere in the load. He was severely burned about the face and hands.

Newspaper Office Burned.

Halifax, Nov. 7.—Fire here at eight o'clock yesterday morning destroyed the building of The Standard Printing Co., Ltd., from which office The Evening News, The Standard, and Guysboro Times is published. The building was completely gutted, and the splendidly equipped plant was badly damaged by water.

Used Dirks at Christening.

Brantford, Nov. 7.—Stanley Majurska is under arrest here charged with feloniously wounding two Poles at a Sunday christening on Strickland avenue. Peter Clonk had his nose partially removed, and John Schalz an arm badly gashed in the brawl. Dirks were used freely.

Sifton in the Senate.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—The name of Hon. Clifford Sifton is mentioned in connection with the vacancy created in the Senate by the death of Sir John Carling.

Killed by Lamp Explosion.

Kingston, Nov. 7.—Francis Showman, [illegible], died in the general hospital from injuries received in a lamp explosion. He was 70 years of age.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

REV. GEORGE OSBORNE TROOP

Rev. Mr. Troop, rector of St. Martin's Anglican Church, Montreal, was born in 1854 at Bridgetown, Nova Scotia, where his father, William Henry Troop, was a barrister-at-law. Following on the educational days of youth he passed on to King's College, Windsor, N.S., was ordained curate in 1877 and priest in 1878. During the years 1877-81 the Rev. gentleman was curate of St. Paul's, Halifax, in 1882-86, rector of St. James Church, St. John, N.B., and in the latter year was appointed to the Montreal charge.

Rev. Mr. Troop has as one of his recreations "walking" and as he takes strong active interest in Church work amongst the submerged tenth of Canada's Commercial Capital, this particular piece of robust manhood proves distinctly useful.

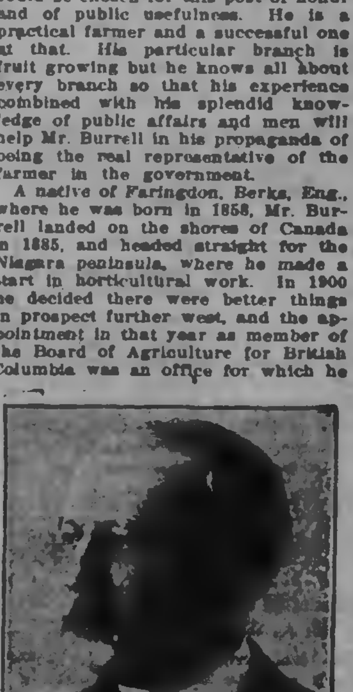
REV. GEORGE OSBORNE TROOP,
St. Martin's Anglican Church,
Montreal.

HON. MARTIN BURRELL

With the selection of Mr. Martin Burrell as holder of the Agricultural portfolio, there goes on record for the second time only, the appointment of an English-born member of the House to the Canadian Cabinet. The first to be thus honored was Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Mr. Martin Burrell is probably the best man that could be chosen for this post of honor and of public usefulness. He is a practical farmer and a successful one at that. His particular branch is fruit growing but he knows all about every branch so that his experience combined with his splendid knowledge of public affairs and men will help Mr. Burrell in his propaganda of being the real representative of the farmer in the government.

A native of Faringdon, Berks, Eng., where he was born in 1858, Mr. Burrell landed on the shores of Canada in 1885, and headed straight for the Niagara peninsula, where he made a start in horticultural work. In 1900 he decided there were better things in prospect further west, and the appointment in that year as member of the Board of Agriculture for British Columbia was an office for which he was pre-eminently fitted. During 1907-8 he was in England as Fruit Commissioner and lecturer for the British Columbian Government, and the large flow of immigration that has gone wat from the Old Country's farming sections was no doubt, in large measure due to his untiring energy during his two years itinerary.

The Hon. gentleman is married, and resides at Grand Forks, B.C.



HON. MARTIN BURRELL,
Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion.

CAPT. JOS. H. PATTERSON

A Federal Veteran of 1866

Capt. Patterson, president of the Federal Veterans of 1866-70 Association, was born on Rideau Street, Ottawa, in the early forties, and at the age of 38 he went to the United States, where he lived for thirty years in New York being then in the manufacturing business. But before he left Canada the Fenian raids of 1866-70 called him to service with Her Majesty's troops, and he served through three campaigns, 1865-66-70.

In 1865, when 22 years of age, he went out with the Ottawa Rifles stationed at Prescott. In 1866 he was on the flying column and stationed at Cornwall, and in 1870 he was attached to Col. Forsyth's Ottawa Field Battery, in operations about Lake Huron.

Since the captain returned to Canada in 1903, he has lived in Ottawa, and is very well known in that city.

THE LIGHT-HOUSE KEEPER'S STORY.

FROM the lighthouse at Lobster Cove Head, Bonne Bay, Newfoundland, Mrs. W. Young sends her experience of Zam-Buk.

She says: "I suffered with eczema for seven years and to my great delight Zam-Buk has cured me. The disease started on my breast, and spread until it extended over my back. The itching and burning—especially when the affected parts were warm—was terrible; and yet when the eruption was scratched or rubbed, it turned to bad sores and caused great pain. I went to a doctor and tried various prescriptions, but seemed to get no benefit, so tried another doctor. Again I got no relief, so tried a third doctor, and then a fourth.

"Seven years is a long time to suffer, and I had got used to the thought that I never would be cured, when I saw a report in the Family Herald, telling how beneficial Zam-Buk was in cases of skin disease.

"I bought some Zam-Buk, and from the use of the very first box I saw it was going to do me good. I persevered with it, and the improvement it worked in my condition was really wonderful.

"It eased the irritation, stopped the pain, and the sores began to dry up and disappear. In short, I found Zam-Buk all that was claimed for it and within a very short time it worked a complete cure in my case.

"Since that time I have recommended it for several other cases, and in each it has proved its wonderful merit.

HAVE YOU EVER

After retiring for the night, thought of your forgotten fire insurance policy, which had expired that day, and had not been renewed?

How quickly you'd spring to the telephone, call up the agent, and make matters right till morning in fear that fire might wipe out your accumulations.

Yet how often have you retired to woo the sleep of the just, with no life insurance and it never crossed your mind seriously that ere morn the heart might stop beating, and with it, the whole earning power of both brain and hand yet your property may never burn, but your heart will surely cease to beat some time. It's strange, is it not?

Then why not insure your life at once?

The Sun Life of Canada issues all the modern forms of life assurance at the lowest rates, consistent with ample security, and are giving settlements that should satisfy the most exacting.

THE CORRECTION OF DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT

It is very important that you have implicit faith in the ability of the Specialist who fits you with Glasses, since there are several important features which must be left solely to his ability and honor.

You cannot possibly appreciate the quality of lenses furnished, and yet on this feature depends the degree of satisfaction to be obtained from the use of glasses. In our Optical work we frequently find people wearing inferior and imperfect lenses, for which they have paid a full price. We will not economize in this department of our business, for we always insist on furnishing the best material at prices that are reasonable.

We believe you will be satisfied with the prices asked in our Optical Department, and know that you will be pleased with the results obtained.

DROP IN RUBBER DOES NOT MEAN CHEAP RUBBERS

Price of Raw Material Decreases Fifteen per Cent

The price of rubber has dropped fifteen per cent. but, according to a prominent dealer of this city, this will not affect the price of footwear for several months, probably not until next spring. This is due to the fact that all this year's stock has been sold to the retail merchants at a certain price, which could not be lowered for some time.—Ottawa Citizen.

A Review representvtive inquired of a couple of local rubber footwear dealers to-day regarding the rubber question, and asertained that the reported drop in price would not likely affect the present price of rubber footwear in this city. The majority of the deaalers have goods on order for all the coming season, and while they are given the advantage of a certain percentage off the price list of their order, should a decrease occur, it would not be felt for a considerable period. At any rate, no change as far known will occur in prices of rubber footwear in Peterborough.

One dealer said that the use of rubbers was to some extent decreasing, owing to the preference of both men and women in buying heavy soled boots, which to a great extent make rubbers unnecessary.

SPLENDID TIME AT ST. ANDREW'S

Normalites and Girls From Y. W. C. A. Were Entertained

The lecture room of St. Andrews church was the scene of a charming social event last evening which atoned somewhat for the disagreeable weather which prevailed outside. This drawback however, failed to prevent a goodly number of the Normal school students, Y.W.C.A. girls and other visitors being present at the reception, which was given in their honor by the Young People's Association, of St. Andrew's, who entertained their guests with first class skill, and in a manner that could hardly have been improved upon.

The evening's program was delightfully rendered, and was replete with new ideas and novel methods for the promotion of a friendly association between all present. That these objects were fulfilled was the unanimous opinion of all who attended.

Rev. James Rollins, the pastor of the church, in the capacity of chairman, was responsible for a goodly share of the enjoyment, his wittiness cropping up continually, in hte shape of jokes and catchy remarks.

The guessing contest which was introduced was a decided success, every body entering into the idea with enthusiasm.

The musical courtship, conducted by Herbert C. Treneer, the gifted blind musician was an altogether new and all round success and provided bushels of fun for the gathering.

The remainder of the program was as follows—

Piano Solo—Herbert C. Treneer.
Solo—Miss Olive Howell.
Reading—J. John. (Encored.)

The prizes in the guessing contest were won by Miss D. Langford and J. John, and the "booby" prize fell to Miss Mary Sutcliffe and Edgar Dellabey.

Miss McCalla, on behalf of the Y.W.C.A young ladies present, appropriately acknowledged the gratitude of the girls for the kind invitation to be present and for the enjoyment they had partaken of in the evening's entertainment, and inviting the young men to the Y.W.C.A. for supper on Sunday evening.

Refreshments were introduced during the evening, and the reception was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

LOST 45 POUNDS IN WEIGHT

NOW WEIGHS 125 POUNDS, THANKS TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

PLANTAGENET, ONT. Jan. 31st. 1910.

"About March 1st. 1909, I was taken deathly sick with Liver Congestion and Stomach Trouble. I failed from 125 pounds to 80 pounds and was confined to bed for eight weeks. The doctors said they could do nothing for me, and as a last resort, one of the doctors told me to try "Fruit-a-tives"—if they would not cure me, nothing would.

My husband bought some "Fruit-a-tives" and inside of ten days, I was able to leave my bed. My stomach got strong and I could eat and retain my food. Today, I weigh 125 pounds".

NO TROUBLE AT LOCAL LIBRARY

Officials Are Pleased With Co-operation of the Members

Toronto, Nov. 7.—At the last meeting of the Public Library Board, the secretary-treasurer reported that he was having difficulty in getting in books and fines from certain borrowers, some of whom ignore all appeals and others promise, but do not carry out their promises. The board decided to enter action for recovery against these persons. It is of the opinion that the prosecution of a few offenders will have a wholesome effect on others. If a book is not returned within fourteen days after the prescribed time an additional charge of twenty-five cents may be made for collection, and if the book is not returned within six weeks after issue, legal proceedings may immediately be taken to recover it, with all fines and charges. A collector has been engaged and is now drumming up the recalcitrants.

Inquiry at the local Public Library is answered with the statement that the people of Peterborough have co-operated with the officials is highly satisfactory. Only one book has been lost, but the particulars of the case are exceptional. "Our work is running along in an extremely smooth manner," was the statement made to a Review query.

There, however, is one complaint, that of the practice of clippings being taken from the magazzines. This, of course, is not proper, and perhaps is done unthinkingly.

EVIDENCE WAS INSUFFICIENT

No Conviction in Case of Common Assault

The Bishop and Lindsay common assault charge was dismissed at county court yesterday morning by Magistrate Edmison, owing to insufficient evidence to warrant a conviction.

The alleged assault seemed to have had several aspects. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, the former of whom is partially dumb, live in one half of a little shack in Harvey renting the other portion to a family by the name of Lindsay. The first two, so the evidence showed, warmed up on Sunday October 29th. Hot words were exchanged and Mrs. Bishop struck her husband on the head with a slate upon which they kept record of household expenses. In a melee which ensued the two stumbled through the door leading into the Lindsay half of the humble cot. Mr. Lindsay, it seems tried to act the peace maker but was rewarded for his pains by getting a few of the blows himself. Bishop however, when the temporary storm had blown over laid a charge of assault against Lindsay, apparently for his interference.

W. H. Moore, K. C., appeared for the Lindsay family, while R. E. Attorney Wood was present for the crown. His Worship registered the costs of the case against Bishop.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

DIDN'T START THERE

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir—I beg to contradict the statement in your paper of November 3 about the Bethany fire starting in my shop.

I was told on the best of authority that when I was found not at the fire that an effort was made to get into my shop. The flames were only then coming through the partition between my shop and T. R. Jackson's store house. It also stands to reason, if the fire had started in my shop Levi Sisson would not have been able to have saved anything as there was only a quarter of an inch board partition between his shop and mine. He saved almost all of his stuff, and if I had have been on time, I might have saved all or nearly all of my stuff whereas I did not save one cent's worth. Also the town hall would have been one of the first to burn as my shop was next the town hall and there was a strong west gale blowing at the time, directly to the hall and away from T. R. Jackson's grocery and butcher shop, while they were in a flame from the first call of fire. Where the fire started is a mystery, but I feel certain it never was in my shop, so I would be much obliged if you would correct this statement. I closed my shop at half past 10 o'clock and there was not the slighest sign of fire then as I had taken a careful look around.

Yours truly,

ALEX MONK

MR. H. P. KENNEDY IN SYNDICATE TO PURCHASE WESTERN LAND

Block of 800 Acres Near Edmonton Is Secured, The Price Being $400,000—Deal Looks Like Good One

Special to the Review.

Stettler, Alberta, Nov. 7.—H. P. Kennedy, of Peterborough, is one of the principals in a syndicate that has purchased 830 acres of land just east of Edmonton. The price for the whole block of land is said to be $400,000. The deal has been spoken of as being one sure to make the buyers a lot of money as the influx into Edmonton district is perhaps the heaviest in the west.

WITH THE DEER HUNTERS

Mr. John I. Mervin, the Hunter street butcher, received a consignment of four deer from the Ketcheum Lake Hunt Club yesterday. They are fine specimens and were about the first to arrive in the city.

The club reports a good season's sport, the four deer having been shot last week. Mr. Harry Winch, captain of the party, is credited with causing one of the quartet to bite the dust and Mr. Robert Gibbs shot one of the others.

Mr. R. J. Munro joined the party on Sunday last. The main body of hunters will not be home for a week yet though some may come near the week-end.

EAGLE LAKE CLUB.

Mr. T. C. Westlake, of the Mann Lumber Co., returned on Saturday night from Eagle Lake, where he spent the past week with the Eagle Lake Hunt Club, of which he is a member.

Though the deer are exceptionally scarce everyone is having a good time and expect to bring home the regulation number. The partridge are very plentiful but have been hunted so much that they are easily frightened and hard to get.

Up to Saturday morning a large buck and doe were all that had crossed the tracks of the watchers and Messrs Harry Gunsolus and A. C. Mitchell bagged both. Eagle Lake was the scene of the catch.

There are eleven in the party at present, which is not expected home until the evening of Nov. 15th.

WORK AMONG RUSSIANS

When the World's Baptist Convention met in Philadelphia in June, forty Russian exiles were brought from overseas. Some of these bore the marks of stripes and chains which they had endured because of their Christianity, some of them were under bonds to be returned to the mines of Siberia. The story of persecution is one of intense interest and those who enjoy the freedom of this country are most ready to accept the Gospel of Christ as it is preached to them Rev. John Kolesnkoff, a Russian Baptist minister, speaks of his work at the open meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society in Murray street church to-night. The public are invited. There will be no charge for admission.

"THE TOWN MARSHAL"

The next attraction at the Grand next Saturday, matinee and evening, is O. E. Wee's production of "The Town Marshal," a rural comedy drama of much merit and power to both amuse and entertain the theatregoing public. The play is built around an idea more distinct and forceful, than on which most plays pivot. It is a play for the thoughtful. It has a peculiar power of seeming to appeal to each person who sees it, as being written directly at him or her.

"The Town Marshall," is a picturesque play, a romance with plenty of ideas, a little pathos and comedy, in fact a little of everything. A worthy successor to "The Olde Homestead."

WHO'S COMING AND GOING

Miss Aggie Davis has entered Nicholls hospital as nurse in training.

Misses Bessie Gillespie and Ethel Hill went to Port Hope to-day to represent the Park Street Baptist church at the A.Y.P.U. rally which is being held there.

Mr. Will Morrison, who has been attending T.C.S., is spending a few days at his home in the city.

Mr. R. McGill Hood, representing Palter Bros., Toronto, returned to the city last evening from his semi-annual trip, covering a period of three months. Mr. Hood had a very successful trip from a business standpoint. While absent he met many Peterborough people, all of whom appear to be doing well in the west.

The friends of Dr. and Mrs. Langfeldt will sympathise with them in the sickness of their little daughter, Dorothy, who contracted scarlet fever last Friday. Dr. Langfeldt and family have only recently moved into their new rectory. They will be quarantined for five weeks.

PAINFUL INJURIES

Mr. "Bob" Hay met with painful injuries yesterday when he tripped and fell to the concrete floor at the Cereal works.

His face was cut and bruised most painfully, and his friends will extend sympathy in the unfortunate affair. It was the first day at a new position.

ANGUS POINTER LOOKS THE GOODS

What Ed. Baker Has to Say of Well Known Horse

A writer in the Toronto Star Weekly, Ed. Baker, has the following to say of Angus Pointer:

Of all the green pacers uncovered during the dying days of this season, the brown stallion, Angus Pointer, Jr., that won this week at Dufferin Park, looks the best, and no good line on him was obtained for the reason that he raced half mile heats only, but as he is by Sidney Pointer, 2.07 1-4, and out of a mare by Hal Dillard, 2.01 3-4, sire of the great Hal B., 2.04 1-2, he should not be "soft," for Sidney Pointer and his family are known as game horses, and the mingling of that blood with that of the Dillards should have a tendency to offset any shortcomings the latter might have.

Angus Pointer, Jr., was given his pleasant name presumably on account of being by the same horse as the dead Angus Pointer, 2.01 3-4, and if he develops into a horse anywhere as good as his namesake he will do, for Angus the first was one of the very best of the race nags.

The present candidate for pacing honors is owned by Mr. F. J. Daly, of Peterborough, a man well known in the horse world, and he is in the stable of Charlie Barrett, the Parkhill horseman.

That the horse will not suffer any by being in Barrett's hands is fully recognized by those familiar with this reinsman's career, and it is an assured fact that this trainer and driver will get out of the horse all there is to get.

Barrett has been in the front rank of Canadian horsemen for many years. His annual campaigns with the old hero Wisdom King, 2.15 1-4, is fresh in the memories of harness horse followers, and his subsequent handling of the trotting mare, Mattie Bryson, 2.14 1-4, stamped him as being capable of doing more than train a hoppled pacer. He took Mattie Bryson during the fall of 1909, after she had been a comparative failure in other hands and won a number of good races on the ice with her, after which, during the succeeding turf season, he swept the stake events in Michigan and Ohio fairly clean, meeting with but few checks in her onward march.

When that season began, Mattie Bryson was eligible to the slowest class on any race program, and when she returned in the fall to the stable of her owner, James Prunty, up in the big game country, South River, she had a record of 2.14 1-4, made on a half-mile track, and I do not know of any other Canadian-bred trotter that has accomplished this the first season out.

Angus Pointer, Jr., looks like a good horse, and if reports about the things he has done are reliable, he certainly is a good horse, for they say he has shown a half in 1.03 over a very ordinary track, and his blood lines will almost warrant him going the route.

VARSITY OR COLLEGE ?

Final Game for Intercollegiate Honors Next Saturday

Peterborough Rugby fans will be interested in the game next Saturday by which the Inter-collegiate championship will be decided at the Varsity Stadium, when Ottawa College and Varsity meet in the final game of the union. Each team have only lost one game, and have only one to hear from. Ottawa College rooters have asked for 200 reserved seats, which means they will not lack for supporters.

On the College fourteen are Frank Heffernan and Dick Sheehy, while Vernon Hayes has had the honor of subbing on several occasions. Pete Campbell is working at quarter for Varsity. At this distance it looks like Varsity to win.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

JAMES S. BRIERLEY

A native of London, Ont., where Jim Brierley was born in 1858, he served apprenticeship in the job-printing department of the Free Press, so that when in later years he came to the full estate of newspaper proprietorship, he had the confidence of a man armed with the knowledge of "all there is to it" from the initial letter [illegible]. From London young Mr. Brierley passed along to Hamilton where much office experience was gleaned, and in 1881, in conjunction with others, he acquired the St. Thomas Home Journal, of which, by the way, he ultimately became sole proprietor. The Chatham Banner was added in 1894. But Mr. Brierley aimed at higher game in the newspaper field, and in 1896 taking advantage of the opportunity on offer, he located in Montreal as vice-president, and managing director of The Herald, disposing of the Banner but retaining the Journal until a later date.

Since going to Montreal Mr Brierley has taken considerable interest in public affairs, in many connections an active personal interest apart from that of the newspaper man, in which regard, mention may be made of the prominent part taken in the Reform movement which had a culmination in the establishment of a Board of Control at the City Hall and as a result a much more efficient handling of the public business and the ratepayers cash.

JAMES S. BRIERLEY,
President of The Montreal Herald

Mr. Brierley was president of Montreal Canadian Club during 1910, the most prosperous year in its history and is director of the Canadian Associated Press, and the Canadian Press Limited. His lone recreation is Bowling on the Green.

FARQUHAR S. McLENNAN, K.C.

Another from Glengarry

Mr. F. S. McLennan, K.C., of Montreal, is another of Canada's men of light and leading who claim Glengarry as the section on which they played and fought the early days away. The senior partner of the well known legal firm of McLennan & Baker of Montreal, his preliminary education was received in the Williamstown High School and in the Brantford Collegiate Institute and graduated in the Law Faculty of McGill University as a Bachelor of Civil Law. He was admitted to the Bar of Quebec in July, 1884, and became a junior partner in the then well-known legal firm composed of Donald Macmaster, K.C., (now a member of the British House of Commons for Chertsey, Surrey), Mr. Justice Hutchinson and Mr. Recorder Weir. Mr. McLennan was an alderman in the city of Westmount for two years and filled the position of chairman of the Police Fire and Health Committee and of the Library Committee. On retiring from the Council he was appointed attorney for the city of Westmount, which office he now fills. In politics Mr. McLennan is a lifelong Conservative and is president of the Westmount Liberal-Conservative Association.

Taming Wild Birds.

It requires much patience, slow motions and frequent offerings of food to tame wild birds. Some are tamed very easily; others refuse to make friends with man. Probably the easiest of all birds to tame is the Canada jay, (also called "camp robber," "whiskey jack," or "fresh meat" bird), or the chickadee (black-capped tit-mouse). The Canada jay lives in our Canada and the mountainous regions of the western and northeastern United States. Without waiting for an introduction he will fly down to your camp spread and snatch a piece of bread or meat under your very eyes; and the slightest hint that his presence is welcome is enough to embolden him to take food from your fingers. Winter is the best time to tame chickadees, for then it is difficult for them to find enough food. Nail pieces of suet to tree trunks close to your window, place the meats of hickory nuts, pecans, English walnuts or peanuts on your window sill, and if the chickadees and white-breasted nut-hatches visit neighbouring trees they will soon find the luncheon. Robins and catbirds should be tempted with bread and milk, strawberries and cherries; while song sparrows and chipping sparrows prefer bird seed, cracker, bread or corn bread crumbs.

The widow is entitled to her third, but she must get her second first.

The hobble skirt doesn't prevent women from jumping at conclusions.

One of the greatest mistakes a man makes is in thinking he isn't going to make any.

Arthur Prime, a G.T.R. engineer, for 40 years, is dead at Brantford, aged 63.

Mrs. R. L. BORDEN,

A Charming Society Queen

In Mrs. Borden, wife of Canada's new Premier, are combined all those qualities which adorn social life. She has that dignity, grace and refinement of the ideal in hostess, and though perhaps discriminating to some extent in her social tastes, everyone is received in the Borden home on his or her merit.

The residence of the Premier elect in Ottawa, situated on Wurtemberg street, and formerly occupied by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, is arranged and furnished interiorally for the comfort of its inmates. Strangers entering that home for the first time are invariably impressed with the restful atmosphere. Refined tastes are evident throughout the house, and among the collection of paintings which adorn the walls are several skilful productions from the brush of Mrs. Borden, who is an artist of some note. She is also a clever photographer, and in preparing her pictures does all the work herself from developing to finishing Many of the best pictures of Mr. Borden, some of which have been used for publication, were snapped, developed, and completed by his wife.

Also in horticulture Mrs. Borden is an enthusiast. Her garden is beautifully designed, and most of the richest blooms on the grounds surrounding her home are personally attended to by her.

Although not actively identified with many of the charitable institutions of Ottawa, Mrs. Borden by many kind acts, has brought cheer to the sick and needy.

While resident in Halifax she worked indefatigably on what is known as the Woman's Work Exchange, an institution that has accomplished much good, especially for those of reduced circumstances. For some years now she has been on the board of governors of the Victorian Order of Nurses, and her name also appears on the membership rolls of the National Council of Women of Canada, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Aberdeen Association and the Woman's Auxiliary of the Missionary Society of the Church of England. Of the latter organization Mrs. Borden's activities have been chiefly through that branch at All Saints' Church, of which parish both she and Mr. Borden are members.

Outdoor sports also claim some of Mrs. Borden's time. A skilful golfer she has been connected with the ladies' club of Ottawa, and was honored by that body last year when the members elected her as their president.

Mrs. Borden was born at Halifax, N. S., her maiden name being Laura Bond. Her father was Thomas Henry Bond and both parents were of English extraction. Her mother, Catherine Tregallis Atkinson was a descendant of an old Cornwall family of that name. Mrs. Borden's eduaction was received in her home town.

Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains was only about 12,000 souls. Shall anyone dare to say in the face of this undertaking that Canada ever lacked faith in her destiny? Not only did Canada take over the administration of this vast empire but she pledged herself to build a railway from the Ottawa River to Puget Sound within 10 years and to people these vast wastes of virgin soil. The afflatus of an imperial inspiration Lord Dufferin called it, and spoke with restraint thereof. Before Canada could fully succeed in her task it was necessary to demonstrate to the world that her sublime faith in her land and in herself of destiny was justified. The world being busy with its own affairs this was no easy matter. At the [illegible] it was prejudiced by taking [illegible] and legends [illegible] abroad to the detriment of the country and listened willingly to the "croakers" with which we were afflicted. The United States also with its wonderful development was at this time a magnet not only for the people of the world at large but for those of Canada as well. It was not until 1885 that Canada had direct railway connection with her own West. We have shown elsewhere how the hardy settlers demonstrated the wonderful worth of the West, yet the growth was necessarily slow at first. In 1881 there were 118,706 people in the West and in 1891 260,673. The city of Winnipeg boasted of Metropolitan proportions with about 25,000 souls in its borders. By 1901 the population of the West had grown to about half a million, and in 1906 Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan boasted of nearly a million people. What will the census of 1911 show? There are five cities in Alberta and Saskatchewan in 1911 any one of which is almost as large and one or two larger than Winnipeg was in 1891. Calgary has grown marvellously, and now claims 50,000 souls. It was only about the beginning of this century that the world at large heard the call of the West. The work Canada had done could no longer be ignored. The West also had demonstrated beyond cavil that it offered opportunities such as could be held out by few lands for hardy home makers and tillers of the soil. People in all lands heard the glad news and the past ten years has seen an influx of population into this West such as has been seldom equalled anywhere. One might copy the American expression and call it "the greatest in the world". From 1881 up to almost 1901 the West had to depend almost solely on the immigration from Eastern Canada and from Britain which was small. Our estimated population today is nearly 2,000,000. The United States had almost this number of people in 1812 and during all the nineteenth century a steady stream of people passed into her borders from Britain and Europe. Her West was at her doors, not separated by a stretch of inhospitable land, and the sheer pressure from behind carried population over her plains to the Pacific Ocean. There was no equivalent pressure in the case of Canada, so that the growth of the West was very creditable even in comparison with the epic of the growth of the Western States. The half million people who spread themselves over the West before the end of the century came almost solely from the East of Canada and Great Britain. They talked so [illegible] and [illegible] of the resources of their land that the world could not choose but hear. Of recent years also Canada has ceased, in Sir William Van Horne's trenchant phrase, "doing business in a side street", but is opening out on the thoroughfares of the world. The immigration statistics show that within about twelve years 1,575,000 immigrants have entered at our inland and ocean ports. Of these 600,000 were from the United Kingdom, 529,000 from the United States and 445,000 from other countries, chiefly continental Europe. These are the figures for all Canada, but the larger number came to the West. It is a matter of concern how many settled upon the land itself. From October 31st 1874 to June 30th 1899 the entries for homesteads number 81,439, on a total land area at 160 acres for each entry of 13,302,240 acres. From that date to the end of March 1910 the entries were 293,130 or 46,900,800 acres. In 1910 the number of entries for homesteads, including British Columbia, was 41,568. Of these 44,517 entries were made by Canadians, a few Newfoundlanders and Canadians returned from the United States. English, Scotch and Irish people entered for 7321 homesteads and citizens of the United States for 12,813 and of all other countries 6,237. Among the nationalities included were 3 Greeks, 2 Persians, 8 Chinese and two Japanese. The entries by British subjects were thus 21,848 as against 19,750 foreigners. To obtain title to a homestead it is necessary to become a British subject. These entries in the fiscal year ending March 31st 1910 represent 101,286 souls. The letters patent issued for homesteads from 1874 to the 30th of June 1900 were 74,623, and from that date to the end of March 1910 125,207. The former period represents about 12,000,000 acres and the latter over 20,000,000 acres. The entries in 1910 alone represent 6,659,580 acres. Besides this there were 17,229 entries for pre-emption, 1,256 purchased homesteads, and 3,852 South African Scrip entries. At 160 acres for each entry this means an additional acreage of 3,413,920 acres or over 10,000,000 acres in one year. The figures for the fiscal year ending March 31st 1910 but there has been no falling off.

The total acreage under grain crop in 1909 was 11,960,000 odd acres and the 6,878,000 odd acres under wheat yielded a crop of 147,000,000 bushels. In 1893 the West rejoiced in a yield of 16,000,000 bushels of wheat. When the 46,000,000 acres entered for homesteads are brought under cultivation, the grain crop of the West will be worth speaking about. Besides the homesteads entries in 1910 the Hudson's Bay and the railway companies with land grants disposed of 1,184,000 acres at an average price of over $13.00 per acre. In the years since the beginning of 1901 to March 31st 1910 they have sold over 14,000,000 acres to settlers and speculators. In addition there were large sales of school lands. The approximation made by the Department of the Interior of the lands of the West, that is in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta is 335,000,000 acres. Much of this has been alienated from the Crown already, and as the homestead lands are only every alternate section in each township they will not last long at the rate of over 10,000,000 acres in the year. Some idea of the great rush for these lands is furnished by the record of the Moose Jaw Land Office. What is shown on the map as Moose Jaw county is a small province in itself. It extends from the city westward to the Alberta boundary, over 200 miles, and from the American boundary line northwest to the South Saskatchewan River, and includes such towns as Swift Current and Maple Creek. Until a very few years ago this was all ranching country, but settlement has taken place with a rush that has built up new towns along the C. P. R. main line. The C. P. R. is building roads this season north and south from Swift Current to supply settlers in wheat growing districts that a few years ago were only deemed to be fit for grazing cattle. Both the C. P. R. and C. N. R. are also building westward from Weyburn and Estevan to Scutney, Alberta. In 1910 the Moose Jaw land office received 10,921 entries for homesteads in this country or counting pre-emption and purchased homesteads 21,444 entries, or in all 3,431,600 acres. The total entries in the West in 1904 were only a few hundred in excess of this number. Canada's offer of free homesteads is being availed of at such a rate that a very few years will exhaust the supply in the present provinces. No doubt by that time the Peace River country will be the new land of promise. One who has not seen the process under way can form but a faint idea of the wonderful transformation that is being brought about on the prairies of the West. In 1904, the immense parallelogram of land at the corners of which are the cities of Regina, Prince Albert, Edmonton and Calgary was practically unsettled except along the edges. Since then it has been pierced by the C. P. R., C. N. R., and Grand Trunk up to Edmonton. There will soon be a direct line from Saskatoon to Calgary and other lines are criss crossing it in all directions, while one may run in a motor car from Regina to Edmonton or from Calgary to Prince Albert and never be out of sight of settlements. In the course of a few years at most this area of roughly 250 by 500 miles will be brought under cultivation almost as completely as the older parts of Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan. This is merely an illustration of the change that is being accomplished in all parts of the West, and one of such magnitude as to be hard to realize indeed. If one were to set down soberly the probable consequences commercially and industrially of these changes he would be called a prevaricator no doubt. One thing is certain. If the West today is attracting some attention in the world it will compel the world to take notice of its doings by 1921. Let us suppose that 170,000,000 of the 335,000,000 acres are under crop, and 100,000,000 is in wheat which yields a fair average of 20 bushels per acre. This will mean 2,000,000,000 bushels. Certainly we shall need all our railways in the East working at full pressure and an outlet on Hudson's Bay as well. In such a case also we might suppose, with reason, that 20,000,000 acres would be in oats, and at a fair average yield for the West this would mean another billion bushels of grain. The cereal and other crops and live stock which this West is capable of producing is such that there is no possible reason to be shown why our population shall not reach many millions of people. It is inevitable and in the best interests of the country that agriculture shall become more diversified. Experts say growing wheat year after year is simply mining the soil, and they look to alfalfa and clover culture not only to restore something to the soil and the fertility taken from it, but also to feed countless herds of cattle as the prairies grasses for centuries fed the buffaloes in their millions. Such a change in agriculture may be expected also to be accompanied by urban growth and industrial development. At present, however, the hunger for land is the outstanding fact in the West, and the undoubtedly great resources of other kinds which exist attract comparatively little attention. This is no doubt an error which time will correct. Those Eastern people who are alarmed at what they consider reckless land speculation are alarmed needlessly. What it will produce is a good measure of land's value. Many have been induced to buy [illegible] land as city lots, it is true, but they have merely anticipated too generously the city's growth. In a few years their lots will be valuable, but this cannot be said of the stock sold in the financial centres of the East in many mines of Cobalt and elsewhere.

It is hard to set bounds to the ultimate growth of the West of Canada. It will be wonderfully great. In 1810 Lord Selkirk said it would yet contain 30,000,000 people. A century later the growth he foresaw is in full stride, and almost one is tempted to fear the pace may become too rapid from the point of view of national welfare. Certainly had not order and justice been firmly established at the beginning there would be grounds for such a fear. Happily, however, foundations of government according to the ideals of our race were well laid by the pioneers of the West as also of the East of Canada.

HISTORIC LETTER SOLD

From Famous Actress to Famous Actor.

A fine letter written to David Garrick by Kitty Clive, the famous Irish actress, was sold recently at Sotheby's London. It was of her that Dr. Samuel Johnson said to James Boswell: "Clive, Sir, is a good thing to sit by; she always understands what you say. In the sprightliness of humor I have never seen her equalled."

The letter is dated Twickenham, Jan. 23, 1776, and is indorsed by Garrick "My Pivy, excellentô" "Pivy" was the pet name he had given her, a contraction of Clivey Pivey." When he became lessee of Drury Lane Theatre in 1746 he enrolled her in his company, and with him she remained, except for a brief interval, until she retired from the stage on April 24, 1769, when he played Don Felix to her Violante in the comedy of the "Wonder." The friendship between them lasted to the end. When she heard that he intended to retire from the stage to become church warden, Justice of the Peace, etc., at his Twickenham villa, she wrote to him, Jan. 31, 1773:

"I screamed at your parish business. I think I see you in your church wardenship, quarreling for not making their brown loaves big enough, but, for God's sake, never think of being a Justice of the Peace, for the people will quarrel on purpose to be brought before you to hear you talk, so that you may have as much business upon the lawn as you had upon the boards."

The letter, which will be sold at Sotheby's, is in part as follows:

"Is it true that you have put an end to the glory of Drury Lane Theatre? If it is so, let me congratulate my dear Mr. and Mrs. Garrick on their approaching happiness. I know what it will be; you cannot yet have an idea of it, but if you should still be so wicked not to be satisfied with that unbounded, uncommon degree of fame you have received as an actor, and which no other actor ever can receive, I say if you should still long to be dipping your fingers in this Theatrical pudding (now without plumbs) you will be no Garrick for the Pivy.

"In the height of the publick admiration for you when you were never mentioned with any other appelation but the Garrick, the charming man, the fine fellow, the delightful creature—both by men and ladies—when they were admiring everything you did and everything you scribbled; at the very time I, the pivy, was a living witness that they did not know, nor could they know, nor could they be sensible of half your perfections."

Kitty Clive died in 1785, aged 74. Garrick died in 1779, aged 62. His last appearance on the stage was made June 10, 1776.

RUSSIAN RAILWAY WONDER.

When the railway between Moscow and St. Petersburg was opened, an old peasant determined to take a ride on it to 'Mother Moscow.' The down express and the up express met at Bologoe—half-way between St. Petersburg and Moscow—and the passengers of both trains were allowed half an hour for supper. Among the people who alighted from the other train, the old peasant recognised a friend whom he had not seen for a long time. They had a delightful chat together over their tea in the restaurant, and then, without any thought of what he was doing, the old peasant boarded his friend's train instead of his own. The talk was very merry for some time, but at last the old man became grave and silent, and appeared to be puzzling deeply over something. At last he broke out: 'Ah Ivan, what a wonderful thing are these railroads. Here we sit in the same car, I going to Moscow and you to St. Petersburg!'

King Would Cut List

Now and then the question of reducing the civil list comes up, but contrary to what takes place in other countries, the King himself is favorable to the reduction, on the condition that he be relieved of a large number of royal parks and palaces which he never uses, and which absorb about two-thirds of the civil list for their maintenance. This point reached generally, the question goes no further, as, if the property which the King would be ready to give up were taken over by the state, their would be no saving in the expediture, which, in fact, as everything managed by the Government might come to cost more, while it is out of the question to lose such national treasures, although in the past there have been offers for them from private persons, including the Rothschild family.

From Son to Father

Since I got chummy with the tailor in our block I have come to the conclusion that I don't want my son to grow up to be a great big "athletic fellow," said the little man. Wrong, is it? And selfish? Maybe. But it's natural, knowing what I know from the tailor.

"He says—and I've looked around and found out that it's true—that it is a common thing for poverty-stricken little men like me to have their big boys' clothes cut down to fit. That is the modern big boy's way of taking revenge for the indignities he had to suffer when a kid. Dad's old clothes were cut down for him then. Now it is dad who wears the hand-me-downs. I don't want to do that, but if my boy grows up to be a bigger man than I am maybe I'll have to."

Affable.

HON. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux has been so long in public life that one is apt to forget he is only forty-four years of age. He has been a member of parliament since he was thirty, and he was appointed to office under the Crown at the early age of thirty-seven. Since then he has grown to imperial size, and is to-day wrestling with great problems which, if he succeeds in solving, will mark him out a place in the hall of fame of the British Empire. He has already proved that he has the power to conceive great ideas and the business instinct to carry them out — a rare combination. He is courteous, intellectual, and persevering, and is gifted with imagination.

Behind Mr. Lemieux's career is a charming little story — the story of a father's and a mother's ambition for their boys. Hormidas A. Lemieux some thirty old years ago was a humble employee of the postoffice at Montreal. To him and his pretty wife Marie Bisaillon, a sister of Mr. J. J. Bisaillon K. C. past batonnier of the Bar of Montreal, were born seven sons. The parents solemnly vowed to deny themselves every luxury and pleasure in order to give their boys the best education their slender means could buy. These days were days of hard work and thrift. Every cent counted. They consulted with their sons, and they responded nobly. The candy store never knew them. All their little earnings were carried joyously home to help to make the family purse heavier. Just as soon as the purse allowed it one boy after another went to college. Sometimes there would be three to maintain there, and the strain at home was tremendous. Old clothes were made many times to "look almost as well as the new". However, as the years sped on, and plain homely fare had made strong men of the boys, the eldest began to leave college to fight their way on in the big world beyond and the struggle grew less hard. The parents saw the day approaching when they could lay down their task and leave the rest to other hands. But just as the struggle had ended, the long hard years of work had told their tale, and the devoted mother held out her arms to the God of battles and died. She missed the joy of seeing her seven sons an assured success in life or to hear them described as probably the most distinguished family in old Quebec. Her husband today is hale and hearty at the age of seventy-four, and performs faithfully his duties as inspector of the customs district of Montreal.

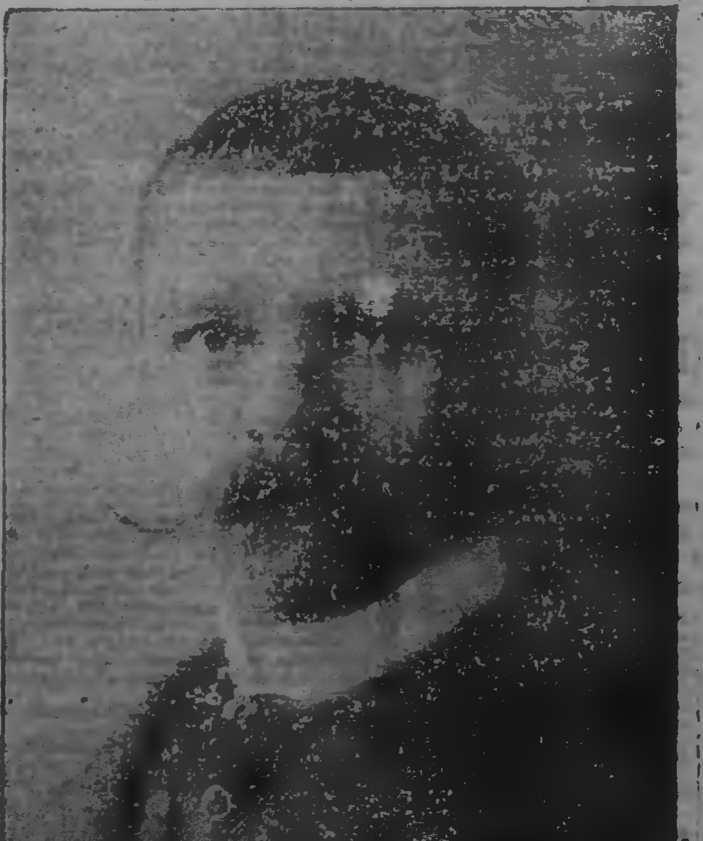
When Rodolphe Lemieux was a boy he is described as a mischievous little fellow who could never sit still. He always wanted to be doing something. This activity he carried with him to school, and he was a constant worry to his teachers. In his early teens he became a politician, and it is amusing to find him on the stump amongst his classmates at Three Rivers as an opponent of the Macdonald administration. However he earned the disapprobation of the authorities, the Liberal party in these days being considered the enemies of the Roman Catholic church, and he was expelled from the fold.

HON. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX

While Mr. Lemieux is a strong Liberal he is something more than a mere party politician. An idea or a policy advanced by an opponent always commands his attention and respect. If it appeals to his good judgment he will adopt it. A notable instance of this was the introduction of the system of free rural mail delivery, which was advocated by Mr. R. L. Borden, the opposition leader, in 1907. Mr. Lemieux's name will always be associated with a reform of imperial significance — the reduction of postal rates between Canada and the mother country.

Now Mr. Lemieux is Minister of Marine and Fisheries, a position now of greater responsibility since the new navy is under the minister's wings, his past experience will stand him in good stead.

Mrs. Lemieux is a daughter of Sir Louis Jette. She takes a deep interest in her husband's work, and she is a familiar figure in the Speaker's gallery of the House of Commons while parliament is in session.



HENRI BOURASSA

Whatever may be said of Henri Bourassa as a Canadian politician, in the hearts of the French Canadian this grandson of Papineau stands for all that is patriotic — meaning French-Canadian. His enemies call him a demigogue and too fond of playing to the gallery; but they are forced to admit Bourassa has the courage of his convictions. As an orator Mr. Bourassa has few and though when addressing audiences in French he is prone to appeal to the shades of the past, to English audiences his speeches are logical and meaty.

Born in Montreal forty-three years ago, young Bourassa after a private education entered the Commercial field — in the insurance business. This he gave up to enter the journalistic profession.

Mr. Bourassa was first elected to the House of Commons in 1896, but in 1899 he resigned his seat in order to vindicate his position on the constitutional aspect of the participation of Canada in the South African War. He was reelected by acclamation the following year. Again Bourassa resigned his position in Parliament in 1907, this time to enter Provincial politics, when he founded the Nationaliste party, of which he is leader.

A CANADIAN FINANCIER.

One of the most distinguished figures on the Conservative benches in the late House of Commons was that of Mr. Rodolphe Forget, financier and politician. Keen, dark-eyed, alert, his features and movements proclaim him unmistakably a son of French Canada.

And yet this man, who occupied a seat on the Opposition benches, is not generally known as a politician or statesman. The name of Forget is one to conjure with in the old province of Quebec, and, indeed, throughout the whole of Canada. And although the ancient province's famous sons in Canadian life have thus far been confined mostly to men who guided the ship of state, Mr. Forget is the exception. And a truly remarkable exception is he. Not that he does not play at the game of politics. For besides coming of a family whose names and deeds are written large in Canadian political history, Rodolphe is said to exert considerable influence with the powers that be in his party.

But it is as the king of financiers in his native province, as French-Canada's one great financier, that this brilliant man is chiefly known.

Rodolphe first looked out upon the world in the then little village of Terrebonne in the year 1861, and is therefore now on the home stretch of his fiftieth year. He received his education in the Quebec parish schools.

He early entered the brokerage office of his late uncle, the late Hon. L. J. Forget, and right then began his meteoric rise in the world of finance. He separated from his uncle a few years ago and set up for himself near the Montreal Stock Exchange, in the erection of which as president he played no minor part. He soon gained control of the Richelieu and Ontario, and held a big hand in the Canada cement merger game. One brilliant success followed another with such dazzling rapidity that his notable achievements are hard to count, and today he stands pre-eminent in the Canadian financial world.

Mr. Forget takes time outside his parliamentary and financial life to do much for charitable works, and it is to his powerful assistance that the Notre Dame Hospital of Montreal has reached its present high standard of efficiency. Energetic in the extreme, with a keen judgment and abundant resource, he is undoubtedly capable of many more brilliant coups.

SIR HUGH MONTAGU ALLAN

A name which will always be identified with the development of navigation between Europe and Canada and particularly with the marvellous development which has taken place in the port of Montreal during recent years is that of Sir Hugh Montagu Allan, vice-chairman of the Allan Line Steamship Company. Sir Hugh was born at Montreal, being son of the first Sir Hugh, one of the founders of the Allan Line, and spends a good part of his time in his native city, where his beautiful residence 'Ravenscrag' is one of the finest and most imposing of the lovely mansions reared by Montreal's merchant princes on the slopes of Mount Royal. As a social center 'Ravenscrag' occupies a unique place amongst the stately homes of Canada, and some of the most distinguished parties ever assembled in the Dominion have been entertained within its walls. The Allan Line is known wherever Canada is spoken of and it is still as popular with the several classes of passengers as it has been for many years. The company's large fleet of splendid liners plying regulary between Glasgow, Belfast, Liverpool, London, Havre, Rotterdam and Canadian ports are a source of pride to every Britisher.

SIR H. MONTAGUE ALLAN, Steamship King.

Sir Hugh is also prominently identified with a number of other big corporations which have helped to make Canada the rich and influential country it is today. He is President of the Merchant's Bank of Canada and of the Canada Paper Co., director of the Montreal Rolling Mills Co., the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co., the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., etc. He was knighted by His late Majesty, King Edward VII in 1904, and made a Commander of the Victorian Order in 1906; in 1907 the Emperor of Japan confered on him the Order of the Rising Sun.

Sir Hugh takes a keen interest in sport and is an ardent follower of horse racing. He is indeed one of those who have done most of late years to preserve racing as a genuine sport and to encourage the breeding of high-class horses in this country.

Havelock, Nov.—Mrs. S. Herrington was the hostess of a Hallowe'en party Monday, October 30th, at her residence, George street, in honor of her daughter, Miss Leta, the house being beautifully decorated for the occasion with corn stalks and lighted pumpkins.

The guests, numbering about fifty, were received by Mrs. Herrington, assisted by the Misses D. McNichol and O. Rose, looking very picturesque as Ghost and Witch, with Miss Leta proving the centre of attraction by dressing as a gypsy and telling fortunes under a tent in one corner of the parlor.

A buffet lunch was served about twelve, the table being very prettily decorated with shaded candles.

Afterwards a most enjoyable time was spent in Hallowe'en games and dancing.

The out-of-town guests present were: Miss S. Morrison, Norwood; Messrs. W. Kennedy, H. L. Dowling, J. Noble, W. Herrington, A. Scribber, R. McGregor (Toronto); H. Freeman (Kingston).

tario Railway; the protection of shippers and settlers from inequitable rates by subjecting the railway to regulation by the Dominion Railway Commission and the general railway law, and the extension of the railway with all practicable speed to a suitable outlet to Hudson Bay.

The boundary between Ontario and Manitoba should be so delimited as to give Ontario a suitable port on Hudson Bay for ocean going vessels.

We believe that the people of Ontario view with grave concern the serious decline in the rural population of this province, as disclosed by the recent census, and we propose the immediate appointment of a royal commission to enquire into the causes thereof, and to suggest measures which in the opinion of the commission should be taken to prevent any further decline, and promote the general agricultural interest of the province.

In the meantime we propose to adopt measures:

To bring about the active immigration into this province of suitable people for settlement and employment upon our farm lands.

To secure the building of a good road system throughout Ontario by an issue of provincial bonds or by other assistance on an adequate scale.

Social justice demands the removal of existing inequalities in taxation and we propose:

The amendment of the Assessment Act, to permit municipalities to exempt improvements from taxation either in whole or in part.

The evils of intemperance constitute a grave social peril. During the ensuing Parliamentary term, we will consider the best form of legislation to deal effectively with these evils and the electors will have an opportunity of passing upon our proposals at the following general election.

We will immediately abolish the three-fifths vote in local option contests and substitute a simple majority.

We promise the passage of a measure to provide for compensation of workmen injured in our industries and to dependents where such injuries result in death, modeled after the recent legislation in Great Britain.

We believe in and will support public ownership and operation of public utilities and especially the utilization of water powers throughout the province for the generation and distribution of electricity; also the acquistion and operation of telephone lines.

There should be an enlargement of the powers and reorganization of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, so as to render it an influential and effective tribunal in the public interest.

It will be our duty to combat at all times by legislative enactment and administrative action such trusts, mergers and other combinations of capital as stifle competition, increase the cost of living and impair political independence.

We propose the creation of a civil service commission and that appointments and promotions in the service shall be by merit after competitive examination.

I shall take an early opportunity of discussing before the electors the policies herein outlined, and I appeal to all who believe in these policies to give to the Liberal candidates throughout this province their cordial support. Yours respectfully,

Newton W. Rowell.

TENANT WAS NOT PROVEN GUILTY

Landlord Charged That His House Was Damaged

A young man named Fred Bunting, who with his family, until two months ago, were tenants of one half of a double house at 220 Edinburgh street, was in police court this morning charged by his landlord, Edward Ferguson, with wilfully causing damage to the premises during his period of tenancy. A lengthy hearing followed, which finally resulted in the case being discharged on the ground of insufficient evidence to verify the charge.

Many witnesses were called. Edward Ferguson, the owner of the house, stated that when he through his agent, rented the house to the defendant it was in very good condition, but after Bunting vacated it, he found the shed torn down, save two boards. The material in the shed, he said, had been used by the tenant to build a fence. He also said he found plaster pulled off the walls and some wall paper and the door between the parlor and dining room pulled off and standing outside.

Two carpenters made an investigation of the damages and estimated that $31 would be required to again fix the building as before.

The defendant, however, stated that Ferguson had given him permission to use the boards in the shed to build a fence to keep the children in off the street. He had a witness present to back up his statement, and his Worship in dismissing the case, said that as Ferguson and his witnesses had not shown the defendant to be actually guilty of tearing the plaster down, or proving that he had not given permission for the shed to be used as fence material, felt himself warranted in not bringing in a conviction.

C.N.R. Montreal Terminals.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—Interest was lent to recent reports to the effect that the Canadian Northern terminals would be located in the neighborhood of Dorchester and Lagauchetiere streets, by the appearance upon the scene yesterday morning of a party of engineers with their instruments who surveyed lines extending down Cathcart and Ste. Monique streets, and along Dorchester and Lagauchetiere streets, then back to Mansfield and Ste. Monique.

It will be seen that these operations include the block already connected with the company.

Cranberry Corner Feared.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—The possibility of a corner in the cranberry market was established by District Attorney Wilkerson after an investigation. Cranberries this week reached $10.50 a barrel, an increase of almost $5 from last year. The District Attorney was informed that in Wisconsin, New Jersey and Massachusetts, where almost all of the commercial cranberries are grown, there were organizations which belong to a central organization in New York. Those organizations could easily control the price, he was told.

Mail Robbery.

Greensboro, N.C., Nov. 7.—That a U. S. mail pouch routed from Raleigh to New York and containing $20,000 disappeared two weeks ago in a manner similar to a recently reported $20,000 theft of a pouch at Lynchburg, Va., become known here yesterday. Beyond admitting the loss of the package, officials refuse to discuss the matter.

WELSH LADIES AND CUSTOMS MEN

Members of Choir Bitterly Denounce U. S. Officers

Everett, Wash., Nov. 6.—The members of the Royal Ladies' Welsh Choir, who arrived in Everett yesterday from Vancouver, had many complaints against the immigration officers at Blaine. Madame Hughes-Thomas, leader of the singers, was bitter in her denunciations of the inspectors.

"I have never had such indignities heaped upon me," she said. "The immigration officers forced us all to leave the train, fairly herded us into a room with a barred window and placed a guard at the doors, just as though all preparations were being made to lock us up.

"There were several men who conducted a rigid examination in the rudest manner—the most insulting manner I have ever experienced. One had a long, black, evil-smelling cigar in his mouth, and he did not remove it when addressing me. I made some rather caustic remarks concerning the difference between those officers and the gentlemanly Canadian inspectors, which they did not like, and they said they would smoke and chew if they liked. Before we left we had to pay a head tax of $4."

ITALIAN ADVANCE

Victor's Troops Make Better Showing at Tripoli.

Paris, Nov. 8.—A Tripoli despatch from an Italian source says that the Italian advance began yesterday. A turning movement was executed and the Hamedich fort was occupied.

Claim Turkish Victory.

Constantinople, Nov. 8.—The War Office yesterday does not claim that the Turkish troops have reoccupied Derna, Tripoli. An official telegram from that quarter, however, reports that the Turks won a big victory over the Italians, 500 of the latter being killed and 18 guns and large quantities of ammunition and provisions being captured. The Porte has despatched a protest to the Powers against Italy's claim that she has annexed Tripoli and Cyrenaica, setting forth Turkey's determination to resist.

The Porte declares that the annexation proclamation is void because it is contrary to the elementary principles of international law while Turkey and Italy are still in a state of war, and that the Ottoman Government is resolved to preserve and defend by force of arms its sovereign rights.

Further, says the Porte, the proclamation is in violation of the engagements solemnly contracted under treaties, especially those of Paris and Berlin, as well as by Italy towards the great Powers as by the latter towards the Ottoman Government.

Rioting In Tunis.

Tunis, Nov. 8.—Groups of Italians and Arabs came into collision yesterday and a desperate affray ensued. It required strenuous efforts on the part of the whole police force, reinforced by detachments of troops, to restore order, and this was only accomplished after a large number had been killed or wounded on both sides. In addition, a police sergeant was killed and several of his men were badly hurt.

The rioting continued for a long time in different sections of the city. Revolvers were freely used. It is even reported that at one time a mob of Arabs, several thousand strong, threatened to overpower the troops, who fired five volleys. The number of killed has not been established, but it is estimated at from twenty to fifty.

The disorders began as a result of a decision of the municipality to revise the boundaries of the Arab cemetery. A thousand Arabs repaired to the cemetery to protest. Others fell upon the surveyors, who were Italians. The affair soon assumed the proportions of a regular battle between Arabs and Italians, and spread to the different quarters of the city.

Leave Canada For Italy.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—Fifty Italians will leave the Grand Trunk depot tonight for New York, where they will embark on the Cunarder Carpatha for Italy. Nearly all of them will enlist for service in the Italian army in Tripoli, according to Antonio Cordasco, a prominent Italian shipping agent of this city. Mr. Cordasco claims that many hundreds have left Canada in the last few weeks for this purpose and he believes that hundreds more will leave in the next few days.

These men believe that when the war is over Italian soldiers will be settled on the land and will be rewarded for their services by substantial land-grants.

Louis Coanga, on the other hand, declares that the present exodus of Italians, while slightly larger than usual, is simply due to natural causes and that the men are going home to spend the winter quietly in Italy and not to fight.

Must Build New School.

Brantford, Nov. 8.—Brantford City Council has been notified by the school board authorities that a new school in Holmedale to cost $50,000 will be built next year, whether the Council authorizes the issue of debentures or not. The Council will likely provide the money without taking a vote of the ratepayers.

Crushed His Skull.

Hamilton, Nov. 8.—William Fairweather, East Simcoe street, was almost instantly killed at the plant of the Hamilton Bridge Works Co. yesterday afternoon, when a reinforcing plate weighing about 400 pounds fell on him and crushed his skull.

REPUBLICANS ARE SHOWING UNEXPECTED STRENGTH IN THE ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS

New York State Gives Followers of Taft a Majority of Fifty Assemblymen—Massachusetts Divides About Evenly—Republican Sweep of Rhode Island.

New York, Nov. 8.—Returns received up to midnight from throughout the state on the assembly election indicate that the complexion of that body will be as follows: Republicans, 100; Democrats, 49; Socialist, 1. This would mean a net gain of 37 seats for the Republicans and give them a majority of 50.

Tammany Hall's hold on New York City was shaken yesterday in a battle of the ballots in which local offices were mainly at stake. The Democrats successfully defended their ancient strongholds of Manhattan and the Bronx, but by greatly reduced pluralities. Queen's County also stood by the Democrats, but the Republican-fusion candidates made nearly a clean sweep of Brooklyn and probably divided honors in the borough of Richmond.

A year ago Manhattan and Bronx gave Governor Dix a plurality of 68,000 and elected a Democratic supreme court justice by about 22,000. Yesterday Robert L. Fowler, the Democratic candidate for surrogate, carried New York County with a maximum plurality of about 17,000.

The Democrats elected their candidate for sheriff by about 8,000, and the three Democratic candidates for supreme court justices in the first judicial district pulled through by a bare 5,000. Francis M. Scott, the fourth justice elected, was endorsed by both parties.

The Republicans gained eight assemblymen in New York County, and will send 15 members of that body out of the total delegation of 35.

Rochester Goes Republican.

Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 8.—Hiram H. Edgerton (Republican) was elected mayor of Rochester yesterday for the third time, by about 6,500 plurality. He carried with him the entire city ticket. The Republicans have 19 of 22 seats in the common council. Munroe County also went Republican and will send a solid delegation to the assembly.

Republicans Sweep Buffalo.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 8.—The Republicans made practically a clean sweep in Buffalo and Erie County yesterday. The principal candidates on the city ticket were elected by pluralities ranging from 3,000 to 10,000. In the upper house all five Republican candidates were elected, and in the board of aldermen the result is: Republicans 19, Democrats 9, a Republican gain of 8.

General Republican Victory.

Providence, R.I., Nov. 8.—Returns at midnight from more than half of the state indicate a general Republican victory. Governor Pothier, a native of Quebec, being returned to office apparently by a greatly increased plurality. With 108 out of 184 voting precincts heard from the vote was: Pothier, 21,119; Waterman (Dem.) 16,530.

The Republican gains extended into the general assembly, where the Republican majority of last year has been augmented apparently, so that the Democratic representation will be very slight. Indications at midnight were that the Senate would be solidly Republican.

Return to Democratic Fold.

Cleveland, Nov. 8.—Cleveland, which two years ago went Republican, electing Herman C. Baehr mayor over the late Tom L. Johnson, yesterday returned to the Democratic field, electing Newton D. Baker, Tom L. Johnson's political heir, mayor, over Frank C. Hogen, Republican, by about 18,000 majority.

The entire Democratic city ticket won with the exception of five councilmen.

Governor Foss Safe.

Boston, Nov. 8.—On the face of the returns from 954 out of 1,070 election districts, the Democrats won the state election yesterday and kept Massachusetts in the party column by continuing Governor Eugene N. Foss in office for a second term. The returns gave Foss (Dem.), 187,553; Frothingham (Rep.), 177,074. Last year the same districts gave Foss 201,324; Draper (Rep.) 167,497.

The margin of victory yesterday was the narrowest in years, and for many hours after the close of the polls the result hung in the balance.

Socialist Mayor In Schenectady.

Schenectady, Nov. 8.—For the first time in the history of this county the Socialists have polled a counting vote, elected a majority of the county offices, which will make the common council and probably the county board of supervisors Socialistic. Rev. Dr. George R. Lunn, pastor of the United People's Church and editor of The Citizen, a Socialistic weekly, was elected mayor by a plurality of 1,800, or practically two-thirds of the total vote polled.

MUST CLEANSE MILK BOTTLES

"Hereafter the returning of dirty bottles to the milk men will not be tolerated; it is only by the co-operation of the consumer, the vendor, and the producer, each one doing his share, that we can hope to obtain pure milk," says Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer at Toronto, in his October Bulletin. "Many people are neglecting to return clean empty milk bottles to the milk man. These bottles are loaned not sold to the consumer, and their use for purposes other than as containers for milk is prohibitory, and is an offence against the milk by-law. It is inexcusable to steal milk bottles and use them for holding coal oil, vinegar, turpentine, syrup, preserves, etc., for such bottles cannot properly be washed but must be discarded, and are at a loss to the vendors.

"It is not a difficult operation, nor does it involve much work, to rinse out milk bottles with cold water, using a brush, if necessary, then with hot water, and allow them to drain before returning them to the vendor. If everyone will do his or her part, we will soon have clean milk."

HIS NECK BROKEN

Madoc Man Found Dead in His Barn.

Madoc, Nov. 8.—Irwin Love, aged 68, an old resident of Madoc Township, and for the past five years living retired with his daughter in Madoc Village, left his house soon after dinner to hang a door in a neighboring barn. When he did not return for his usual evening meal, neighbors who went to look him up, found him dead on the barn floor, his neck broken. He had evidently fallen from a box about three feet high, on which he stood to hang the door.

Special to the Review.

More Breaches of Law.

Toronto, Nov. 8.—Penalties amounting to approximately $700, with six cases still to be tried, were imposed at Owen Sound yesterday, the result of convictions under the Liquor License Act. The defendants' names are as follows:

John Alexander, Patterson House, two cases, selling $125 each. Total, $250.

Daniel Holmes, Ross House, two cases, selling, $125 each. Total, $250.

Henry Turcott, Comely House, one case, selling, $125.

Capt. J. Corbett, Colson House, one case "keeping for sale," $20.

Harry O'Neil, Albion House, one case, "keeping for sale," $20.

The case of Ernest O'Neill was adjourned till to-day and the six other cases standing for trial will be proceeded with at once.

RAILWAYS DEMANDING MORE MONEY FOR CARRYING MAILS

Original Contracts Made in 1895 and Before—Increase in Size of Mails.

Ottawa, Nov. 8—The most important application which came up at yesterday afternoon's session of the Railway Commission was the consideration of the question of remuneration to be paid railway companies for carrying the Canadian mails.

The original contracts with the railways were nearly all made years ago, that of the Canadian Pacific Railway being executed in 1895, and with the Grand Trunk Railway much earlier. Since then, the railways claim the increase in mails has been one of about 800 per cent., while the train service has increased 400 per cent. Their remuneration, they consider, should increase along the same scale. A large amount of the country's money is thus involved.

When the case was called, Mr. F. H. Gisborne of the Justice Department asked for a postponement until Jan. 23, which was granted.

No. 4 Co. Attention

All members of No. 4 Company are requested to meet at the Armories Thursday evening, November 9, at 8 o'clock sharp. Business of importance to be considered.

Warns Catholics.

Kingston, Nov. 8.—"The Canadian Freeman," a Catholic organ published here, makes the following comment yesterday on the McRae murder case at Cornwall:

"The life sentence was something out of the ordinary under the circumstances connected with the case, and Justice Sutherland's ideas may become a matter of question later on. However, Catholics who are traveling towards the mixed marriage destiny should seriously reflect and think of the unfortunate outcome of the marriage of a Carp doctor to the daughter of one of Glengarry's most highly respected Scotch Catholics. Farquhar McRae's life sentence at his age of 66 was surely a surprise."

BALFOUR RESIGNS

Quits the Leadership of the Unionist Party

Special to the Review.

London, Nov. 8.—Hon. Arthur J. Balfour this afternoon resigned the leadership of the Conservative party.

The resignation of Mr. Balfour was a great surprise, coming just at this time. The reasons back of it are not plain through the discontent in the Unionist ranks has been plain. There is no talk of a successor, but the name of Sir Max Aitken, the young Canadian, was mentioned some time ago as a possibility.

To Have Free Hand.

London, Nov. 8.—A determination to allow Canada an entirely free hand in dealing with the U. S. in matters concerning the Dominion was indicated yesterday by Sir Edward Grey's answer to a question regarding the naval activities of the U. S. on Lake Michigan.

Rowland Hunt, Unionist member for Shropshire, suggested that the making of a naval station there might be a breach of the Rush-Bagot treaty, and wished Ambassador Bryce instructed to ascertain the facts.

The Foreign Secretary refused to do so without communicating with the Canadian Government, who were most directly concerned and whose interests were chiefly effected. He added: "I propose to leave to the Canadian Government the initiative and thereby show our desire to act in harmony, sympathy, and co-operation with them."

Nobel Prize For Chemistry.

Stockholm, Nov. 8.—It is announced that the Nobel prize for chemistry has been awarded to Mme. Marie Skledowska Curie of the University of Paris.

Mme. Curie is the chief professor of sciences in the University of Paris. She was the co-discoverer with her husband, Prof. Pierre Curie, of radium, and in 1903 shared with him half of the Nobel prize for physics, the other half being awarded to Prof. Antoine Henri Besquerel. Each of the five Nobel prizes, awarded annually, amounts to $40,000.

Recent announcement was made of the success of Mme. Curie in producing polonium, "a new element possessing a radio-activity superior to radium."

STOPPER PUT ON MGR. LANGEVIN

Will Not be Permitted to Re-open School Question

Montreal, Nov. 8.—The statement was made here yesterday that owing to irritation caused in political circles and because the question has long since ceased to interest the public and papal delegate at Ottawa, Mgr. Stagni has forbidden His Grace Mgr. Langevin, Archbishop of St. Boniface, discussing the Manitoba school question in the province of Quebec.

It is further said that the decision was reached in high quarters on account of the announcement made some time ago by Mgr. Langevin to the effect that he felt like preaching a crusade in all parts of Quebec, taking the ground that the school question is not settled.

New Navy For Portugal.

Lisbon, Nov. 8.—The British Minister at Lisbon in a conference with the Minister of Marine, pointed out that, as Portugal was an ally of Great Britain's, she must reorganize her navy. Accordingly the Government has decided to purchase a number of warships and certain artillery.

A proposal has been received from British capitalists for a loan of $50,000,000 to run twenty-five years at 4 per cent., conditional, however, on an agreement that the proposed warships shall be built in England. The Government, nevertheless, will invite bids from French and German constructors.

ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL

MANCHU DYNASTY TOTTERING TO ITS FALL; NORTH REBELLING

Feeling in China is That Sway of Manchus is Ended—Court is in Terror at Pekin.

Pekin, Nov. 8.—The legations consider that the end of the Manchu dynasty is imminent. The provinces north of Yangtse are now declaring for a republic. The only force of Manchu troops large enough to cope with the local situation are in Pekin, but there are indications that the capital will be surrounded before many days by Chinese soldiers.

Where the court will take refuge is a question. There are evidences that the court intended to proceed to Changkau (Kalgan). Troops guarding the route to that town, which lies in the Province of Chili, 125 miles northwest of Pekin, were expected to dynamite the tunnel after the passage of the train bearing the Emperor and his household.

Reports have now been received that Chang Kia Kau is unsafe.

The National Assembly is holding meetings without a quorum, but certain members are endeavoring to maintain a nucleus. Na Tung, vice-president of the Privy Council, has taken rooms for his family in a hotel in the legation quarter. Prince Ching's palace seems to be deserted. It is believed that he is in the Forbidden City.

A concerted attack upon the foreigners is not feared, but there are many within the city who are opposed to foreigners.

Gen. Chang Shao Tsen, who was appointed by Imperial edict as envoy to proceed to Yangtse provinces to conciliate the people, has declined the appointment, saying that he preferred to remain with his own troops at Lanchau. The third Changchun division, which halted at Lanchau for one day, is being sent to Fengtai, near Pekin. A train load of arms and ammunition from Lanchau has already bene sidetracked at that point. It is believed that the third division is acting under Gen. Chang's orders.

The Government proposed yesterday to cut the Pekin-Tientsin Railway beyond Fengtai, to prevent additional troops from arriving. It is understood that the British Minister, Sir John Jordan, protested, on the ground that Great Britain was entitled to operate the railway in the event of the suspension of service, in accordance with an old agreement. Consequently the line is still open.

The Chinese report that the Kalgan Railway is in the hands of the revolutionaries, while a rebel force is proceeding apparently in the direction of Pekin, at a point on the railway about 70 miles from the capital. All the railway connections with the capital are threatened.

It is expected that the assassination of Gen. Wu Lu Cheng will lead to the revolt of the remainder of his old Sixth Division, which is now with Yuan Shi Kai. The Government reports, however, that two train loads of Imperial soldiers are now on their way to Hankow, and these may be sufficient to prevent a mutiny.

A hundred carts left Pekin last night for Jehol, and two hundred mounted Manchus proceeded in the same direction early in the day. The Chinese believe that this advance party is preparing the way for the flight of the court, but many Manchus are fleeing and troops are constantly moving in the vicinity of Pekin. The Manchus troops here number 11,000, Imperial Guards 7,500, police 4,000, and banner police about 5,000.

The city was quiet last night, and there is no sign of any intended movement.

Chefoo, in Shantung Province, has gone over to the revolutionaries. Prior to this, one of the leaders, Wang Shao Nien, a distinguished educationalist, informed the consuls that everything was ready for a peaceful assumption of authority by the Chinese, and that there would be no slaughter of the Manchus unless they resisted.

British Regiment Needed.

London, Nov. 8.—The Pekin correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says: "The situation here to-day is far worse than ever before. The commonest prudence demands that a British regiment should be brought from Tientsin to Pekin. Prince Tsai Tao, ex-Minister of War, and a brother of the Prince Regent, is attempting to persuade the Empress Dowager to depose the regent.

"The Chinese Foreign Board is authority for stating that a scheme for the neutralization of Shanghai is under consideration, similar to that established at the time of the taiopina rebellion."

A despatch to The Telegraph from Shanghai says that the Province of Yunhan has declared its independence and that the viceroy has disappeared.

Court Terror-Stricken.

London, Nov. 8.—A Pekin despatch to The Times, dated Nov. 6, says that trustworthy information from the court shows that the court is paralyzed with fear. It will remain at Pekin, whatever happens, says the correspondent, but many princesses and noble ladies have sought the protection of the foreign concessions.

A despatch to The Daily Mail from Rangoon, British India, gives reports that Chinese troops in Tengyueh, in the Province of Tunnan, which borders on Burma, mutinied on Oct. 27, killing Gen. Chang and other officers. The Taotai was either killed or committed suicide. The women members of his family were thrown into a well and the treasury was looted.

According to revolutionary accounts, Talifu, in the same province, was captured on Oct. 23, and Yung Chang and Yunanfu on Oct. 27. All the officials were executed.

PEKIN GOING

Shanghai, Nov. 8.—Reports are current here that the imperial palace at Pekin is on fire, that the emperor has already fled. Hankow dispatches say that Yuan Shi Kai is en route to Pekin with a guard to proclaim him as dictator, as the only means of restoring order.

BROKER IS ARRESTED

Wanted on Charge of Embezzling Large Sum

Came to Toronto With Young Woman as Companion

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 8.—Richard Leslie Freeman, a Boston broker, was arrested here this morning, charged with the embezzlement of eighteen thousand dollars at Lowell, Mass. A further charge of a forty thousand dollar theft from a firm of Boston bankers may be laid. Freeman registered at a leading hotel in company with a young woman. He has a wife and several children at Dorchester, Mass.

Struck By Auto.

Toronto, Nov. 8.—Edward Beers, 570 Parliament street, is in the General Hospital as the result of backing into a motor car owned and driven by Dr. James McCormack, 113 Spadina avenue, in Carlton, near Parliament street, at 10.20 last night.

The doctor took the injured man to the hospital, where it was found that two ribs were fractured.

Dr. McCormack's car was struck by another, owned by Mrs. A. Evoy, 145 Bolton avenue, Sunday afternoon as it stood in front of his house.

HEAVY GALES ON THE ATLANTIC

Sardinian Took Seventeen Days to Make Passage

Montreal, Nov. 8.—The Sardinian arrived in port yesterday morning after a "record" voyage of seventeen days out from London. All of this time, with the exception of one day spent at Havre, the ship struggled onwards towards Montreal, buffeted by tremendous gales.

The seas, however, were so high that ordinary speed was impossible. Seas broke over the ship repeatedly, and the passengers had a miserable trip below decks. They were too ill and too few for a concert, and on the two Sundays at sea there were no religious services. The first day's run was 50 miles, the best 247, but on several occasions the log only registered 125 to 150 miles in 24 hours.

The ship withstood the furious storm well, and emerged from it with but one lifeboat smashed.

Other ships arriving lately bring passengers telling similar stories of unusually violent weather.

HIGHWAY FROM NEW YORK TO MONTREAL IS NOW ASSURED

Forced Out of Ministry.

Providence, R.I., Nov. 8.—Because of the criticism resulting from his marrying Col. John Astor and Miss Madeline T. Force at Newport, on Sept. 9, Rev. Joseph Lambeth has resigned as pastor of the Elmwood Temple (Congregational) of this city, and will leave the Ministry to go into business. Although the church has not as yet accepted his resignation, Mr. Lambert says that he will insist upon it doing so. His retirement will be considered by the church at a meeting on Nov. 16.

DROPPED DEAD AT SON'S BEDSIDE

He Had Lost Both Legs Through an Accident

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov 9.—Mrs. Wm. Barnes, of Hook avenue, dropped dead at the bedside of her son in the Western hospital to-day. Barnes was brought to the hospital, having lost both legs in an accident.

Memorial Arch Planned to Celebrate a Century of Peace.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—The construction of the New York to Montreal highway is assured. It may be completed next year. If not, it will be finished the following year.

A member of the Canadian section of the movement for better roads said that the Montreal-New York road would be but a part of a much more extensive movement to establish a through road between the City of Quebec and Miami, Fla.

The roadway between this city and the American border line will be known as the King Edward road, and it is probable that there will be erected a memorial arch on the spot where the line crosses the boundary to celebrate the hundred years' peace between Great Britain and the United States.

In the latter connection there is to be a celebration at Lake Champlain in 1914, and the new arch, which will probably be donated by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, will be dedicated on that occasion by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught.

OVER-WORKED KIDNEYS

Cause, Rush of Blood, Fullness, Dizziness.

J. T. Chetland, the well-known railway engineer of Hamilton, found the strain always resting upon men of his occupation vastly intensified by a tendency of the blood to rush to his head, and often at times when clearness of vision and great steadiness were demanded. Finding some difficulty in bending—a stiffness with pain having settled in his back, it occurred to him that his kidneys might be at fault. "This was a happy idea, for by it I not only got rid of the pain but many other troubles as well. I took a full dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and was glad to note that some obstruction of the kidneys, which I had lately noticed, was at once relieved. The flushed appearance of my face gave way to a more rational color and there was a perceptible improvement in my appetite. Dr. Hamilton's Pills certainly act splendidly upon the blood, removing heat and fulness and that sort of dizziness that makes a man at the throttle wish when it siezes him that he were elsewhere."

No medicine gives such unquestionably good results for stomach, liver, and blood troubles as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild, certain, and always curative. Refuse any substitute. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM

Sir James Whitney says that after so much time and labor, the Liberal platform is a rather skimpy chicken. It is a very fair platform, it is true, but it embodies or is related to many of the reforms now being carried out by the Whitney government, or in the bud. There are many high-sounding phrases in the platform, which, when thoroughly examined in the light of actual conditions and movements, do not mean very much. As an example of this, let us look at what the platform says with regard to public power schemes. The hydro-electric is not mentioned, but in place of that, appears this glittering generality:

> "We believe in and will support the public ownership and operation of public utilities, and especially the utilization of water-powers throughout the province for the generation and distribution of electricity."

Isn't that beautifully explicit—clear as mud? The Liberals say they will support the utilisation of the water-powers throughout the province to generate electricity. That is remarkably generous of them. It might be asked, by whom? By the province, for the benefit of the public, or by the private corporations with whom the provincial Liberals have been identified?

This power paragraph is cleverly worded, conveying the impression that the Liberals are in favor of public ownership and operation of water-powers to produce electricity. But the construction is ambiguous—and the sentence might and probably would be construed to mean that the Liberals are willing to believe in and support the utilization of water-powers—which in itself means nothing.

The Rowell platform is in favor of the abolition of the three-fifths clause. That is an old fight, and was decisively settled by the people of Ontario in 1908. The three-fifths clause may make it a little harder for the temperance forces to gain local option, but once they have it, they are not liable to an upset the next opportunity. It works for stability both ways.

The civil service commission is another high sounding plank, which in effect does not amount to much. In the case of the Ottawa government there is a big difference, but the Ontario civil service is not so very large, and certainly there has been no accusation against the Whitney government for transgressing in respect to appointments. No one has been heard calling for any change in this respect, at least loud enough to be heard seventy miles away from Queen's Park.

As regards Northern Ontario the Rowell platform promises many things, but some of them are a trifle fanciful. The extension of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to Hudson Bay is a trifle large, as a scheme, especially as the revenue of the railway now pays only 3 per cent on an indebtedness of $14,000,000. The T. and N.O. is being extended now as fast as the development of the country warrants, and within reason. There is at present no demand whatever for a Hudson Bay outlet. As a matter of fact it would be better to await the building of the Dominion government Hudson Bay [illegible] because there is a great possibility that the Hudson Bay route will be impracticable because of ice, even in summer.

The Rowell platform would give more liberal grants to primary education, though the Whitney government already gives $500,000 toward public school teachers' salaries. If the Whitney government has increased such grants and appropriations so that it does not much more than barely secure a surplus, in spite of the two or three millions extra it gets from Northern Ontario, the Liberals simply propose a campaign of reckless expenditure that could only result in a bad financial mess. Either more money would have to be taken out of the people, to carry out the extravagant Rowell ideas, or the province would speedily land into the clutches of the money-lenders. As much progress as possible should be the motto; but no government can undertake wild expenditures without coming to grief. The Rowell platform is in many ways designed merely for an effect on voters, and could not possibly be carried into effect in some particulars.

TAX REFORM

Sir James Whitney has been represented as being too autocratic, too domineering to permit of the passage of the tax reform measure. He has been generally represented as being personally opposed to it, and therefore adamant against any effort to introduce the measure, and carry out the people's will.

But A. E. Fripp, M.P., the author of the taxation bill, known as the Fripp bill, which embodied the proposal to tax improvements less than land, says that Sir James was considerate, and that if he were convinced that the public really wanted the change, and not only a few shouters organizing a movement, he would at once consent. Mr. Fripp has issued a statement, which should be of great interest to those who have been imagining that Sir James Whitney had merely an unreasonable prejudice against anything savoring of single tax. Mr. Fripp says—

"When the president of the Tax Reform League submitted the measure to Sir James Whitney to permit the municipalities on a majority vote of the property owners to tax improvements at a lower rate than land values, the premier sent for me, and suggested that I introduce the proposal into the legislature for the purpose of promoting public discussion. This I did, and it has since been known as the Fripp bill, though it might more properly be called the Whitney bill. The premier opposed its passage for more than one reason, but principally because he did not consider there was sufficient demand for it.

"On its second introduction, last session, the premier was quite considerate in his treatment of this bill, and from his attitude toward the question, I feel sure that when it is shown him the public are ready for it, he will accede to their wishes. I might say that since its first introduction into the legislature, this proposed amendment to the Assessment Act, has been so widely discussed and generally so heartily endorsed by practically all the newspapers of the province, by the labor unions, and many other bodies that I feel, with some slight changes, Sir James Whitney can now, and very likely will accept it. In any event, having been introduced by a Conservative member, at the request of a Conservative prime minister, it is surely a Conservative measure, even if it is now adopted as a plank in the Ontario Liberal platform."

TREAD LIGHTLY

Step softly. You may get your foot on the new Liberal platform. Put a heavy foot on it and it will go to pieces. It is not for use but for ornament. It is fancy work, not a real structure of timber and iron. One is reminded of a story in a recent issue of Life. "Father," says the boy, "What does it mean when it says kid-glove reformers'?" The old man answers, "It means a man who is trying to stop graft without injuring the business of the grafters." So apparently Mr. Rowell is determined to be a reformer whilst he and his fellow laborers on the platform are equally determined that there shall be no definite pledges of reform and every reasonable guarantee that no real reforms will be accomplished.—Toronto News.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If the Georgian Bay Canal is started, poor old Kingston's dreams of future greatness will be rudely punctured.

Isn't it odd that when a new government comes into office, it has to face all the requests rejected by its predecessors, again. A new government is regarded as a fair mark by everyone with a hobby.

The Rowell platform didn't advocate buying out the Bell Telephone Co. in Ontario. A provincial telephone system would be a tough nut to crack in Ontario.

The Manitoba provincial telephone system shows a deficit of $150,000, and rates must be increased. The rate in Winnipeg for business phones will be increased 50 per cent. But under the government control, the rural lines have been extended so that he is indeed a poor farmer who cannot have a telephone to bring him in touch with a town or city.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Can't Fly Across the Sea

Atlantic City, N.J., Nov. 7.—No serious attempt to fly across the Atlantic Ocean in an airship will be made this year. Saturday's trial convinced Vaniman and his backers that the project is not feasible. No public announcement that the flight is called off has been made, but it is a fact, nevertheless. After one or two flights over Atlantic City, with the spectacular dirigible, the crew will be discharged.

It was found necessary in the trial flight to part with the lifeboat, wireless outfit, dynamo, and of a third pair of propellors to get buoyancy enough. Every one of the crew was ordered to alight.

It is realised that the airship, as now constructed, will not carry the additional weight that would be required for a trip across the ocean.

A Long Time Till Monday.

Montreal, Nov. 7.—For serving intoxicating liquor with sandwiches on Sunday to men who were not bona-fide guests at the respective hotels, the Welland and Savoy Hotels, the Pall Mall Cafe and the Cafe Parisian were yesterday morning fined the minimum penalty, $30 and costs or three months in jail, by Recorder Weir. The decision is an interesting one, as hotelmen in general have usually considered that they were entitled to sell drinks after hours and on Sundays provided said drinks were served with a meal; and a 25c. sandwich had come to be regarded as the minimum meal which entitled a man to a drink. In fact, thirsty ones have been in the habit for many weeks of ordering a sandwich to evade the law merely to secure the desired liquid refreshment.

ONE MORE ADDED TO THE GREAT ARMY

Who are Shouting the Praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills

Chiswick Man's Kidney Trouble Developed Rheumatism, and Finally into Diabetes—Story of His Complete Cure.

Chiswick, Ont., Nov. 7 (Special)—Rheumatism which developed into Diabetes, had made life a burden to Octave Labracque of this place. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and he is added to that great army of Canadians who glory in telling their neighbors that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure remedy for all kidney ills.

"My limbs would swell and I had a dragging sensation across the loins." Mr. Labracque says, in giving his experience, "I could not attend to my work properly as I had to keep resting and I was troubled with rheumatism, and my troubles finally developed into Diabetes.

"I tried different medicines and doctors but got little relief till I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Ten boxes made a new man of me."

All Mr. Labracque's troubles came from diseased kidneys. They speedily ceased when he commenced to use the one sure cure for deceased kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Pasadena, Nov. 8.—A gold cup and bonuses up to $8,000 have been offered by the backers of Aviator C. P. Rodgers, to any rival airman who can break Rodgers' transcontinental record of 49 days. This was announced yesterday by Edward Merritt, one of Rodgers' business representatives.

The bonuses, it was stated, would be given as follows: $100 a day for every day cut from the 49 days' record; $500 for each day under 40 days; $1,000 for each day under 35.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—There was an improved demand from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat at a further advance in prices of 1½d to 3d per quarter, and a fair amount of business was worked in the lower grades, but exporters in some cases claim that prices are still out of line for Nos. 1, 2 and 3 northern. The local trade in oats was quiet. Bids of 44½c were made for round lots of extra No. 1 feed to arrive, and refused. A decline of 3c per bushel has taken place in prices for malting barley, the best bids now being 98c to $1. Flour steady, with a fair volume of business for local account, but export trade is dull. The Ideal Reading Lamp

Opticians agree that the light from a good oil lamp is easier on the eyes than any other artificial light.

The Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made.

It gives a strong, yet soft, white light; and it never flickers. It preserves the eyesight of the young; it helps and quickens that of the old.

You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for other lamps, but you cannot get better light than the low-priced Rayo gives.

Made of solid brass, nickel-plated. Easily lighted, without removing shade or chimney. Easy to clean and rewick.

MEXICO IN '42

By D. Lewis

With half a dozen whispered words he tranquillized the latter; after which there was a brief conference between the two, its effect upon Santander showing itself in his countenance, that became lit up with a satisfied but malignant joy.

When, in an hour after, they were again in their saddles riding in return for the city, a snatch of dialogue between Santander and Ramirez gave indication of what so gratified the colonel of the Hussars.

"Well, major," he said, "we've done road enough for this day. You'll be wanting rest by the time you get to quarters."

"That's true enough, colonel. Twice to San Augustin and back, with the additional mileage up the mountains — 20 leagues, I take it — to say nothing of the climbing."

"All of 20 leagues it will be when we've done with it. But our ride won't be over then. If I'm not mistaken, another nest not far off will claim a visit from us, one we're not likely to find so empty. I'd rob it now if I had my way; but for certain reasons, mustn't without a permit from headquarters, which I'm sure of getting."

CHAPTER XLVIII

A Day of Suspense.

Dawn was just breaking as Hussars passed back through San Augustin.

The two ladies were more keenly and anxiously watching them now, noting every file as it came in sight, every individual horseman, till the last was revealed. Then they lightened up with joyous sparkle, for the soldiers had come as they went, with not a man added to their number.

"They've got safe off," triumphantly exclaimed the countess. "I knew there was no fear after they had been warned."

That they had been warned both were now aware, their messenger having returned and reported. He had met the Hussars on their way up, but crouching among some bushes he had been unobserved.

He had brought back a note for each of them.

Kearney's note was the first he had ever indicted to Louisa Valverde, and it ran in fervid strain. He spoke frankly and passionately. Whatever his future, she had his heart. If he lived, he would seek her again at the peril of a thousand lives; if it should be his fate to die, her name would be the last word on his lips.

The communication received by the countess was less effusive. Don Ruperto wrote with the confidence of a lover who had never known doubt.

They were now filled with apprehension, in view of what had occurred on the preceding evening. The dwarf must know more than he had revealed in that dialogue overheard by Jose. In short, he seemed aware of everything — the groom's complicity and their own. The free surrender of their watches and jewelry for the support of the escaped prisoners was of itself enough to incriminate them. Surely there would be another investigation, more rigorous than before, and likely to have a different ending.

They were not destined to spend the whole of the day without seeing a visitor. As the clocks of San Augustin were striking 8 p.m. one presented himself at the gate in the guise of an officer of Hussars, Don Carlos Santander.

They were seated in the veranda of the inner court, but saw him.

Both were on their feet, looking offended, angry and alarmed. And yet they were little surprised, for it was only a confirmation of the fear that had been all day oppressing them.

"Senoritas," he said, "I see you're wondering at my thus presenting myself. Not strange you should. Nor could anyone more regret the disagreeable errand I've come upon than I. It grieves me sorely, I assure you."

"What is it, Col. Santander?" demanded the countess.

"I hate to declare it, condesa," he rejoined, "still more to execute it. But compelled by the rigorous necessities of a soldier's duty, I must."

"Well, sir; must what?"

"Make you a prisoner; and, I am sorry to add, also the Dona Luisa."

"Oh, that's it!" exclaimed the countess, with a scornful inclination of the head. "Well, sir, I don't wonder at your disliking the duty, as you say you do. It seems more that of a policeman than a soldier."

The retort struck home, still further humiliating him in the eyes of the woman he loved, Luisa Valverde. But he now knew she loved not him, and had made up his mind to humble her in a way hitherto untried. Stung by the innuendo, and dropping his clumsy pretense at politeness, he spitefully rejoined

"Thank you, Condesa Almonte, for your amiable observation. It does something to compensate me for having to do policeman's duty. And now let it be done. Please to consider yourself under arrest; and you also, Senorita Valverde."

CHAPTER XLVIX

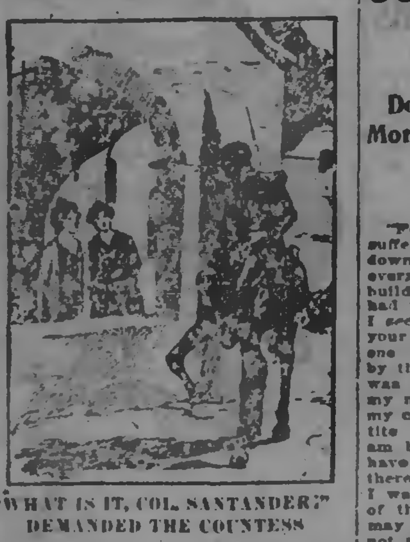
Under Arrest.

Luisa Velverde and Isabel Almonte were at length really alarmed.

"Oh, Isabel! what will they do to us?" anxiously asked Dona Luisa, when they were well inside their room. "Do you think they'll put us in a prison?"

"Possibly they will. I wish there was nothing worse awaiting us."

"Worse! Do you mean they'd inflict punishment on us—that is, corporal punishment? Surely they daren't?"



"WHAT IS IT, COL. SANTANDER?" DEMANDED THE COUNTESS

"Daren't! Santa Anna dare anything—at least, neither shame nor mercy will restrain him. No more this other man, his minion, whom you know better than I. But it isn't punishment of that kind I'm thinking of."

"What then, Isabel?"

"The prison they will take us to," pursued the countess, "is a place—that in the Plaza Grande. We shall be immured there, and at the mercy of that man, that monster!"

At which she dropped down upon a couch despairingly, with face buried in her hands.

"But, Isabel," she said, hoping against hope, "surely they will not dare to——"

She left the word unspoken, knowing it was not needed to make her meaning understood.

"Not dare!" echoed the countess, recovering nerve and again rising to her feet. "As I've said, he'll dare anything — will Don Antonio Lopez De Santa Anna. Besides, what has he to fear? Nothing. He can show good cause for our imprisonment, else he would never have had us arrested. Enough to satisfy any clamor of the people. And how would anyone ever know what might happen inside the palacio? Ah, Luisa, if its walls could speak they might tell tales sad enough. We wouldn't be the first who have been subjected to insult by el excellentissimo."

While his fair prisoners were thus conversing, Santander was doing his best to pass the time pleasantly. An effort it was costing him, however, and one far from successful. His last lingering hope of being beloved by Luisa Valverde was gone — completely destroyed by what had late come to his knowledge — and henceforth his love for her could only find reward through the assistance of his master, Santa Anna, who had long since abandoned thoughts of Don Ignacio's daughter and was exclusively bending himself to his scheme of revenge on the countess. But though relieved in this regard, Carlos Santander was almost as miserable as either of those he had arrested.

Maj. Ramirez and the other officers of his escort were enjoying themselves. However considerate for the feelings of the ladies, they made free enough with the house itself, its domestics, larder, and, above all, the cellar. Its bins were inquired into, the best wine ordered to be brought from them, as though they who gave the order were the guests of an hotel and Don Ignacio's drawing room a drinking saloon.

Outside in the courtyard, and further off by the coachhouse, similar scenes were transpiring. Never had that quiet residence known so much noise. It was the house of a rebel and therefore devoted to ruin.

CHAPTER XLX

Ready to Start.

As were all Mexican country mansions, that of Don Ignacio Valverde was a quadrangular structure inclosing an inner courtyard—the patio.

That into which the ladies had retired was the apartment of Luisa herself. No sentry had been stationed at its door, but through a casement window, which opened into the garden at the back, they could see a soldier on guard, with carbine thrown lightly over his left arm. They had no thought of escape.

Recent events had made them sad, even to utter prostration, but soon something of hope seemed to reanimate the countess and communicate itself to her companion. It was a report brought in by Pepita; for the lady's maid was allowed to attend upon them, coming and going freely.

"He's got away — safe!" were her words, spoken in a cautious but cheering tone, as she came into the room.

"Are you sure, Pepita?"

It was the countess who put the question.

"Quite sure, your ladyship. I've been all around the place, to the stable, grounds, everywhere, and couldn't hear or see anything of him. Oh! he's gone, and so glad I am. They'd have made him prisoner, too, had they found him."

The rejoicing was for Jose, and however fervent on Pepita's part, it was as fervently responded to by the others, the countess seeming more especially pleased at the intelligence.

But as the night grew later, nearing midnight, the little maid came in charged with new intelligence, not so starting, since they anticipated it. The dueno had got home and, as themselves, was under arrest! Astounded by what he had learned on return, and angrily protesting, the soldiers had rudely seized hold of him, even refusing him permission to speak with his daughter.

She had harbored a belief that all might be well on the coming home of her father. The last plank was shattered now. From the chair of the cabinet minister Don Ignacio Valverde would step direct into the cell of a prison! Nothing uncommon in the political history of Mexico.

They had come close to the door which was held slightly open by Pepita. There they stood listening to what was going on outside. The sound of revelry were no more heard. Instead, calls and words of command were given in the courtyard and there was a bustle of preparation. Through the trelliswork they could see a carriage with horses attached, distinguishable as their own. It was the same which had just brought Don Ignacio from the city. But the heads of the animals were turned outward, as if it was intended to take them back. Soldiers on horseback were moving around it, their armor gleaming in the moonlight.

Finally one of the soldiers, whose sleeve chevrons proclaimed him a corporal, stepped up into the corridor, and, advancing along it, halted in front of their door. He made a sort of military salute, in a gruff voice saying:

"Senoritas! Carriage ready. I've orders to conduct you to it without delay!"

There was something offensive in the man's manner. He spoke with a thick tongue, and was evidently half intoxicated. But his air showed him in earnest.

"You'll allow us a little time—to put on our cloaks?"

The request came from the countess, who wished to retard their departure as long as might be possible.

"Of course," said the corporal, the same who had won the dagger in the game of monte. "I'd allow such beautiful maidens as you any time if 'twere only left to me. For myself, I'd far rather stick to these snug quarters, and the company of this pretty lass."

At which, leaning forward with a brutish leer, he attempted to snatch a kiss from Pepita.

The girl shrunk back, but not till she had rebuked him with an angry retort and a slap across the cheek. It caused him to lose his temper, and without further ceremony he said spitefully:

"Come, come, I'll have no more dilly-dallying. Go at once!"

There was no alternative but to obey; his attitude told them he would insist upon it. Time for cloaking had been a pretense on their part. They were expecting the summons, and the wraps were close at hand.

Outside they found Col. Santader in command of the Hussars.

"Ladies," he said, with a bow and air of maudlin humility, "I have to apologize for requiring you to start out on a journey at such a late hour. Duty is often an ungracious master. Luckily, your drive is not to be a very extended one—only to the city, and you'll have company in the carriage. The Dona Luisa will find her father inside."

Neither answered, and he soon gave the abrupt order: "Corporal, take them on to the carriage."

As they approached they perceived a face inside, pale as the moonbeams that played upon it. It was a very picture of dejection; for never had Don Ignacio Valverde experienced misery such as he felt now.

"'Tis you, father!" said his daughter, springing up, throwing her arms around him, and showering kisses where tears already trickled. "You a prisoner, too!"

"Ay, my dear. But sit down. Don't be alarmed! It will all come right. Heaven will have mercy on us, if men do not. Sit down, Luisa!"

Doctor Failed to Help—But Morriscy's No. 14 Blood Remedy Restored Health.

TORONTO, ONT., June 3, 1911.

"For the past two years I had been suffering from nervousness and a rundown condition, caused from worry and overwork. I tried several remedies to build up my nervous system, and also had my physician prescribe for me, but I seemed to get no better until I tried your No. 14 Blood Remedy. I used one box, and began to brace up, and by the time I had finished the fifth box was feeling fine. They seemed to quiet my nerves and revive me generally and my complexion is lots better. My appetite is fine—I feel keen and fresh, and am better able to do my work than I have been for over a year. I suppose there are a lot of people troubled as I was, and if this letter will help any of them to find the right remedy, you may publish it for their benefit. I cannot refrain from giving this expression about your No. 14 Blood Tonic, as I consider it without an equal."

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

HON. W. R. MOTHERWELL

The main industry of Saskatchewan is agriculture, and it is thus very necessary the province should have a good strong man to handle the portfolio of that department in the local government. Probably on none better than the present holder of the office could the honor have fallen. Hon. W. R. Motherwell, in addition to the experiences of a man who has actively operated an extensive farm, carries with him the additional advantage of an agricultural college training. After getting all the education he could out of the prairie schools of Perth County, where he was born, and later at Perth Collegiate, he passed on to the Guelph O. A. C., where he studied the latest and most scientific farming methods.

HON. W. R. MOTHERWELL,
Saskatchewan Minister of Agriculture

Then he went West to put into practical effect his theoretical training. He homesteaded in Eastern Saskatchewan and was soon one of the leaders of the farmers of the province. As he rode up and down his miles of wheat fields on his binder he cogitated, the election of 1905 however, farmers of the West were not getting a square deal from the elevators and railroads, and the result was the formation of the first Grain Growers Association which has now developed into the present powerful organization. He ran for member of the old territorial assembly, but was defeated at the election of 1905, however, bringing success. He is full of progressive ideas, and has made the department of agriculture a very practical benefit to the farmers of the province.

HAVE YOU EVER

After retiring for the night, thought of your forgotten fire insurance policy, which had expired that day, and had not been renewed?

How quickly you'd spring to the telephone, call up the agent, and make matters right till morning in fear that fire might wipe out your accumulations.

Yet how often have you retired to woo the sleep of the just, with no life insurance and it never crossed your mind seriously that ere morn the heart might stop beating, and with it, the whole earning power of both brain and hand yet your property may never burn, but your heart will surely cease to beat some time. It's strange, is it not?

Then why not insure your life at once?

In our Optical work we frequently find people wearing inferior and imperfect lenses, for which they have paid a full price. We will not economize in this department of our business, for we always insist on furnishing the best material at prices that are reasonable.

We believe you will be satisfied with the prices asked in our Optical Department, and know that you will be pleased with the results obtained.

DOCTORS FAILED. RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna.

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me.

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it.

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me.

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment.

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

MISS SEWARD NOW HAS SOME PUPILS

Helping to Earn Part of Her Expenses

A letter from Harry W. Field to Mrs. A. J. Collins, Mount Forest, dated Oct. 8th, says, in reference to the work of Miss Gladys Seward:

"You will be glad to know that Mrs Bigger has given her daughter to Gladys at 3 marks a lesson; also I got her for a fine concert singer to play her accompaniments, and this lady is going to give Gladys her little boy to teach. This will bring her in 15 marks a week. Another person wants to study with one of my pupils, and I got her for Gladys. I think this will bring in Gladys 96 marks a month, and she needs 120 to 140, so she is not doing badly. She will play the Beethoven G. major in December. I am going to Berlin on Saturday to see about Gladys playing there."

JARRY PLAYS HIS GAME IN TORONTO

Mining Man Who Was at Work in This City in Operation Again—Induced Girl to Marry Him—Cannot be Found.

Readers of the Review will remember a recent account of the doings of one, Alfred Jarry, in this city, when under the pretext that he held valuable mining interests in Cobalt, arranged for the purchase of a $4,500 house and $1,500 worth of furniture from local dealers and how he went to the C.P.R. station, presumably to meet his mother and left on the 4.28 train for the west.

To-day's Mail and Empire exposes the man again, but in Toronto he was bolder and went so far as to marry a young lady, Miss Edith Redley, of 227 Richmond street, with Rev. J. D. Morrow officiating. Jarry told a story similar to the one when he operated in this city. He had only known the girl two days before he secured her consent to marriage.

The Mail says:—The next day Jarry went to the McLaughlin Motor Car Co. and purchased two machines, a limousine for his wife and a touring car for himself. He gave cheques, and again asked that they be not cashed for a couple of days. The cheques he gave first were on the Traders Bank at Webbwood, but he later changed them to the Imperial Bank in Toronto. From the garage he went to Eaton's and purchased about $1,500 worth of diamonds and a number of expensive rugs, giving cheques in payment. He then went to a wholesale grocery establishment and ordered a carload of provisions to be sent to his mine at Porcupine. None of the stuff he purchased did he attempt to take away with him, and in every case he asked that presentation of the cheques be delayed.

His story was that his uncle had died a short while ago and left him a valuable mine in Porcupine, the name of it being the Jarry mine. He went to the firm of Watson, Smoke, Chisholm and Smith, and arranged with Mr. Smoke to be his solicitor. He had a will drawn up, giving everything to the woman he had just married and told Mr. Smoke that he had an abundance of money, but made no display of wealth. He had in the meantime, through a real estate agent, purchased a house at 52 Foxbar Road, the price of which was $12,000, and another house in Parkdale for $6,000. For these cheques were also given. One was to be for his mother-in-law and her mother and he with his bride were to occupy the other one.

He left home yesterday, telling his wife that he would be back soon. He also had appointments with a number of people with whom he had been dealing, and to whom he had given cheques, but kept none of them. His wife not being able to locate him, asked his solicitor and a number of other people with whom he had been dealing, but returned to her room on Richmond street, with a broken heart. She said he had a grip when he left the house and thinks that he has abandoned her.

IN CANS OR IN BOTTLES

Milkmen to Deliver at the Will of the Public

Pig Pens at the Market to be Removed

The hog pens on the market are due for removal. The property committee decided last night that they were a nuisance and should be placed elsewhere as soon as possible.

It will be remembered that the City Trust Commission recommended this move.

Ald Bradburn held that the pens were used as a convenience for drovers, in selling, and that hogs had been allowed to remain in the pens from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. For such a purpose the pens were not intended. They were simply to facilitate the weighing of hogs.

THOSE PIG PENS

On motion of Ald. Bradburn and Morgan it was decided that the Trust Commissioners should be advised that the question would come up before the incoming council. The present council cannot act until the present arrangements with the market clerk expire.

Ald. Duncan held that the commissioners should insist on the removal of swill found behind the Chinese Restaurant.

BOTTLES OR CANS

The milk by-law came up again and the committee decided that milk may be delivered in bottles or from cans as desired by the public. Ald. Morgan and Ald. Brown moved for the repeal of the bottling clause to permit of the above action.

The other sanitary provisions will be strictly enforced.

RUTHERFORD ACCOUNT

As to the $300 claim of Rutherford Bros. the city solicitor and the chairman were authorised to take the matter up with a view to settlements. A suit against the city is pending.

SMALLPOX COTTAGE

The committee was of the opinion that a small cottage should be erected in connection with the Queen Mary Hospital to provide for the treatment of smallpox patients.

PROTESTANT HOME PLANS COMMENDED

Dr. Bruce Smith Was Highly Pleased With Them

During the discussion at the annual meeting of the Peterboro Protestant Home Association yesterday afternoon Miss Helen Denison, the secretary, stated that the plans of the new Home had been submitted to Dr. Bruce Smith. His commendation of the same, was such that he had asked the architect for the right to use the plan for charitable buildings to be used throughout the province. Dr. Morgan who was one of the gentlemen present, complimented the ladies on having taken the precaution to submit the plans to Dr. Bruce Smith.

KNOX A.S.K. CLASS ELECT OFFICERS

Everett Williamson is President—Mock Trial to be Held

The A.S.K. Class of Knox church held its annual meeting for election of officers in their class room last night. The boys have sustained a great loss since their last annual meeting in Miss F. Warren's departure for Calgary, but they were fortunate enough to secure the services of Mrs. (Rev.) H. J. Keith, who has held them together and helped to strengthen the class.

Besides other matters of business it was decided that the class would hold a "mock trial" and after the election of officers, which resulted as follows, the different characters were chosen:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. H. J. Keith.
President—Everett Williamson.
Vice-President—Roy Smith.
Sec.—W. Taylor.
Treas.—W. Johnston.
Press Secy.—A. Robertson.
Mascot—R. Thompson.

THEATRICAL

"COUNTESS DE SWIRSKY"

Only a small audience greeted the Countess Thamara de Swirsky on her appearance at the "Grand" last night but everyone who attended went away thoroughly satisfied with the evening's entertainment. The countess, who is one of Russia's blue aristocrats proved herself to be a true interpreter, and her dancing was received with much enthusiasm. The stage settings in green, with the dainty effetive costumes, denoted the artistic tastes of the performer.

The work of the orchestra was pleasing throughout.

The Countess' dancing in the bat dance, the butterfly dance, and others which the audience admired, but did not know the name of, was remarkable for its grace and charm. Her rhythmic movements accorded perfectly with the spirit of the music.

LADIES' AID TALENT CONCERT

Capacity Crowd in the George St. Lecture Hall

The ladies of George street Methodist church amply demonstrated last evening that they could certainly entertain, when under their auspices, a really enjoyable and first-class program of unusual merit delighted an audience that filled the basement of the church almost to capacity. The affair had been heralded as a talent concert, and its advance recommendations were ably fulfilled. All kinds of talent was exhibited, cropping up from unexpected sources.

Rev. Mr. Couch was induced to act as chairman, which position he held in a capital manner. In a most appropriate and brief chairman's address he introduced the program of the evening and explained the nature of the entertainment. His remarks were followed by the opening item of the program, a mock ladies' aid meeting, in which all the members of the Ladies' Aid participated. There was no question about this number, it was an all-round success and took splendidly. The talents of the ladies were unmistakably recognized, and the event won hearty applause.

The other numbers were;

Violin solo—William Wilson, Conservatory.
Reading—Mrs. Pettit.
Solo—Frederick Myles.
Piano duet—Miss Robertson and A. King.

MATRICULATION EXAMINATIONS

Local Principals Agreeable to Change Being Made

In reference to the notification from the Superintendent of Education, Dr. John Seath, that all matriculation examinations would be a month earlier this year, a Review reporter inquired of several local school principals about their views on the subject. The consensus of opinion seemed that undoubtedly it was a good move, although it would probably mean the limiting of the time heretofore in use for the covering of the season's work.

H. R. H. Kenner, principal of the Collegiate Institute, was asked this morning about the subject. He said that he had received no information about the matter, save a brief paragraph contained in the rules and regulations that were issued in September, which read as follows: "All matriculation examinations will be completed by June 30th. When asked if he considered it practicable, Mr. Kenner stated that while it would mean no doubt the shortening of the season's work, it was agreeable to him.

There was an outcry last year against students having to write on their examinations during the sweltering heat of July, but as Mr. Kenner said, "last July the heat was an exception and there was the possibility that extreme heat might be experienced even in June.

R. F. Downey, principal of the Peterborough Central Normal Training school, although having received no notification of the change, other than what was published in the Review, expressed himself as much in favor of the idea.

KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY ARE SUGGESTED AS NAMES OF NEW SCHOOLS TO BE ERECTED

Miss Kathleen Martin Resigns—A. H. Hutchinson, of Whitby Accepts Position of Second Master at Collegiate—Another Donation to the Library.

Miss Kathleen E. Martin submitted by letter, her resignation, to the Board of Education last evening, at the regular monthly meeting. Her withdrawal from the teaching staff will go into effect at the end of the present teaching term, the latter end of December. She has been a faithful and popular teacher, and the Board, though accepting her resignation, regretted the severance of her connection with the public school faculty.

Her successor will be Miss Mabel Bennie, at present teaching in Smith and who was heartily recommended for the vacancy by W. H. Hill, as a suitable successor to Miss Martin.

NEW SCIENCE MASTER

The position of Science master at the Collegiate Institute will be filled by A. H. Hutchison, of Whitby, who communicated by letter with the Board accepting the position and intimating that he would commence his duties on January 2nd., 1912.

DONATION TO LIBRARY

H.R.H. Kenner, wrote the Board to the effect that S. J. Stubbs, B.A., had donated to the Collegiate Institute Library $9 worth of selected books from Everyman's Library, and asking that receipt of the same be acknowledged.

The secretary of the Board was directed to correspond with Mr. Stubbs conveying their thanks for his kind donation to the library.

MATRICULATION CLASS

H.M. Gilchrist, secretary of the Y. M.C.A. wrote asking for the use of the physics room each week for the use of the matriculation class. The request was granted on motion. H.R.H. Kenner who was present expressing his willingness to place the desired room at the service of the class.

A large number of accounts were read and on motion sent to the Finance Committee.

THE NEW SCHOOLS

Dr. M. A. Morrison submitted a report of the special building committee for the new schools in the East and West wards, which stated that the city council had granted the request of $85,000 for school purposes and that the committee was at work observing plans and locations; and also recommended that the new school in the East ward be named the King George and that in the West ward the Queen Mary.

Dr. Morrison added that the deputation to Toronto had visited a leading firm of architects who specialized on the preparation of plans for up-to-date schools, and after receiving several, had decided on one, which they considered would be acceptable on nearly every detail, and that they were working along lines now to secure similar plans for the proposed new buildings. As soon as they were received they would be submitted to the inspection and opinion of the Board.

"It's up to us now to get the best possible use and value out of the money we have been granted," said W. H. Hill.

The building committee will not definitely select sites for the new schools without the approval of the whole Board of Education.

The members of the Board present last evening were John Crane, chairman, B. F. Ackerman, V. Eastwood, Col. Miller, F. H. Adams, Dr. Burnham, Dr Morrison, W. H. Hill and Robert Fair.

H.R.H. Kenner, and Inspector Mowat were also present.

SUPERVISION COMMITTEE

To the chairman and members of the Board of Education.

Gentlemen—Your supervision committee beg to report that, as authorized, we have secured the use of the Y.M.C.A. Gymnasium and services of the Instructor for the pupils of the Collegiate Institute for the term of five months from November 1st, 1911 for the sum of $500.00 payable $100 monthly.

PRAISEWORTHY WORK DONE AT PETERBORO' PROTESTANT HOME

Officers Returned by Acclamation at Annual Meeting—Institution Economically Conducted.

An interesting item on the program at the annual meeting of the Peterboro Protestant Home Association held yesterday afternoon, was the return to office of all the officers of the Association by acclamation or motion of Ald. Edgar.

Rev. Robert Pogue conducted devotional exercises.

Mrs. Roger had vacated the chair to allow of the balloting with Mr. John A. Aylmer, presiding, and had spoken in warm terms of the work of the secretary, Miss Denison, the treasurer, Miss Robinson and Mrs. Neill, treasurer of the Building Fund, when Ald. Edgar brought in his motion which was seconded by Rev. Robt Pogue and unanimously carried.

Mrs. Roger also referred to the good work being done by the matron and her assistant. The matron, Mrs. Roger said, was exceedingly economical and sympathetic toward the inmates.

The meeting, very well attended, agreed that the treasurer's statement showed the Institution to have been conducted during the year in a most economical manner. One item, that of $172.77 in the report was explained as being the proportion due the House of Providence on the property, when the new Home is being erected.

The two reports given below, speak for themselves—

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Report of the Peterborough Protestant Home for the year ending September 31st, 1911:

This year has been a most eventful one in the history of the Home, marked as it is, by the incorporation of the Association, and the commencement of the long-wished-for new buildings.

The number of inmates for the year has been 32. Of these 2 have died, 9 have been discharged for various reasons, and 21 are still with us.

The work of the Home itself has been carried on most satisfactorily, the matron and her assistant proving themselves most faithful and capable in the discharge of their very exacting duties

At the Christmas season a large amount of outside relief was given. A new feature introduced this last year was the invitation given to a number of poor children to attend the annual Christmas tree. Gifts were provided for them through the kindness of some of our members, and were much appreciated. As usual, the old people fared very well, and came in for a large number of gifts from various kind friends. The presence of the Rev. Charles Carpenter who acted as Santa Claus, and Mrs Devey and some of the choir boys of St. John's church added much to the success of the occasion.

In January it was decided to call a meeting of some of the representative men of the city, to consider the steps to be taken in connection with the proposal made by the city council. This meeting was held on January 10th, 1911, when the city solicitor submitted the proposal from the council that the association should become incorporated, and that the board should add to its number representatives from all the city churches. At the same meeting it was decided that the endowment fund, as it stands at present, should be kept intact and used for the running expenses of the Home.

In pursuance of the policy outlined at this meeting, a petition for incorporation was drawn up by the solicitors for the association. This petition was signed on April 4th by the members of the board, who, therefore, became charter members. After some delay the petition was granted, and letters patent were received on May 3rd, 1911, which raised the association, after forty-eight years of quiet, hard work to the dignity of an incorporated body, able to hold property in its own name. As this change obviated the necessity of having trustees, a vote of thanks was sent to the former trustees, His Honor Judge Roger, Dr. Halliday, and Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

The formal agreement between the city and the Home was signed on August 29th, 1911.

Notices were sent to the various clergy of the city asking them to appoint representatives from their churches, which has been done in almost every case.

The first general meeting as an incorporated association was held on May 9th, 1911, in the Board room of the old Home. At this meeting the by-laws as drawn up were adopted, a corporate seal decided upon, and the directors and officers elected.

The directors are as follows:

For Three Years—Mrs. Birdsall, Mrs J. B. McWilliams, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer.

For Two Years—Mrs. Roger, Miss Nicholls, Mrs. R. S. Davidson.

For One Year—Mrs. Haslitt, Mrs. Robert Neill, Miss Mary Brown.

The mayor and the chairman of the Finance committee are also ex-officio directors.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Roger.
1st Vice-President—Miss Nicholls.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Birdsall.
Treasurer—Miss Sara C. Robinson.
Secretary—Miss Helen Denison.

The city council, in accordance with their agreement to give a site and ten thousand dollars, had asked the board to meet them and choose a site. This was done on April 12th, and a lot on the north side of Anson street was decided upon.

The draft plans for the new building were drawn up by Mr. Sandford Smith, architect, of Toronto, whose connection with the family of the late Sheriff Hall, the donor of the present property, gave him an added interest in the work. Those plans, having been approved by a general meeting of the board, Mr. Smith was asked to prepare the working plans and specifications, and to let the contracts for the various parts of the work.

These were let as follows:

The bulk of the work to J. G. Graham, for $19,985.00; heating, to R. J. G. Sutherland, $2,495.00; lighting, Adamson & Dobbin, $2,322.00.

The building is now progressing rapidly and it is hoped it will be ready for occupation in the early spring

The work of raising funds for the same has been in the hands of Mrs Robert Neill, and has been splendidly carried on, but as is usual in all such work, has been most arduous.

The cordial thanks of the Board are tendered to all who have taken an interest in the Home. Chief among these we must mention the doctors of the staff, who freely give their services in looking after the inmates. Special mention must also be made of Miss McCaila and her Bible class, and the Salvation Army, whose weekly visits are much appreciated. On Sunday afternoons most enjoyable services are held by laymen from the various churches.

An entertainment recently held, and which was much enjoyed by the old people, was that given by Mrs. Webb's Bible Class. All these kind acts do much to brighten the lives of the old people under our care, and are much appreciated by our Board

We also desire to thank the press of the city for their unfailing courtesy and kindness in publishing anything which may help in the work of the association, and who, most kindly donate copies of their daily papers

All of which is respectfully submitted,

HELEN DENISON,
Sec'y, P.P.H.

A Coal Stove That Keeps The Floor Warm

The Regal does this in two ways:

In the first place it creates continuous currents of warm air in the room. There is a special flue inside the stove, apart from the fire chamber and free from gas or smoke. This flue draws in the cold air from the floor, heats it, and passes it out at the top. See diagram.

In addition to this the Regal radiates extra heat near the floor. All the hot smoke and fumes from the fire pass down and through a flue under the ash-pit before they reach the pipes. This keeps the stove hot at the bottom and helps materially to warm the floor.

The REGAL PENINSULAR

With its massive nickel parts, heavily plated and elegantly formed—with its large oven—with its perfect duplex grates and durable fire-box, the Regal Peninsular has a combination of beauty and heating comforts not usually found in a heater

It is thoroughly Peninsular and that means that it is honestly made.

It has proven economical both in fuel consumed, and in its years of service.

If you are interested in heaters or ranges, get "THE COST." It is a booklet you should read before you buy. Ask for it.

MOST WICKED CITY ON EARTH

Russian Town of Irkutsk Alleged to be Toughest Known to Modern Times, Producing 500 Murders Per Year.

One would hardly recommend Irkutsk for a rest cure. With a population of 120,000 persons crammed into a couple of square miles on a bend in the Angora river, it produces 500 murders in a year, with an average of one arrest for each fifty killings. And for each ten arrests there are but five convictions. This is a transcription from the city's criminal records. In one day last month there were twenty-two murders within the city limits.

Irkutsk is pretty gay at nights now, but the citizens look back enviously to the zenith of its career in the days of the recent Japanese war. Then, it is said, champagne and wines were often cautiously transported free of freight charges from St. Petersburg and Moscow in steel cars labeled Powder — cars militant with painted imperial eagles and Cossack guards. A colonel of the regiment openly boasted in the Metropole restaurant recently that more champagne was drunk in Irkutsk in one month during the Japanese war than is sold on Broadway, New York, in half a year.

The fun at Irkutsk starts at midnight; the city is as dead as a Sunday an hour before. Then the moving picture shows, of which there are three to a block on the Bolsholskaia spin off their last films and the officers and mining engineers — for all the world goes to moving picture shows in the towns of Siberia — crowd into the restaurants.

Here, too, the sons of Uncle Sam keep the old flag flying. Last year there were, for instance, the young Harvard graduate of a town in the north of Pennsylvania and his friend the clergymans' son. They sojourned here for three hectic weeks, spending $25,000 in one hotel during that time. The Harvard man disbursed $1,000 in one day and another day had $2,500 stolen from his person.

An Unstable Platform

One of the most remarkable political meetings on record is described in a Paris contemporary as having taken place at Riga. The Letts Socialists desired to hold a meeting. The Riga police expressed an opposite view, and then the contest began in reality. It was brains versus determination. Wherever the Socialists determined to pitch their camp the police checkmated them. At last one of the Socialists conceived a brilliant idea. He circularised the members of his organisation to have a kind of swimming match. Of course, the competitors were the orators. They went into the water, and the assemblage stood around. Then swimmer after swimmer delivered a speech, and invited questions from those on land It is claimed that, although somewhat damp, the meeting was a great success.

Courted His Own Mother

The custom of finding a mate for life through the medium of advertisements sometimes has curious results. A young Polish engineer stationed at an out-of-the-world place in the Crimea recently felt he ought to marry, studied the advertisements in a Polish newspaper, and replied to one inserted by a "widow in the height of her beauty." He used a nom de guerre, and gave an address at the nearest town. The widow also used a pseudonym, and they interchanged typewritten letters. The young man was delighted at the prospect of becoming engaged to a young widow from his own town, and the widow looked forward to marrying again in a town only a few miles away from her dear boy. A meeting between the widow and the engineer was arranged, and then it was discovered that all the affectionate correspondence had been wasted between mother and son!

DUNNING A KING

King George of Greece has a little black dog, which, like all dogs in all countries, is subject to a tax. When the usual advice asking for payment of this tax was sent to the King this year, it either got lost among his private papers or his secretary omitted to reply to it. At any rate, after a fairly long delay a second advice on a paper of different colour was sent to the Royal dog-owner. Still no payment was made.

The third advice is usually delivered by hand. Great, therefore, was the surprise of King George when he was informed that a bailiff wished to speak to him regarding the non-payment of his taxes. The bailiff was introduced into the Royal presence, and began reading a long rigmarole demanding that "His Majesty George I. of Greece should pay to the Royal Office of Taxes appointed by His Majesty George I. of Greece, etc."

In the middle of this the King, recovering from his surprise, drew out of his pocket a ten franc piece and paid the tax and the extras. And when the bailiff had gone he gave his secretary a reprimand worthy of the occasion.

Stabbed the Bridegroom.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—Maddened by jealousy at the sight of the bridegroom dancing with his bride at the Heiammel's wedding at No. 2 Valiant street Monday night, E. Taffan is alleged to have driven a knife up to the hilt into the arm of his newly wedded host. The wedding festivities were at their height when the happy party was rudely broken up by an assault upon the head of the household, for which Taffan was arrested.

Taffan pleaded not guilty before Judge Leet in the arraignment court yesterday morning and was remanded for en quete on the ninth.

ALSO WORRIED THE EARLY BOY

Arithmetic Problems that Sadden Schoolboy of Today also Gave Pain to the Kiddies of Two Thousand Years B. C.

There is a ray of vindictive comfort for the modern schoolboy in the fact that for over 3,600 years his schoolboy progenitors have been worried by just such problems in arithmetic as annoy him most.

Among the archaeological discoveries made in Egypt is a papyrus roll, in excellent condition, dating from about 1700 B. C. This roll, which had a long heading beginning, "Directions how to attain the knowledge of all dark things," proves beyond doubt that the Egyptians of that time had a thorough knowledge of the elements of arithmetic.

Numerous examples show that their principal operations with units and fractions were made by means of addition and multiplication. Substraction and division were not known in their presein form, but correct results were obtained nevertheless.

Equations are also found in the papyrus. Here is one that brings the Egyptian schoolboy home to [illegible]

Ten measures of barley are to be divided among ten persons in such a manner that each subsequent person shall receive one-eighth less than the one before him.

Another example given is: There are seven men; each [illegible] seven cats; each cat has eaten seven mice; each mouse has eaten seven grains of barley; each grain of barley would have yielded seven measures of barley. How much barley has been lost?

The papyrus also contains the calculation of the area of a circle and attempts to square the circle.

NOT MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS

Writer Points Out that England is Not the Mother of Parliaments, the Honor Really Belonging to Spain.

How errors grow, says a writer in T. P. O'Conners Weekly, and how false epithets attached to persons or nations, by constant repetition come to be accepted as descriptively true! England is called, not only in our own Press, but in that of other countries, the "Mother of Parliaments." She, however, is not in that proud position legislatively. Spain had a Parliament nearly a century before England — meaning by Parliament "popular representation." Such an assembly was convened in Burgos in 1169, while that of England first assembled at Leicester in the middle of the thirteenth century.

Unlike ours, the Castilian Parliament did not receive hereditary nobles; it was left to England to do that, and to give them hereditary legislative powers which were denied them by the Castilians. If, then, writers desire to call any nation the "Mother of Parliaments," to be accurate they must attach that title of grace and honor to Spain.

Evidence from a Shark.

It may be a perfectly unwarrantable reflection upon an upright and exceedingly useful body of men, but somehow the mention of the legal profession irresistibly draws the mind to sharks. And there was at least one historical occasion on which a shark did actually play an important part in a criminal trial.

In 1799 the brig Nancy was captured by a British warship as a suspected slaver; and her release by the prize court at Jamaica, whither she had been brought for trial, seemed inevitable, owing to the absence of incriminatory documents. Curiously enough, the officers of the Abergavenny hooked a shark soon afterwards in the neighborhood, which was found to contain a bundle of papers relative to the Nancy.

These were preserved in ignorance of the capture of the brig, and eventually led to her condemnation. These interesting documents are said to have been stored in the museum at Jamaica, and perished in the great earthquake there a few years ago; but the head of the shark is still on view at the Royal United Service Institution, London.

The Reward of Thrift

In connection with the sale of the French "junk pile" at Panama comes the story that one bidder for the De Lesseps leaving was a man who but a few years ago was working in a junk shop at $7 a week, yet who was able to accompany his bid with a certified check for $115,000.

Such a fact serves to put a hitherto despised business in a different light. We shall do well to treat the lowly rag and bottle man with more respect. His potentialities are great. His shrewdness in taking profitable advantages of such seemingly simple openings as first present themselves deserves a higher appreciation.

A Novel Church Service

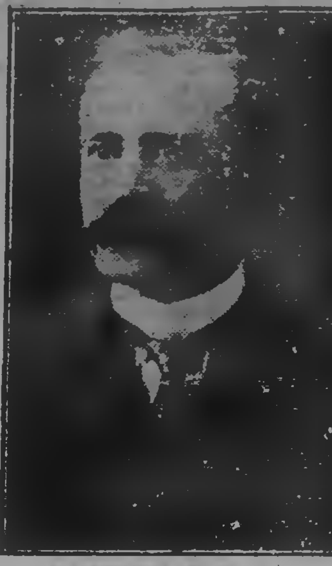
A real agricultural setting was provided at a harvest thanksgiving service, held in connection with a parish church in England. The service took place in the well-filled rickyard of a farmstead. The vicar, the Rev C. Harrison, the assistant curates the churchwardens, and the choir during the singing of the processional hymn, took up their places in a space surrounded by corn and bayricks and agricultural implements, and the vicar delivered his sermon from a farmer's waggon. A large congregation, attracted no doubt by the novelty of the service, was present.

You can get up a quarrel, but will you be any better off after you have quarreled so fiercely that peace will be agreeable?

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

HON. J. A. CALDER

In selecting as his Minister of Education, Hon. J. A. Calder, Premier Scott of Saskatchewan is recognised as having shewn particularly good judgment. It is not always the case that a minister is chosen because of his particular practical knowledge of the details of the subjects covered by his portfolio. Mr. Calder is an educationist, and from the very outset, proved himself the right man in the right place. He went to his department with no political experience, but has shown that he is as good a politician as an educationist. He comes from that birth place of statesmen, Oxford county,



HON. J. A. CALDER,

Saskatchewan Minister of Education

Ontario, was educated at Ingersol and Winnipeg High Schools and was one of the first graduates of Manitoba University. He entered the teaching profession and from 1890 to 1894 was principal of Moose Jaw High School. He then became inspector of schools for the territories, a position he held until 1900, when he became deputy commissioner of education and it was from this position he stepped into the cabinet.

H. R. H. PRINCESS PATRICIA.

There is always a tendency to appraise the charms of those born in the purple, but now and then one finds a Princess whose good looks are so decided that it is manifest she would have been an acknowledged beauty even had she been born in more humble circumstances. And such is certainly the case with regard to Princess Patricia, the only unmarried daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, says a recent English lady writer. She is exceptionally tall, after the manner of the young women of to-day; her figure is well developed by physical exercise, she has a pretty complexion, good features, and, best of all, a really charming expression. Those who talk much with this young Princess remark that she has a curious half-shy way of looking up from under her eyelids when conversing, which many people find decidedly attractive. Who can wonder that directly she came to years of discretion there were rumors of suitors galore for the hand of so desirable a royal lady. Two kings are supposed to have placed their crowns at her feet, but in neither case was she in the least tempted, and that for two reasons. In the first place she was quite firmly resolved never to change her religion, which would in each instance have been a "sine qua non"; in the second, she is equally firmly resolved not to marry a foreigner. So it comes to pass that Princess Patricia remains in single blessedness, though last St. Patrick's Day she kept her twenty-fifth birthday. It is this circumstance, by the way, of having been born on the feast of Ireland's patron saint, as well as the fact that the Duke of Connaught takes his title from Ireland and is called Patrick as well as Arthur, which settled once and for ever this young Princess's name. Intimately, in the family circle, it has been abbreviated into "Patsy," and this pretty diminutive, with Princess by way of prefix, is freely used among her young friends.

WILL POINT THE TRUE NORTH

Compass of Columbus' Days Getting Closed Out, Recent Gyroscope Improvements Helping Man Steer Safer Course.

The magnetic compass, which has been in use by every mariner who sailed the sea since Columbus, is nearing the end of its usefulness, at least for steam vessels. The Bureau of Navigation of the United States has decided that it must go. In its place there is being installed in the warships, the gyroscope compass, which it is said is so far superior to the magnetic compass that they are not in the same class.

So long as ships were built of wood, the magnetic compass was as good a guide as the mariner needed, though its shortcomings were such that to understand its use required much study. To begin with, the magnetic compass, except on a single meridian of longitude, does not point to the North Pole, for the very obvious reason that the magnetic North Pole is many hundreds of miels to the south of it. The effect of this is seem in the fact that in Iceland the compass needle points almost due west, and in Northern Alaska due east. Because of this, allowance must be made for variations before one may know where lies the true north, and before he may discover what allowance to make latitude and longitude must be known.

An examination of the gyro compass shows that its most wonderful feature, next to the way it finds the north, is the tenacity with which it holds it. A magnetic compass is held to its position by a force so slight that a breath will disturb it. The power that holds the gyro to the meridian, on the other hand, is more than 7,000 times as great.

GERMANY IN THE HOLY LAND

It is undeniable that the Holy Land is gradually being Germanized. More than two-thirds of the philanthropic institutions in the way of churches, missions, hospitals, and hospices are in the hands of the Germans. The leading polytechnics, public schools and educational institutes are also governed by them, while quite large German colonies are now to be found in Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Jaffa, and other places. Recent excavations of any importance have been carried out by the Germans, who also virtually control the country's trade. It is well known that the finest and purest bitumen is obtained here, also quantities of excellent sulphur. According to Professor Blackenhorn's report, copper mines have been worked near the south end of the Dead Sea in Byzantine times, and also marble porphyry, and other fine classes of stone are to be found there as well as phosphates.

It has also been stated by American experts that evidences of coal and oil are very apparent. Salt is found in great quantities; but upon this the government holds a monopoly with the curious result that salt is at present imported from Smyrna and England.

Home For Working Girls.

London, Nov. 8.—Queen Mary will devote the $375,000 subscribed by the Marys of the Empire as a coronation gift to the establishment of a seaside home for working girls.

The fund was largely subscribed to by the women of Canada, who rejoice in the name of Mary.

Manhood Suffrage For Britain.

London, Nov. 8.—A deputation composed of 90 members of Parliament waited upon Premier Asquith yesterday evening to memoralise him in favor of adult suffrage, which would enfranchise all persons of both sexes. Arthur Henderson, M.P. for Durham, pointed out that only 7,904,655 persons were enfranchised out of 45,000,000.

The Foreign Minister said that the Government was pledged to manhood suffrage and would introduce a bill to that effect, but it would not include women. The bill, however, he said, would be in such a form that the House could extend it to include women if the House so pleased.

Called Owen Sound Man.

Brantford, Nov. 8.—The congregation of Zion Presbyterian Church here has extended a unanimous call to Rev. G. A. Woodside of Owen Sound. In the event of his acceptance, the church will provide a stipend higher than has been paid to any previous pastor.

The average man isn't very proud when his wife is operated on, but he will say, in talking to his friends: "I suppose Doc. Smith, who did the work, is one of the greatest surgeons in the world."

Deathly Cramps, Stomach was Bloated

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

"The distress I suffered from cramps last summer was so severe I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emerson, of Guys Hill, P. O. "I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

NERVILINE AN INSTANT RELIEF

For cramps, flatulence, diarrhoea and disorders of the stomach and bowels, Nerviline knows no equal—one million bottles used every year—fifty years on the market, that's proof enough of its merit. Large bottles, 50c., trial size, 25c. All dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY TO THE ELECTORS

What the Government Has Done Since Entrusted to Power

A MINISTER OF POWER

The Hydro-Electric Commission to Be Superseded by a New Cabinet Minister

Sir James Whitney, Prime Minister of Ontario, in announcing that the date of the elections would be December 11th, issued the following statement to the Electors of the Province:

Gentlemen: Nearly seven years have elapsed since you entrusted the government of the province to my colleagues and myself, and in June, 1908, you signified, by an overwhelming majority, your approval of the record we had made up to that time.

Shortly stated, we had, in a little more than three years:

Abolished the numbered ballot.

Taken the first step towards the creation of agricultural schools by appointing district representatives in agriculture, and largely increased the expenditure for agricultural purposes.

Reconstructed the administration and financial resources of the provincial university.

Revised the mining laws and taken a cabinet minister from New Ontario.

Restored the old law relating to county councils.

Imposed taxation upon the railways, one-half of which goes to the municipalities.

Put an end to the granting of subsidies to railways.

Created a railway and municipal board.

Reduced the price of school books by one-half and destroyed the school book ring.

Revised the public school system, created a consultative council, to which the teachers elect representatives, and provided for large grants in aid of payment of teachers' salaries.

Honestly and successfully enforced the Liquor License Law.

Extended the government railway.

Brought the Hydro-Electric scheme forward and in sight of completion.

Increased the expenditure for the construction of colonization roads and encouraged the development of New Ontario.

Put the provincial finances on a sound and stable footing, doubled the provincial revenue, and put upon the statute book a large amount of important and constructive legislation.

Education and Agriculture.

Since then we have gone on endeavoring to discharge our duties with an eye solely to the best interests of the people, and, among the results of our policy and our administration of the finances of the province are the following:

The amount payable towards the salaries of teachers in public schools has been increased until this year such aid will amount to about $475,000.

We have devised a system for industrial training in urban schools liberally aided by money grants.

A course in agriculture for public school teachers has been established in the Agricultural College at Guelph.

The amount to be paid to the University of Toronto this year will reach to about the sum of $485,000.

The amount appropriated this year for the construction of colonization roads is $582,000.

The amount of revenue collected by each department of the government has largely increased.

Great success has attended the work done by district representatives in agriculture attached to a number of our collegiate institutes and high schools. In several instances municipal councils have increased their remuneration and there is a general demand for them from all sections of the province.

The commissioner appointed to collect information regarding legislation affecting the compensation for injuries to workmen and to report a bill in that behalf has made good progress with the very important matter he has in charge.

The erection of the new Central Prison buildings at Guelph has been commenced. A large part of the work has been done by the prisoners and the results fully testify the experiment tried by the provincial secretary of treating the prisoners as not unworthy of trust rather than as ordinary convicts.

The board of parole instituted by the provincial secretary has proved to be an unqualified success, and great good has already resulted from the operation of it.

The main line of the Ontario Government Railway has been completed to Cochrane on the G. T. P. Railway, distance of 253 miles, and the Porcupine branch it is expected will be completed to Matagami River before the end of the present year, when the railway, with branches, will have about 380 miles in operation. Surveys for a possible extension of the line have been made as far north as James Bay, in case it is decided to continue the line to that point.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY

An engagement has been entered into with the Grand Trunk Railway for running rights of its trains over the line in consideration of which the company assumes an equitable share of the general maintenance of the road and pays the sum of $300,000 per annum as rental for such running rights, this sum representing one-half of the interest on the total cost of construction of the railway.

The Power Question

The great scheme for the utilization of electric power has, after many vicissitudes and in the face of bitter and relentless opposition, been accomplished and is now in operation and practically within reach of the farmers and other residents in the villages and rural districts, and I am glad to say that the cost of construction has been $85,000 less than the estimated cost. It should not be forgotten that this policy of the government contemplates the furnishing of electric power at cost to all sections of the province, but great efforts have been made by interested individuals to hamper and prevent the carrying out of the intentions of the government in the central and eastern parts of the province. So far have these efforts gone that in all probability we shall be compelled to use the powers given us by statute with reference to expropriation.

I cannot dismiss this subject without referring to the very patriotic and unselfish exertions of Hon. Adam Beck, chairman, and his colleagues of the Hydro-Electric Commission, Hon. J. S. Hendrie and Mr. W. K. McNaught, M.P.P. To their continuous and unselfish labors may be ascribed a large part of the credit for the success of this great enterprise, and I doubt if our history shows a similar instance of devotion to public interest without fee or reward. I may say also that in our opinion, the time has come when, having regard to the conduct of public business under our system, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission should be discontinued and a new department of government created which should take charge of this great work and the head of which should be a cabinet minister. For several reasons this change is desirable.

Mining Revenues.

In 1904 the value of our mineral output was something over $11,000,000, while in 1910 it was more than $40,000,000, and the revenue from mining sources has increased from an average of over $70,000 per annum to an average of over $771,000 per annum.

Immigrants to the number of nearly 8,000 were brought into the province by the department of colonization and located in the year 1910, and the figures for the current year, when available, will show an increase.

What is practically a new wing of the Parliament buildings, which will provide a large increase of much-needed office accommodations, is nearly finished, as is also the new and additional wing to the north of and adjoining the main building.

A very desirable site for a new government house has been purchased and contracts for the foundation and the stone work have been let; the site of the present Government House has been sold and the purchase money will suffice to pay the cost of the new site and new building, leaving a considerable sum for maintenance of the latter.

The Central Prison and Lunatic Asylum properties have been sold for the sum of $1,025,000, the succession duties for the current year have passed the million-dollar mark, while the revenue as a whole has continued to increase, and this year will be considerably over $8,000,000, as compared with a little less than one-half that sum in 1904.

Reasons for Dissolution.

The above is a hurried resume of some of the results achieved under the auspices of the government, the benefits resulting from which the province is now enjoying, and I now come to the question of dissolution of the legislative assembly.

The life of the existing assembly already exceeds in length the life of its predecessor, and there are eleven vacant seats in the house caused by the death of the esteemed late member for West Victoria, Mr. Fox; by the resignations of eight other members—seven of whom have been elected to the House of Commons—and by the resignation of Hon. Frank Cochrane, who has accepted the portfolio of railways and canals in the new government of Canada, and by whose departure the government, the Legislative Assembly, and the Province have alike suffered a serious loss.

A large expenditure—$15,000 or more—would have been incurred by holding by-elections to fill these vacancies, and the expenditure would have to be repeated within a year.

Under our system the practice favors a dissolution before the expiration of the life of the legislative assembly by effluxion of time, and the facts as stated are ample justification for a dissolution now, and, in face of the public notice given by me some weeks ago, it cannot be urged that anyone has been taken by surprise.

But there are other reasons why my colleagues and I desire to consult the electorate—reasons of great and vital importance, having regard to the development of the province and the prosperity of its people.

New Ontario.

The question of the further opening up and development of New—or Northern—Ontario, is obviously of great importance and should be dealt with without delay. In this great work of development the government has been handicapped in the past. Ordinarily the provincial government spends large sums of money annually for immigration purposes resulting in large additions to the population. The Dominion Government expends money for similar purposes on a much larger scale, but so far with practically no benefit to Ontario, and this for more than one reason.

The only result of the additions to our population in the newer districts, as far as the government of the province is concerned, is that the annual general provincial expenditure is increased, while the Dominion treasury receives large sums annually by reason of the increased consumption of goods paying tariff duties, and in the older sections of the province the amounts received for municipal taxation are increased.

Under these circumstances we have felt that, in the face of the facts as stated, financial aid should be afforded us by the Dominion Government in the work of immigration and development generally, and our views in this respect have been put before the public by me on several occasions.

It was, therefore, with much satisfaction that my colleagues and I took note of the announcement some time ago by Mr. Borden, now the prime minister of Canada, that if he came into power he would favor the giving of financial aid by the Dominion to the province in the work of immigration to New Ontario, the construction of permanent highways ofn the province, and for providing practical instruction in agriculture. We must be ready, therefore, to do whatever may be necessary on our part in order that the moneys to be appropriated by the Dominion Government for these three great purposes may be used to the best advantage. In this connection it is believed that any scheme of development, including the construction of highways, wholly or partially by means of such financial aid or in conjunction with moneys appropriated by the province, will in all probability necessitate the enactment of statutory provisions of a very important character in order that such financial aid, together with any additional appropriations by the legislative assembly, may be applied with the best results.

Bonus for T. & N. O. Railway.

Further, under the rule and practice of the Dominion Government before, during and since the completion of the construction of the Ontario Government Railway, the Dominion Parliament appropriated to railways constructed by individuals and companies a bonus or subsidy of $6,400 per mile, but, although requested more then once to grant a similar subsidy to the Ontario Government Railway, the late Dominion Government steadily refused such request. In our opinion the province has in this matter not received the treatment to which it was undoubtedly entitled, and my colleagues and I are strongly of opinion that, having regard to the very great importance of these questions, the people of the province should be given the opportunity of pronouncing without delay:

(1) As to the advisability of further provincial appropriations if necessary to any scheme of development by reason of the financial aid to be given by the Dominion Government, and also of any statutory enactment which may be found to be necessary under the circumstances aforementioned;

(2) Whether the government of the province shall continue to urge upon the Dominion Government the payment of the said bonus or subsidy on account of the construction or the said T. & N. O. Railway, known as the Ontario Government Railway; and

(3) Whether a department of government shall be created, with a cabinet minister at its head, to take over and carry on the work heretofore done by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

To conclude, my colleagues and I feel that the people of the province are fairly well acquainted with the record of our efforts in the public interest. No attack worthy of notice has been made upon us for anything we have done or left undone. Our acts speak for themselves. We realize that, being mortal, we have made mistakes, but we submit that our mistakes have been few, and I conclude by expressing our earnest appreciation of the confidence heretofore reposed in us, and with a determination to deserve a continuation of it in the future should the opportunity be given us.

I remain, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. P. WHITNEY.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Serious news is received daily from Angola, Portuguese West Africa. A revolt among the natives is spreading rapidly and they are burning and pillaging everything in their path.

The roof of a Grand Trunk freight car was blown off at Kingston yesterday in a peculiar manner. It was loaded with corn, and the contents became moistened and fermented.

Burglars Monday night blew open the safe at the office of Robertson, Nicoll & Co., at Smith's Falls, using nitro-glycerine. They only took about $5 in silver and some insurance papers.

John Pettifier of North Cloyne shot himself in the right arm, and it is feared it will have to be amputated. He had to drive thirty miles to get a train to reach Kingston for medical treatment.

A tract of land 300 acres in extent, and situated northwest of the asylum building at Orillia, has been selected as a site for the establishment of the Government farm in connection with the asylum.

The flour and planing mills of R. O. Konkle, two miles from Beamsville, were completely destroyed by fire yesterday, entailing a loss of over $9,000. It is supposed some person dropped a match or cigar stub among the shavings.

Docrithe Raymond, of Three Rivers, Que., a lad of 16, was accidentally killed Monday afternoon when he slipped, and grasped a wire which had got crossed with the city's lighting system wires. He was electrocuted.

Leaky Gas Jet Causes Fatal Fire.

Elmira, N.Y., Nov. 7—Walter Tompkins, a prominent fruit grower, his wife and 14-year-old son, perished in the flames which destroyed his home at Addison, N.Y., Sunday night. A railway engineer saw the flames and shrieked a fire alarm with the locomotive whistle. The blaze is thought to have started from a leaky gas jet.

WOMEN CROOKS ARE NOT CUTE

Study by Criminal Expert Shows that the Lady Lawbreaker Too Often Neglects to Cover Up Her Tracks.

Several recent crimes in which women played the leading part have moved the French writer, Jean Frollo, to study women criminals.

The woman criminal, he says, never displays in her exploits what is known as the "simplicity of genius." Her crimes are always too complex, too ramified to escape close observation on the part of close investigators. There is plenty of ingenuity in them —more perhaps than in those of men —but where the man criminal leaves the one inevitable overlooked point the female of that class will leave a dozen.

In particular do many essentially feminine attributes display themselves in women after the commission of a crime. Frollo assures us that criminal woman cannot conceal her secret. She must blab; and as another trait is her unfailing desire for sympathy in her hour of tribulation, it follows that the inevitable confident is bound in long, or short time, to extract the secret from the peccant feminine.

And as for returning, like all criminals, to the scene of the committed crime, woman is far worse, in this case, than man. Just as when injured woman intends to take her life she always returns to take it where her traducer stabbed her heart, and her love, so the woman who has committed a foul crime always returns to the theatre of tragedy.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

H. R. H. DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

His Royal Highness, who is formally known under the title of His Royal Highness, Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, was born May 1st, 1850, and married, March 13th, 1879, Princess Louise Margaret Alexandra Victoria Agnes, who was born July 25th, 1860, the daughter of Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia.

The Duke of Connaught is of the twenty-eighth generation which is descended from William the Conqueror, who became King of England in 1066. Taking the average life of a generation as thirty years, and multiplying that number by twenty-eight, yields 840, which if added to 1066 makes the year 1906, which is near enough for all practical purposes.

Being of royal lineage the new governor-general is a prince; but by a curious fiction in England the title of Duke is considered one of superior rank; and a prince shortly after attaining his majority is usually created a Duke. Thus, Prince Alfred was created Duke of Edinburgh, and Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught. Also, he is entitled to be addressed as "Royal Highness", a title reserved for the sons, daughters, grandsons, brothers, sisters, uncles, and aunts on the father's side of the soverign.

THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
Governor General of Canada

Mr. NATHANIEL CURRY,
One of Canada's Self-Made

Mr. Curry, who occupies the important position of President of the big Canada Car and Foundry Company, started as have hundreds more of the good strong citizens of the Dominion, right away, down below the first rung of the ladder. His position today is one more in the long line of encouragements that confront the young men of today who incline to balk in front of the obstacles that may be looming up on their immediate Hill of Difficulty.

Born in King's County, Nova Scotia, March 26, 1851, son of Charles Curry, a farmer of Scots-Irish descent and of Eunice Davidson, of English ancestry, young Nathan gleaned his early education in the common school of his native heath, supplemented in later years by a business college course in another section of the continent. The higher stages of a college curriculum does not seem to have had attractions for young Curry. But he had native determination, some ambition, and owned a whole outfit of health and healthy ability. And he got right where he wanted to be. On the away-up rungs of the ladder.

Mr. Curry's career in brief is worth repeating. It is a bold type encouragement to the youthful Canuck in danger of fainting by the way.

At the comparatively early age of 15, young Curry started to learn the woodworking business (1866) and four years later he went to Boston, Mass., remaining there for a period of one year. He then crossed the continent seeking his fortune at a time when there were many hardships to endure and worked at his trade at Carson City, Nevada, later with the Virginia and Truckee Railroad as Assistant Foreman and Millwright in shops; in this position he remained until 1877, when he went to Amherst, Nova Scotia, and founded the firm of Rhodes, Curry and Company, which has since become well known as leading woodwork manufacturers and building contractors all over the Dominion. In 1893 the company was incorporated and bought the car business of J. Harris and Co, and the concern continued to expand. In 1909 together with the Dominion Car and Foundry Company, and the Canada Car Co. they were merged into the present corporation under the name of The Canadian Car and Foundry Company, the largest in the Dominion, and Mr. Curry was chosen as its President, which position he now holds. He is also President of the Canadian Steel Foundry (formed this year). Mr. Curry was elected Vice-President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, 1910; President, October, 1911; is a director of The Canadian Light and Power Co., of The Bank of Nova Scotia, of the Montreal Trust Co., of the Canadian Coal and Coke Co., of the Travellers Life Insurance Company of Montreal, of the Maritime Coal Railway and Power Co., and various other corporations in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Curry is a member of the Mount Royal, The Engineers, The Canada, The Royal, The Golf, The Caledonian Curling Clubs of Montreal, of the St. Andrew's Society, and of The National Club of Toronto.

If it were not for the fact that most people ask too much, there wouldn't be much use for courts.

Dr Messmore was in his 76th year and leaves besides his widow in India, a son. Mr. J. F. Messmore, of the Collegiate Institute, Simcoe, Ont., and a daughter, Mrs. T. W. McLean, of Omemee, Ontario, to mourn his demise.

At the meeting of the village council last week, a petition was presented asking that at the coming elections of the municipal year, a vote be taken on the repeal of the local option by-law, which has been in operation for about four years. Some of the local clergy and others addressed the civic fathers in support of local option and the matter eventually passed into history by the presentation and carrying of a motion that the council take no action.

Mr. Wm. Glass has returned home from a summer spent in the west, chiefly at Moosejaw, Regina and Virden, where he was employed at his trade of carpentering. He looks well and speaks in terms of admiration of the possibilities of Western Canada, with a desire to visit it again in the near future.

In 1605 an historical event was recorded in England and its memory has not departed even after the lapse of three centuries. The youth of our town were in holiday trim from dark till about 11 p.m. on Saturday night, which was chosen for the public demonstration. They were in disguise and spent the earlier portion of the evening in fun on the streets. About 9.30 o'clock, the grand procession was formed and headed by a fifer and a train of torch-bearers, the main business thoroughfare was paraded with the effigy of Guy Fawkes on a wagon and guarded by a policeman, a number of youths drew the hippodrome. The objective point of the procession was a promontory of the Pigeon river just south of our school, and here a huge pile of inflammable material was piled and on the top was placed Mr. Guy. Torches were applied to the pile and the 1911 effigy soon became evanescent and completed the enaction of a celebration which was witnessed by a large crowd.

Dr. T. G. Brereton, of Bethany, made a professional call on Sunday.

GERMS SPREAD IN SKIN

Eczema, Psoriasis, and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itch, and what seemed a mere rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years and years of misery.

Don't take any chances! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble, but have never—never seen such remarkable cures as those from the D.D.D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

If you have skin trouble of any kind, we certainly advise you to drop in and investigate the merits of D.D.D., or why not drop a line to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.W., 49 Colborne street, Toronto.

We know that D.D.D. will help you.

NEWSY NOTES FROM BENSFORT

Special Correspondence

Bensfort, Nov. 8 — Thanksgiving brought joy to several homes in our community, in the home coming of several of our inhabitants, among whom were the Misses Marjorie and Laura Finnie of Lindsay and Miss Lizzie Fisher of Embro.

Many of our young people enjoyed the concert held in connection with the Centreville Presbyterian church on the evening of Monday, 30th ult., when Mr. Bemrose of Toronto and Miss Tesky of Orillia, were the artists. Mr. Bemrose rendered vocal selections while Miss Tesky, elocutionist, was also a rare treat. One selection in which people were represented to be making improper use of the telephone line by taking down the receivers and listening to other people's business, could not be understood by many and we hope the suggestion may not put evil in the minds of any of our respective telephone lines.

Much has been said in regard to a lady plougher and the topic is no doubt becoming monotonous to some. Bensfort is unjustly termed by Lorens as being jealous, in not having a lady plougher and while he attacks the ladies for indulging in more frivolous labor, and less healthful it might be well to remark that men also engage in as frivolous work as ladies do, and that few ladies are healthy enough to engage in the work which he terms healthful, and besides should farmers wives and daughters persist in doing such outdoor work, the farm labourer would also be a sufferer, in that he could only procure work for a short season. This would render it difficult to procure help at all, as under existing conditions, such help is at a premium, and while we do not object to ladies helping to pick turnips, or other outdoor work if considered a case of necessity, for the sake of the ladies we would not desire to see the principle made chronic.

Mrs. John Emberson returned on Saturday from visiting friends in Bowmanville.

Mr. Thos. Munro and Mr Charles Wicks are representing us on the jury at Cobourg this week.

Messrs Harry Finnie, Hiram Shaw and Harry Nicholson have just returned from the North West where they have been harvesting during the past two months.

Miss Viola Wood is the guest of her brother, Dr. H. A. Wood of Peterboro.

Mr. Everett Wood had a somewhat miraculous escape in Peterboro a short time ago. His horses became unmanageable at the approach of an automobile. Mr. Wood was thrown from his waggon and received slight injuries. The horses were captured and he returned in safety feeling little the worse for his exciting experience.

Mr. Harry Clemens has been quarantined during the past week on account of scarlet fever in the family. Two children had recovered and a third was taken ill before the cause was discovered. Dr. Russell is in attendance.

Four of our sports commenced firing in the vicinity of Rice Lake on Thanksgiving with a volley, no doubt resembling that recorded in ancient history, with the result that upwards of sixty ducks were slain.

Mrs. Hicks of Vancouver arrived during the past week, having been notified of the serious illness of her brother, Mr. Edward Stirton, for whom little hope of recovery is expressed.

Miss McDonald of Embro, Ont., spent Thanksgiving at Mr. Robert Fisher's.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Ann Sandy

Peterborough lost one of her oldest residents at five o'clock this morning, when Mary Ann Ellery, relict of the late John Sandy, who predeceased her fifty-two years, and mother of Mr. Frank Sandy, local G.T.R. station agent, passed away at her son's residence, 260 Stewart street.

The late Mrs. Sandy, who was widely known in the city, was born in Cornwall, England, eighty-three years ago, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Ellery. She was married to the late Mr. Sandy at an early age, and came to Canada with him about sixty years ago, settling at Bowmanville. Eight years after coming to this country the husband passed away, leaving the wife and four sons to survive her. Mrs. Sandy took up her residence in Peterborough shortly after her bereavement, with her son, Mr. Frank Sandy, and excepting seven years spent with him in Stirling, has resided here.

A member of Charlotte street Methodist church, she was always deeply interested in its welfare.

Those left to mourn her loss are her four sons, Messrs. John and Henry Sandy, Manvers township, Samuel Sandy, of Rochester, N.Y., and Frank Sandy, city.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 o'clock Friday afternoon, from the residence of Mr. Frank Sandy, 260 Stewart street, to Little Lake cemetery. Service will be held at the house at two o'clock.

FETTERED TO CRUEL HUSBAND

Wife is Afraid Her Life May be Taken

Fettered for life to a man who is addicted to strong drink and to use her own words, living in mortal fear of her life, a sad tale was recounted in police court this morning by a young women, who appeared as a witness against her husband, who was arraigned on a charge of being intoxicated on the night of October 31st, and while under the influence of the liquor, of assaulting his wife. The assault consisted of his slapping her face over a few words following the accidental breaking of a tea-pot.

F. D. Kerr was engaged in the prisoner's defence. A plea of not guilty was entered.

The wife stated that her husband had threatened to take his life, and carried a razor in his pocket, and on once occasion went up stairs and secured a gun, afterwards remarking that "there was a quicker way than that," presumably referring to the razor.

So overcome did the woman become that she broke down in court and her agitation and nervousness was plainly apparent.

His Worship suggested a mutual effort on the part of the two to strive for peaceful relations, but the wife said she would have absolutely nothing more to do with him. She is at present dwelling with her mother.

License Inspector, Joseph Stewart laid the information in connection with the lamentable state of affairs which resulted in the arrest of the husband.

WINTER SEED FAIRS TO BE HELD

Opportunity to Seed Grain Growers to Exhibit

Seed grain growers should avail themselves of the opportunity for advertising afforded by the winter exhibitions at Guelph (December 11-16) and Ottawa (January 16-19). In the general class prizes of $1, $2, $3 and $5 are offered for two-bushel lots of seed grain representing seed for sale. In addition to that, through the Ontario Fairs' Association, large prizes are offered to winning competitors in the field crop competitions. In oats, for instance, ten prizes are offered, from $3 to $25. Yonge street, York county, divides the districts for showing at Guelph or Ottawa.

This season there is bound to be a big demand for seed grain at good prices. The hot wave which passed over Ontario while the grain was filling caused a lot of it to shrink, and plump, well-filled grain will consequently be at a premium. This is shown by the price of barley.

As these fairs are attended each year by an increasing number of visitors, they give a splendid opportunity for buyers and sellers to meet and arrange their deals. Members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association should be alert and put up strong exhibits. As soon as fall work is well enough advanced, farmers should get their seed ready. It would be well to apply at once to A. P. Westervelt or E. D. Elderkin, Parliament Building, Toronto, for the two prize lists.

WAS FINED $2

A man named Percy Parkinson pleaded guilty of being drunk in a public place yesterday, when arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble to-day.

"Did you put $2 away in your pockets before you went out on your spree," asked His Worship.

"Yes, your Honor, I have a little money," was the reply.

It was a $2 fine to be paid forthwith.

RESIGNATION OF BALFOUR IS SENSATION OF DAY IN BRITAIN

Increasing Age and Internal Revolt Cause of Resignation of the Unionist Leader—Tariff Reformers Wondering Now.

London, Nov. 9.—The Unionist party is to swap horses while crossing the home rule stream. Arthur J. Balfour at an emergency meeting of the City of London Conservative Association yesterday afternoon announced to his constituents his retirement from the leadership of the Opposition.

Impaired health, increasing age and the desirability of the leadership passing into younger hands, were the reasons which he gave for this step in a speech which was marked by much feeling. But no one doubts that the increasing attacks against him by the ambitious younger Conservatives, particularly the tariff reformers, were the principal factor in inspiring his decision.

While a number of influential Unionists and would-be leaders, notably Austen Chamberlain and F. E. Smith, have been demanding the retirement from the leadership, few believed that Mr. Balfour would drop the helm in such an important stage of the party's fortunes.

The announcement was a sharp surprise to all parties and made an immense political sensation. No sooner was Mr. Balfour's withdrawal known than reports were circulated that Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, who shared in the attacks, would accompany his colleague to the background. But Lord Lansdowne issued a denial of this last night.

HON. A. J. BALFOUR.

Mr. Balfour will remain in the House of Commons, although he would be elevated to the peerage if he so desired. While he, as ex-Premier, was recognized as the leader of the whole party, the leadership will now be divided, his successor sharing it with Lord Lansdowne. That successor doubtless will be the Right Hon. Walter Hume Long who represents The Strand. A caucus has been called for Monday for the purpose of choosing a new leader. Mr. Long commands the confidence of the older and younger elements of the party.

Advanced tariff reformers favor Austen Chamberlain, and Sir Edward Henry Carson, Dublin University, and F. E. Smith, Walton division of Liverpool, cherish ambitions for Mr. Balfour's shoes.

Mr. Balfour was received in audience yesterday afternoon by the King and informed His Majesty of his decision. During the course of his speech before his constituents he said: "I desire to leave the position of heavy responsibility which I hold before I can be suspected of suffering from

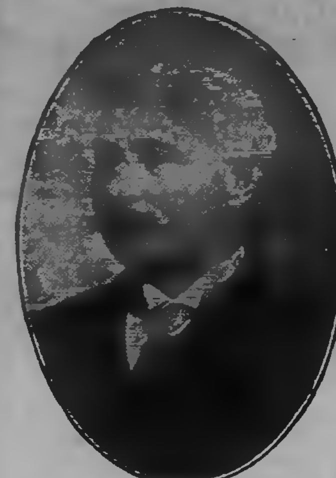
TWO STRONG WHITNEY LIEUTENANTS

HON. W. J. HANNA



HON. JAMES S. DUFF, M.P.P.

LEADER ROWELL WILL TAKE NORTH OXFORD AS HIS SEAT

Dr. Mackay May Vacate for Him—A. G. Mackay Nominated by Owen Sound Liberals.

Woodstock, Nov. 9.—At a meeting of the North Oxford Reform Association here yesterday it was decided to accept the resignation of Dr. A Mackay, M.P.P., who, during the last two or three days has been urged upon to vacate his seat in this riding in favor of N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition.

The meeting was held in private in one of the upper chambers of the Liberal Clubroom, and those in authority had very little for publication regarding what business was transacted. It is understood, however, that the debate regarding the resignation of Dr. Mackay became warm at times. More than one of those present, it is stated, expressed opposition to the move to bring Mr. Rowell into North Oxford.

After the meeting it was stated that a mass meeting would be held on Saturday, Nov. 11, when a new candidate will be nominated. It is easy to predict that N. W. Rowell will be the chosen one.

Previous to the meeting, Dr. Mackay, who has represented the riding of North Oxford since the last election, made the following statement:

"It can be considered no secret that I have been asked to vacate my seat in North Oxford. The Opposition considers that North Oxford is a safe seat to offer to Mr. Rowell. They asked me to give way to him, and I have consented to do so, subject to the approval of the Liberals of North Oxford. The matter is being considered by the executive committee this afternoon, and if they endorse the proposed arrangement everything will be satisfactory to me."

MacKay Nominated.

Owen Sound, Nov. 9.—At the Liberal convention held here yesterday Hon. A. G. MacKay was the unanimous choice, and he will take the field in opposition to Mr. G. M. Boyd, the Conservative candidate. No other name was placed before the delegates. Addresses were delivered by James E. Keenan, Owen Sound; C. W. Proudfoot, M.P.P. for Centre Huron, and A. G. MacKay.

The latter's address dealt chiefly with the charges contained in a writ issued against him some time ago. He also attacked the Government's Hydro-electric policy, and their course in dealing with the province's educational problems.

Briefly he touched upon a few of the instances where the Whitney Government had failed to live up to expectations. There was the miserable bungling of educational affairs, the unfairness of the assessment laws, the bilingual difficulties, and the unfairness in the distribution of Niagara power.

At the close of his address Mr. MacKay said: "It has been said that I cannot consistently be a temperance advocate because it is known that I have not been a total abstainer. I now make you the promise from the public platform that henceforth, so long as I am in public life, I will ever be an absolute and teetotal abstainer."

Mr. Proudfoot, M.P.P. for Centre Huron, expressed great regret that Mr. MacKay had felt that he should resign the leadership. He said that for the greater part the present Liberal provincial platform was composed of policies advanced and fought for by Mr. MacKay while he was leader. He ended by severely arraigning the course of the department with regard to the liquor license law, and particularly in local option towns. As Mr. MacKay had advised, he thought the only solution was to take the whole affair out of the hands of politicians and place it under a commission.

Incorrigible.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 9.—Joseph Piccarelli, aged 17, who was given suspended sentence two weeks ago for stealing knives from the Ontario Silver Co., was yesterday sentenced to six months in the Central for the theft of an umbrella.

Jury Worth $50,000,000.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Seldom in the history of this city has so much wealth been represented as was in the County Detention Hospital, where many of Chicago's richest citizens had been called by Judge Owen to sit as jurors in insanity cases.

All traffic in Wood street, which passes the Detention Hospital, was stopped while the "$50,000,000 jury," as it was called, was in session. More costly automobiles than are ordinarily seen at one time west of the river were drawn up in front of the curb.

I.C.R. and Railway Commission.

Halifax, Nov. 9.—The council of the Halifax Board of Trade yesterday discussed the placing of the Intercolonial Railway under the railway commission as proposed by the Montreal Board of Trade. A resolution was adopted that this would be unadvisable.

CROP REPORT FOR THE U. S.

MASKED MEN HOLD UP CLERKS GET AWAY WITH SOME SWAG

Officers Chased Them Into a River, and Lost Them in Darkness.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Nov. 9.—Three masked men with drawn revolvers walked into the office of the Ogdensburg Coal & Towing Co. here yesterday and demanded that the clerks hand over the money in the safe. The money, amounting to several hundred dollars, was produced with considerable celerity and the robbers fled with it.

Two of them succeeded in getting away after a long chase by officers, during which several shots were exchanged as the men fled through the woods and escaped by fording the Oswegatchie River, with the water up to their waists. The coming of darkness made further pursuit impossible.

The third bandit, who fled in another direction, was captured while he was trying to get across the Canadian border.

Most of the stolen money was recovered.

PROBABILITIES

Strong breezes to moderate gales easterly, fair to-day; showery during the night and on Friday.

Stabbed Policeman With Pin.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Emphasizing her objection to arrest with a vigorous jab of a hatpin, Aldina Fagan gave Constable Trudeau a serious wound in the early hours of the morning when he insisted that she accompany him from the corner of Mansfield and Lagauchetiere streets to No. 6 police station. Loitering was the charge upon which the arrest was made, and the prisoner, struggling when the constable was obliged to use strenuous measures, finally succeeded in freeing her right hand, with which she promptly extracted the pin from her hat and drove the feminine weapon with all her strength into the policeman's back. The steel snapped and half the pin remained imbedded in the officer's flesh.

At the station the woman behaved in a manner bordering on insanity.

CANADIANS OBJECT TO STARS AND STRIPES AT PICTURE SHOWS.

STARS AND STRIPES PICTURE, BARRED BY CANADIANS.

"Cut out the Stars and Stripes." This was the admonition pasted on a returned film which several days ago gave warning of a campaign that will be started November 1 by Ontario, through its Board of Censors, against the display in moving picture shows of the American flag and American deeds of valor. Recent disturbances throughout the province caused the move, according to George B. Armstrong, chairman of the Board. In one instance an audience became so insistent that the proprietor was forced to withdraw a pictorial drama in which the United States flag appeared

FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND ARE HOMELESS IN CHINESE CITY

Destruction of Hankow Confirmed—Fifty Million Dollars Damage Done—Missions Are Safe in Terrible Fire.

Hankow, Nov. 5.—(via Wuhu, Nov. 9.)—The City of Hankow has been destroyed by fire over two-thirds of its extent. The lowest estimate of the loss is $50,000,000. Four hundred thousand people are destitute. Hundreds of half-burned bodies lie among the ruins. Many of them are the bodies of women and children.

The customs house, the postoffice, and the American missions have been spared.

The city has been looted, the Imperialists taking a hand in the pillage. Imperialist officers tried to check this work, and executed a number of the soldiers. Refugees were deprived of their loot on entering the British concession, cart loads of valuable furs, silks and jewelry being seized. It is suggested that the Red Cross receive the proceeds.

On Friday afternoon the consuls appealed to the Imperialists to cease burning the town. A proclamation, which was issued immediately, declared that the rebels were responsible for the fires and ordered that these be checked. The following day new fires started in various quarters.

The David Hill Memorial School for the Blind, connected with the Wesleyan Mission, has been looted, while, in contrast, all the mission property in Wu Chang, which is held by the revolutionaries, has been protected.

On Nov. 3 there was considerable gunnery practice, beginning before daylight. The Imperialist battery behind Hankow moved to the southwest, in belated fulfilment of the promise to shift the line of fire from the concessions. This battery and another stationed on the plains engaged in a heavy duel with Han Yang Hill. The Wu Chang forts used powder occasionally and joined in the defence of Han Yang.

A few hundred of the revolutionists are still in Hankow. Sniping riflemen on opposite sides of the Han River fought all day Saturday, and there has been similar fighting yesterday, but steadily decreasing in volume. There is much open revolutionary talk among the Imperialists.

Foreigners who have not been given the opportunity of witnessing the engagements except at a distance, are hearing horrifying stories of brutality. The Imperialists have hanged men, and, failing to strangle them, tortured them to death, prodded them with bayonets or crushed them to death with stones. The outrages against women cannot be told. Red Cross bearers have been killed or wounded. Soldiers on both sides have slaughtered their wounded enemies.

It was ascertained that Yuan Shi Kai is in the neighborhood but he is keeping his presence hidden. It is suspected that he went aboard a British gunboat, and it is reported that he has been interviewing republican leaders secretly.

A thousand revolutionary soldiers from Hu Nan reached Wu Chang on Monday. At Ichang and other river ports the Republicans are collecting the customs dues. Secret societies, it is reported, are gaining control in Sze Chuen. The mobs at Kia King are violent.

The revolutionaries commandeered a British tug, which was proceeding up river with two lighters of coal. It was suspected that the coal was destined for Admiral Sah's fleet. A British gunboat made a demand for the captured boats, which were afterward restored by the revolutionists.

Two thousand trained soldiers have arrived from the Poyang district, Kiang Si. A night or two ago the forts sunk an Imperialist gunboat, which was seeking to pass down the river, accompanied by torpedo boats. The latter escaped.

THE REGENT IS MENTALLY UPSET

No Head to the Imperial Court in Crisis

Pekin, Nov. 9.—It is semi-officially stated that the Regent Prince Chung is incapable of connected thought, and that the nobles are unable to agree upon a definite line of action.

According to consular reports the Government is losing the few remaining centres south of the Yang-Tse Kiang.

Nanking has gone over to the revolutionists in consequence of the Government's instructions to the viceroy at Nanking that he should not further resist the rebels.

The Tartar general Tuan Fang demurred, but his force of 4,000 Manchus was insufficient for the defence of the city. (This probably official version does not agree with the direct despatches from Nanking yesterday, which describe fighting there.)

Woman Struck by Car.

Toronto, Nov. 9—Mrs. Sarah Haines, 65 years of age, who lives at 163 Claremont street, is in the Western Hospital in a serious condition, suffering from internal injuries sustained at 7.55 last night, when she was struck at Manning avenue and Arthur street by eastbound Dundas car No. 1,546.

Mrs. Haines was crossing south on Arthur street when, being deaf, she did not hear the approaching car and was struck. She was attended by Dr. McKay, who sent her to the hospital in the police ambulance.

Merger Is O.K.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—The public utilities commission yesterday examined the charge entered by Senator Beique against the proposed merger of Montreal Street Railway and allied corporations, and decided that after a full investigation of financial arrangements they found nothing whatever to justify interference on the part of the Quebec Public Utilities Commission.

OPENING MEETING

Premier Whitney Will Start at Hagersville Nov. 16th

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Nov. 9—Sir James Whitney will open his campaign at Hagersville in Haldimand county, on Thursday, November 16. The formal announcement of this meeting is expected to be made to-night as the premier intimated this morning that he would have something to give to the press. Other dates for the premier's campaign will be made public.

Mr. Rowell, the opposition leader, said to-day that he was not yet ready with his itinerary. It would be some days before he would make the announcement.

TWO GENERALS ASSASSINATED

Revolutionists Fear and Kill Two of Their Leaders

Special to the Review.

Shanghai, Nov. 9— Because their mutual jealousy, threatened disaster to the revolutionary cause, generals Chi and Tseng, in charge of the rebel forces at Chang Sha, were assassinated by their own comrades to-day. Tien Tsin, port of Pekin, is likely to be seized by the rebels immediately.

TWO JURORS GET EXCUSED

Only Three Men in the Box for the McNamara Trial

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 9.—Three out of five veniremen balked at being sworn as jurymen in the McNamara murder trial at the opening of court yesterday.

Byron Lisk, mill owner, William F. Clark, retired farmer, and Sam Mendenhall, orange grower, were the men who objected.

"Rise and be sworn gentlemen," said the court. Lisk and Clark both started explanatory protests, which the judge cut short. Mendenhall sat still. Across the room sat his wife and the family physician, who had told the court that Mendenhall's mother probably could not live. His father died two months ago.

"Do you affirm, Mr. Mendenhall?" asked Clerk Monroe.

"No," said Mendenhall, "I swear when there is occasion for it. There is none now. I have a reasonable and fair excuse."

"Your excuse will have due consideration," said the court. Mendenhall then took the oath. Immediately after, by agreement of counsel, the court took them into his chambers, one at a time, and heard their excuses.

The court excused Clark because of ill-health, and Mendenhall because of his mother's illness. Lisk was retained. This left three jurors in the box. Byron Lisk, Robert F. Bain and F. D. Green.

INDEPENDENCE FOR CANTON

Aerial Corps For Canada.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—Hon. Sam Hughes is evidently determined to add an aerial corps to the strength of the Canadian militia. Not satisfied with the results of the recent investigations at Atlantic City of the experiments, by the United States army, the Minister of Militia now proposes to send Canadian officers to England to study the progress which has been made by the War Office in the art of military operations in the air, and upon their report will depend the decision as to form which Canada's new corps shall take.

WAS IN THE WATER SINCE JANUARY

Port Hope, Nov. 8—The body of John Fishleigh, who was drowned in the harbor here on January 6th, was found this afternoon. The dredge was working just west of the freight shed and the body was brought up in the large dipper.

It will be remembered that deceased came here from the west on January 6th and registered at the St. Lawrence. He left the hotel late that night, stating that he was going to stay at Mr. Jacob Greenaway's. It is supposed that he lost his way and fell into the harbor. Mr. Elliott, night foreman at the Standard Ideal, was attracted by his cries but was unable to reach him before he went down. From the description given by Mr. Elliott it was almost a certainty that John Fishleigh was the unfortunate man, but every effort to recover the body proved fruitless. When found to-day the boots were gone but all the rest of the clothing was in place and very few marks upon the body. The remains have been identified as those of John Fishleigh and the question of an inquest has not been decided.

The body was recovered at the exact spot where Fishleigh was supposed to have fallen in.

HEBERT CASE ON

Legal Battle Over Marriage Starts

Probably Appeal Will be Taken to Privy Council

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Preliminary proceedings in the trial of the famous Hebert marriage case began yesterday morning with the evidence of Mrs. Hebert. She declared that she had been a Roman Catholic at the time of her marriage to Mr. Hebert, that she had been married before a Protestant minister and that she had been prevented from appearing in the case by the fear that Hebert would deprive her of their child in the event of a trial and that he had also offered her a sum of money to let the action go by default.

This evidence was given under the objections of Messrs. Cousins and Wainwright and motion will be made to-day to have certain portions of it struck out as illegal.

Argument in the case will take place next Monday morning when Mr. Eugene Hebert will be represented by J. E. Godin, K.C., and Aime Geoffrion, K.C., and L. J. Lefebvre. Dame Marie Emma Clouature will be represented by G. V. Cousins, and Wainwright, with A. J. Lovat as counsel.

It is expected that a great legal battle will commence to-day that will only end in the Privy Council.

PERJURY CHARGE IS THROWN OUT

Justice Latchford Wouldn't Receive Presentment

Cobourg, Nov. 9.—Mr. Justice Latchford in dismissing the grand jury yesterday who brought in a report of "no bill" on the three counts of the indictment of the charge of perjury against Mr. Henry Hicks, declined to receive any presentment from them.

There is considerable speculation as to whether any further action will be taken on the matter by the prosecution. Mr. Hicks left later in the day for his home in Colborne. He is 76 years of age and quite feeble.

Free Trade Greatest Enemy.

London, Nov. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Addressing the Tariff Reform League, Lord Duncannon said the league's special enemy was free trade, which recently had very heavily been reinforced. Its fighting fund alone exceeded the entire annual income of the tariff league.

Henry Chaplin said to abandon food taxes meant in his judgment the abandonment of the colonial preference. How could they reconcile themselves in such a course after the remarkable manifestations of Canada's opinion?

Proclamation Issued.

Shanghai, Nov. 9.—The military government yesterday issued a long proclamation calling upon all Chinese to join in the life and death struggle, and exhorting the population of the lower provinces against disorders and to everywhere regard the rights of foreigners.

The proclamation further promises the abolition of many taxes hitherto imposed by "the 5,000,000 nomadic tribe which 200 years ago was supported by the liver and brain of 400,000,000 descendants of Han."

Seven Bodies on Wreck.

Emden, Germany, Nov. 9.—A freight steamer arriving from Hamburg yesterday reports having sighted wreckage in which seven bodies were entangled. It is thought that the wreck was that of the unknown steamer which sank off Cuxhaven during the storm of last Monday. The steamer's officers also saw other wreckage floating in the North Sea.

Big Fire In Regina.

Regina, Nov. 9.—One hundred and sixty thousand dollars is the estimated damage done by fire which last night gutted the large warehouse of the American Abell Threshes & Engine Co. The entire contents of the building were destroyed, including a large number of separators and engines. The estimated damage is distributed as follows: Buildings, $10,000; separators and engines, $60,000; repairs, $100,000.

Furnace Blew Up.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 9.—A natural gas furnace in the cellar of the Spirella Corset Co. plant exploded yesterday afternoon. William Graves was unaware that gas had been blown out by the wind. The cellar was filled with gas and a terrific explosion followed his attempt to light a fire. The furnace was destroyed, but Graves escaped injury.

Increased Price of Milk.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 9.—The Wholesale and Retail Milk Dealers' Association yesterday announced an increase in the price of milk from eight cents to nine cents a quart.

HEALTH OF NEW YORK IS MENACED

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Biny Brown, of Tenecape, N.S., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak, if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets which are taken after each meal purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

BI-LINGUAL SCHOOLS

The Orange Sentinel has put in great, flaring letters on its front page this striking sentence—

"The supreme question in Ontario politics is the abolition of bi-lingual schools.

"Will your candidate vote to abolish them?

"Make him tell you."

As far as Peterborough County is concerned, there is very little division among the people as to what should be done in reference to bi-lingual schools. All are agreed on the fundamental principle that the product of Ontario schools should be pupils who know English, and can use it, so that they may be properly fitted for competition with their fellows in the struggle for existence. Not to educate the pupils in Ontario schools in this way is to do them a rank injustice.

Where there are practical difficulties in the way of teaching the beginners in the English language, there should be no difficulty in making an age limit so that at eight or nine or ten years of age, instruction should be in the medium of English alone. It would not be hard for the government to require that all teachers must know English and teach it, even though it had to subsidize the French speaking teachers in the French sections of the province. We believe that when Dr. Merchant's report on bi-lingual" schools is presented, and considered, that some changes along this line will be made. Fairness and justice, and constitutionality must be always observed, even in dealing with a minority, but at the same time the principle that English shall be the language of the public schools of Ontario, must be supreme.

ROWELL'S FAILURE

The failure of the Rowell platform committee to grasp the nettle of provincial prohibition boldly means that it will go into the campaign with stingers in its metaphorical hand. Had Mr. Rowell had the courage to declare for provincial prohibition, there are many people would have felt compelled by conscience to support the Liberals, though in no wise agreeing with them in other respects. But Mr. Rowell had the chance. He has failed to rise to the occasion. He has shown himself neither honest nor bold, when it comes to drafting a radical platform such as many Liberals want. He says nothing of bi-lingual schools, also. Here is another startling omission. Of what use is a platform which dribbles away on trifles, and lets alone the big questions?

Even on the power business, there is no definite pronouncement. Does Mr. Rowell say he will extend the hydro-electric power policy to central Ontario, even if he had to expropriate power or sites to do it? No; he favors merely public ownership, in a general sense, and the utilization of water powers. There is nothing in this plank that can be construed as promising anything different from the present order of things, and in some respects, Mr. Rowell falls far short of the Whitney program.

The Hamilton Spectator says that the platform is of the "Follow-on" variety. It is a "Me, too" document that certainly cannot be said to have created anything but disappointment in those minds which expected something radical with a brand new leader. Of course, the truth of the matter is that there is very little left out of the Whitney program which the Liberals can appropriate as their own. So little is there for them to work on, that they are reduced to the fanciful experiment of extending the T. and N. O. to Hudson Bay, when there is absolutely no call from any quarter for such an extension.

BALFOUR QUITS

The retirement of Hon. A. J. Balfour, the Unionist leader in the British House of Commons, was certainly a surprise, and somewhat of a shock to the great mass of Conservatives in Britain. In spite of the rumblings of discontent which were heard from every quarter of the island kingdom, the removal of Balfour from the leadership was far from the thought of ninety-five per cent of the adherents of the party. Balfour was in a difficult position. He was an exponent and an advocate of the old order of things, while recognising the inevitableness of the new.

Much of the socialistic program of the Asquith government was distasteful to him, repugnant to his naturally aristocratic ideas. He was too keen a man, too broad a scholar, not to realise only too clearly that the last remnants of privilege in Britain were being endangered by the popular discontent. The prospect of having to fight home rule, the National Insurance bill, and the many other great problems which were coming before the country for settlement, was not to the liking of this wonderfully versatile leader.

There is no one in sight, in the Unionist party, who can take the mantle of Balfour. There is no one who measures up to him in breadth, in experience, in mental sweep. But this is not all in a leader, and it is here that Balfour has failed. He has lacked the resolute strength, the ruggedness and robustness of character, to face some of the great national problems. Perhaps while strongly associated with, and inured to the aristocratic traditions of the land, as the son of a daughter of the Marquis of Salisbury, his sympathies lay the other way, and he could not take up the fight of the classes in the way they wished for. Balfour was a man of too broad a sympathy not to feel that he was in a sense the defender of much of which he could not approve.

His resignation leaves the Unionists without a man of predominant characteristics. Whoever they may choose, will acquire years of effort to take the place of the remarkable man vacating the leadership, in the eyes of the nation. It may be that, as a Chinese proverb says, the hour will bring the man, but a survey of possible successors does not look promising. The already tangled politics of the old land promise to become more tangled still.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It should not be such very hard work to splinter that Rowell platform.

Perhaps Mr. Hall may be described as a rounder, seeing that he adopts the circular method of campaigning.

If the Rowell platform had contained one or two more planks, it would have been captured by President Taft to stand on.

Tag day will be on Saturday. Some men carry their label on their noses, but in this cause it will be necessary to be properly tagged to be in style.

Hon. A. J. Balfour has resigned the leadership of the Unionist party, and will now join Lord Rosebery as an interesting and picturesque has-been.

The Toronto Star is doing its best to stir up trouble over bi-lingual schools. But inasmuch as the Rowell platform doesn't take any decided stand on the matter, the Star cannot accomplish much beyond fomenting racial feeling.

The Italian atrocities have been such that a court of inquiry should be immediately instituted by Italy as a defence for her fair name. The Turks themselves could not have been more deadly butchers.

The swing of the American states towards the Republican column, in the assembly elections, is a trifle unexpected. Can it be that the border state of New York wants high tariff against Canada, instead of the Democrats and the lowering of the tariff?

The Toronto Star is evidently after the scalp of the Globe as the chief Liberal organ in Ontario. Since the editor of the Globe put the party "on the plink," the Star sees its chance to supplant the poor old Globe.

Everyone who registered in the last election must register again. It is important that every supporter of Mr. Peck should be on the list, because over-confidence is fatal. To elect Mr. Peck it is necessary that YOUR vote should be recorded. Will you have to register?

The opposition to the Board of Education locating the East Ward school on the hill at Concession street is growing apace. As the city will not likely grow over that hill, would it not be better to have the new school placed alongside the present buildings? We understand the property can be purchased reasonably.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. FOR HOUSEHOLD ACCIDENTS

Zam-Buk is so Very Useful

Read How Beneficial It Proved in This Case

Mr. H. Sawyer, of Keene, Ont., writes—"My husband is engaged on a farm, and one day, while chopping wood, the top of the axe broke, and fell upon his foot, cutting a nasty gash. The wound was so bad that we first thought we would have to get a doctor, but we finally decided to dress the cut with Zam-Buk.

"Well, the Zam-Buk treatment proved a great success. It not only eased the pain, but it prevented any inflammation; and right from first applying Zam-Buk, the cut began to heal. It is now completely healed, and my husband says he will never be without a box of Zam-Buk in the house, for we are sure it saved us a great deal of expense."

Over and over again Zam-Buk has been proved to be the worker's best remedy. As soon as applied to a cut, a burn, a scald, or any skin injury it relieves the pain and it sets up healing. It also prevents blood-poisoning or inflammation. It is a sure cure, too, for eczema, piles, ulcers, old wounds, bad leg, ringworm, scalp sores, festering, running sores, eruptions, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. Its absolute purity, also, makes it the ideal balm for babies.

Zam-Buk Soap should be used along with the balm for washing all sore places. This soap will be found excellent for baby's bath, even where the balm is not being used.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful substitutes.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 4 were 1300 cattle, 1250 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 500 calves.

The offerings on the market this morning were 1200 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 500 calves. Owing to the increased offerings of cattle, of which the bulk were only of medium quality, a weaker feeling developed in the market, and prices show a decline of 5c to 10c per 100 pounds.

At this reduction the demand was fairly active from both packers and butchers, and a fair trade was done, only a few being left over unsold. Choice steers sold at 6⅛c; good at $5.50 to $5.80; fairly good at $5.25 to $5.40; fair at $4.90 to $5.10, and the lower grades at from $4 to $4.75 per 100 pounds. Cows brought from $3.25 to $5, and bulls from $3 to $5 per 100 pounds.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for lambs, and prices declined 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, which was due to the increased supply and the quieter demand, as buyers in most cases filled their wants earlier in the week, and sales were made at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds.

There was no change in sheep, the offerings being small, and sales were made at $3 to $3.75 per 100 pounds.

The market for calves was also weaker, with sales at from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The market for hogs was weaker, and prices ruled 25c to 40c per 100 pounds lower than on Monday, on account of the increased supply offered, and sales of selected lots were made at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, and some were delivered on contracts made earlier in the week, at $6.50.

MEXICO IN '42

By D. Lewis

She sat down mechanically, the countess by her side; and the door was banged to behind them. Meanwhile, Pepita, who insisted on accompanying her mistress, had been handed up to the box by a coachman strange to her; one of the soldiers pressed into the service for the occasion.

All were ready now for the road, the dismounted Hussars had vaulted into their saddles, the "march" was commanded, and the driver had drawn his whip to lay it on his horses when the animals jibbed, rearing up and snorting in affright! No wonder, with such an object suddenly coming under their eyes. An oddly-shaped creature that came scrambling through the shrubbery and stopped beneath their very noses. A human being it was, who called out in a clear voice: "Where is the colonel?"

CHAPTER XLXI
"Surrender!"

"Here!" called out Santander, springing his horse a length or two forward. "What is it, sirrah?"

"The enemy, S'nor Colonel," responded the dwarf, sliding close into the stirrup.

"Enemy! What enemy?"

"Them we missed catching — Don Ruperto, the Irlandes the big Tejano!"

"Ha! They! Where?"

"Close by, s'nor. I saw them round a great camp fire up in the mountains. Theyr'e not there now. I came on to tell you. I ran as fast as ever I was able, but they've been following. I could hear the tramp of their horses behind all the way. They must be near at hand now. Hark!"

"Patria y libertad!" The cry came from without, in the tone of a charging shibboleth, other voices adding "Death to the tyrants!"

Instantly after came the cracking of carbines, with shouts, and the clash of steel against steel—the sounds of a hand-to-hand fight, which the stamping and snorting of horses proclaimd between cavalry.

Never was conflict of shorter duration; over almost before they in the courtyard could realize its having commenced. The confused sounds of the melee lasted barely a minute, when a loud huzza, drowning the hoof strokes of the retreating horses, told that victory had declared itself for one side or the other.

They who listened were not long in doubt as to which sent up that triumphant cheer.

Through the front gate, standing open, burst a mass of mounted men, some carrying lances, couched for the thrust, others with drawn sabers, many of their blades dripping blood. On they came into the courtyard, still vociferating: "Death to the tyrans!" while he at their head called out in a commanding voice: "Surrender!"

"CARLOS SANTANDER, YOUR HOUR HAS COME!"

CHAPTER XLXII
Conclusion.

About a month after in San Augustin a small two-masted vessel—a goleta—might have been observed off the coast of Oaxaca, working against the land wind to make the mouth of Rio Tecoyama—a stream which runs into the Pacific near the southwestern corner of that state.

Only sharp eyes could have seen the schooner for it was night, and the night a very dark one.

On an elevated spot among the mangroves, by the river's mouth, a party was assembled, in all about a score individuals. They were mostly men, though not exclusively. Three female figures were distinguishable. Two of them were ladies, somewhat torn and travel-stained; the third was in the guise of a maid servant attending them. They were the Countess Almonte, the Dona Luisa Valverde and her ever faithful Pepita.

Among the men were six with whom the reader has acquaintance, Don Ignacio, Kearney, Rock, Rivas, Jose, and he who had been majordome in the old monastery, baptismally named Gregorio. Most of the others, undescribed, had also spent some time in the establishment with the monks while playing the part of patriots. They were, in fact, a remnant of the band — now broken up and dispersed.

When last seen it looked as though their day of triumph had come, or was at all events near. So would it have been but for a betrayal, through which the uprising had miscarried, or rather did not come off.

The dictator, well informed about it—further warned by what had occurred at San Augustin—had poured troops over the Sierras into Oaxaca in force sufficient to awe the leaders of the intended insurrection. It was but by the breadth of a hair that his late cabinet minister, and those who accompanied him, were able to escape to the sequestered spot where we find them on the shore of the South sea.

To Alvarez, chief of the Pintos, or "spotted Indians," were they indebted for safe conduct thither. Furthermore, he had promised to provide them with a vessel in which they might escape out of the country; and it was for this they were now on the lookout.

Unencumbered with heavy baggage, they were all soon aboard, and three days after debarked at the port of Panama.

Back to his old quarters in New Orleans Don Ignacio repaired; again under the ban of proscription, his estate sequestrated as before. So, too, those of the Countess Almonte. But not for all time, believed they. They lived in hope of a restoration. Nor were they disappointed; for it came.

The revolution delayed was at length carried to a successful issue. Once again throughout the land of Anahuac had arisen the battle cry "Patria y Libertad!' so earnestly and loudly shouted as to drive the dictator from his mock throne; sending him, as several times before, to seek safety in a foreign land.

Nor were the patriots unrepresented in this revolutionary struggle; instead ,they played an important part in it. Ere it broke out, they who had fled the country re-entered it over the Texan border, and rejoining their brethren, became once more ranged under the leadership of Capt. Ruperto Rivas, with Florence Kearney as his lieutenant, and Cris Rock a sort of attache to the band, but a valuable adjunct to its fighting force.

Swords returned to their scabbards, bugles no longer sounding their signals, it remains but to speak of an episode of more peaceful and pleasant nature, which occurred not so very long after.

The place was inside the grand cathedral of Mexico, at whose altar, surrounded by a throng of the land's elite, bells ringing and organ vibrating, stood three couples, waiting to be wedded. And wedded they were! Don Ruperto Rivas to the Countess Almonte, Florence Kearney to the Dona Luisa Valverde, and — Jose to Pepita.

Happy they, and happy also one who was but a witness of the ceremony, having a better view of it than most of the spetcators, from being the head and shoulders taller than any.

Cris looked on delightedly, proud of his comrade and protege, with the beautiful bride he had won and was wedding. For all it failed to shake his own faith in single blessedness. In his eyes there was no bride so beautiful as the "Land of the Lone Star," no wife so dear as its wild prairies.

And to them after a time he returned, oft around the camp-fire entertaining his companions of the chase with an account of his adventures in the Mexican valley.

THE END

Eels for the Irish

When so many hard things are being said about the House of Lords it should be kept in mind that they have just affirmed the claim of certain Irishmen to the exclusive right to fish for eels in Lough Neagh for a period of five thousand years from July 1, 1905. It is an affirmation that raises an equiry as to whether or not the people of Ireland eat eels. Scots — even London Scots — never touch them, and a Scotch angler catching an eel, promptly throws it away. Eels used to be associated with snakes, "and just as men of every race entertain an instinctive horror for snakes," writes Sir Herbert Maxwell, "so there remain traces of the same feeling about eels."

It seems somewhat unkind of Sir Herbert to state that most civilized races have overcome this long ago and then to add that there exists among the Scots a strong and universal prejudice against eels.

Reducing a Prince's Weight

The Kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel Fritz, whose circumference is a source of worry to him, has adopted a new method for reducing weight. He has given up digging in the garden owing to the intense heat and goes every morning to the ferry across the River Havel, at Sakrow, near Potsdam. There he relieves the old ferryman, and for two hours works on a heavy float, which is pulled across on a chain by hand. His wife motors down about 8 o'clock to take him home.

On Saturday the Crown Prince motors a long way round on his way to Berlin in order to have himself and his car ferried over by his brother.

Princess Eitel has started a crusade against wearing birds' feathers in hats and has signed a pledge never to wear ostrich feathers, egrets or birds of paradise.

Teacher: "Tommy, how would you punctuate this sentence, 'Willie, while going down the street, dropped a piece of pie, and' "—

Tommy (quickly): "I'd make a dash after the pie."

There is only one right way to hold a cigar, that is if the smoker has an especially easy chair in which he is liable to fall asleep while enjoying the fragrant weed. If one holds a cigar between the first and second fingers, the act of falling asleep will invariably cause the hold to become relaxed, and the cigar will drop from the fingers, to the imminent danger of the clothes or the carpet. That is how not to do it. But if the seductive roll be held between the second and third finger, the cigar would still be found safely grasped in the hand even if the sleeper did not wake up until the "morning after."

So many lazy people masquerade as the poor.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N.B., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

THE STRUGGLE FOR THE EARTH

Desire to Own the Earth Grew from the Individual, to Families, Clans, Nations, and Now We Battle in Batches

The origin of man is wrapt in obscurity. We cannot tell whether we all sprang from one stock, or whether there were two or a hundred human beings evolved simultaneously. If the latter be the case, it would be more than interesting to know the first thoughts of the first man upon meeting another first man, says T. P's Weekly. We do not know what they were, nor can we ever know, but we can make a very shrewd guess. The thoughts that passed through that first man's head were probably these: "Hullo! something else here fashioned like myself, is there? I thought the Earth belonged to me. Everything seems to have been made for my convenience, and here is someone just like me, who, of course, will want to be joint-sharer, or possibly more than that. He is in my way. I want the Earth. I must hit him over the head forthwith."

Whereupon, doubtless, our other first man being by no means less ready for the fray, there was a determined set-to. It did not take these good people long to realise the fact that there were a lot of others all wanting the earth, but this did not damp their ardour, nor has it throughout the course of the centuries. They continued to want the earth; we continue to want the earth; but the fact that we reproduce ourselves in families, that families form clans, and clans form nations, has taught us the absurdity of wanting the earth individually, so we now strive for it in batches.

MUCH MONEY IN TOBACCO ASH

Ton of Tobacco Contains 400 lbs Valuable Mineral Constituents from the Soil Which Must Be Otherwise Replaced.

A writer in the Lancet, (England), says: "As everybody knows, the ash left on burning tobacco is considerable and, as a matter of fact, the mineral matter of the tobacco leaf frequently amounts to as much as a fifth part of its weight. Thus, a ton of tobacco leaf would yield four hundredweights of ash, which represents valuable mineral constituents withdrawn from the soil which have to be replaced by abundant manuring. It has been calculated that a ton of tobacco withdraws over a hundredweight of mineral constituents per acre of land. In 1901 the home consumption of tobacco in the United Kingdom was at the rate of two pounds per head, or a total of about 40,000 tons, which represents, at what is now a probably low computation, approximately 8,000 tons of ash annually committed to the winds or dissipated in some way or other. This would appear to be an astounding waste of material which must be of enormous value to the soil, considering that 75 per cent. consists of calcium and potassium salts and 15 per cent. of magnesium and sodium salts, including nearly 5 per cent. of the essential constituent to all plants — phosphoric acid. On the face of it there would seem to be a fortune in store for that individual who could devise a successful means for the collection of tobacco ash, and it is a great pity that so much valuable material should forever be lost to the soil without any attempt at direct restoration being made."

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

A PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN OF THE SLUMS.

Perhaps the child life of the slums will help us in our almost impossible task of bringing back hope to those lives from which it has been banished by years of hardship.

Anyone passing through the narrow streets where the poor live, cannot fail to notice the toddlers, who, amid the general sordidness, are so busy at their games of make-believe. They seem like beams of sunshine sent by Divine love, and are proofs that degraded lives form no part of the plan of creation. In contrast however to these children, there pass men and women from whose faces the Divine Image is almost erased, and we acknowledge with a pang that the sunbeams of to-day will become the shadows of to-morrow.

Surely it is our duty to prevent such a change, and to recognise that the best way to bring hope to the poor is to follow the example of Divine economy, and to make use of existing material — the great hopefulness of the children. If this is done, which of us will dare to limit the work which these children may do in dispelling the shadows from the land to which they were sent as sunbeams?

EMBROIDERED FLOWERS

The new way with embroidered flowers is to cut the petals out of silk, satin, and velvet and fix them against the train, leaving some to fall outward so that they look as if they were natural blossoms. The padded flower is also very much seen, and is employed for the embellishment of panels.

It is the opinion of the women of to-day that the large and heavy bouquet not only incommodes its owner but hides her frock.

Lace-topped hatpins to wear with lingerie millinery are pretty and very easily made at home.

Very broad ribbon is used to form tabliers or loose panels at the front and back of dresses.

New mesh veils are of two colors, a black web over a flesh tint producing a becoming complexion effect.

SIMPLE COIFFURES FASHIONABLE

Simple and artistic coiffures are the fashion.

While braids, puffs, curls, bangs and chignons are still worn, no longer does the girl or woman who follows closely in the footsteps of Madame Mode overload her lovely head.

RECIPES
To Use Ham.

Sliced ham is more tender if it is baked than if fried. Cut a slice three-quarters of an inch thick, put it into a small enamel pan, turn three-quarters of a cupful of milk over it, cover and bake for an hour and a quarter, basting every fifteen minutes with milk.

For luncheon grind the ends of a boiled ham and mix it with a button onion that has been chopped fine and a little minced parsley. Put the mixture into a pan with a little butter and moisten with hot water or cream. Simmer four or five minutes, and then heap on slices of toast.

A little grated American cheese mixed with minced ham used in sandwiches is delicious if the sandwiches are fried brown and served very hot.

Cold ham is tasty if it is shredded and cooked in current jelly sauce. Put a cupful of the shredded ham into a saucepan with a level tablespoonful of butter and half a cupful of currant jelly. As soon as the jelly and butter begin to bubble add four tablespoonfuls of sherry and a seasoning of paprika. Simmer the mixture about five or six minutes and serve with toast.

Queenstown Pudding

Ingredients — One cupful of fine breadcrumbs, one pint of new milk, four eggs, small pot of jam, half a tea-spoonful of essence of vanilla, sugar to taste. Well butter a pie-dish, and screen with Demerara sugar. Pour a pint of boiling milk over a tea-cupful of fine bread-crumbs, that has been sweetened to taste, and flavoured with vanilla essence. When nearly cool, pour into it four well-beaten yolks of eggs, reserving the whites. Set it into a moderate oven to cook, but do not allow the mixture to boil. When ready and quite set, screen the pie with a pot of greengage jam. In the meantime, beat the white of the eggs to a high froth, adding a little castor sugar from time to time, in all a dessert-spoonful. Arrange the snow in an ornamental shape over the jam. Put it again into the oven to set, care being taken that the oven is only just the heat to colour the snow a golden ray. Send the pie to table, in the dish in which it was cooked, covered with a paper frill.

Hydro Profitable.

Galt, Nov. 9.—The figures for October, compiled by Reeve F. S. Scott, chairman of the fire and light committee, show that the aggregate saving to users of electricity under Hydro-electric rates was $966. The average cost of the power works out to seven cents per k.w., being five cents less than the rate charged by the old company. Mr. Scott states that the department will show a profit.

Set Her Clothes Ablaze.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Her clothing ablaze and unconscious from exhaustion and suffering upon privation, an old woman was found by the firemen yesterday morning in a shack on St. Catharine road, owned by the Jesuit Fathers. Rescued in the nick of time and revived, she acknowledged that she had built a fire, but added that she had been cold and without food for three days.

Mrs. Vermilya Taken Ill.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Vermilya, accused of poisoning Policeman Bissonette, became seriously ill in jail yesterday afternoon. She was stricken with a severe nausea, and it was feared that, in spite of numerous guards, she again had attempted her life by poisoning.

HAVE YOU EVER
After retiring for the night, thought of your forgotten fire insurance policy, which had expired that day, and had not been renewed?
How quickly you'd spring to the telephone, call up the agent, and make matters right till morning in fear that fire might wipe out your accumulations.
Yet how often have you retired to woo the sleep of the just, with no life insurance and it never crossed your mind seriously that ere morn the heart might stop beating, and with it, the whole earning power of both brain and hand yet your property may never burn, but your heart will surely cease to beat some time. It's strange, is it not?
Then why not insure your life at once?
The Sun Life of Canada issues all the modern forms of life assurance at the lowest rates, consistent with ample security, and are giving settlements that should satisfy the most exacting.

THE CORRECTION OF DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT

It is very important that you have implicit faith in the ability of the Specialist who fits you with Glasses, since there are several important features which must be left solely to his ability and honor.

You cannot possibly appreciate the quality of lenses furnished, and yet on this feature depends the degree of satisfaction to be obtained from the use of glasses. In our Optical work we frequently find people wearing inferior and imperfect lenses, for which they have paid a full price. We will not economize in this department of our business, for we always insist on furnishing the best material at prices that are reasonable.

We believe you will be satisfied with the prices asked in our Optical Department, and know that you will be pleased with the results obtained.

ALFRED JARRY COMES AGAIN; CALLED AT TWO LIVERY STABLES

Said He Wanted to Get Money to Make Trip to Toronto.

Like the cat, Alfred Jarry came back. He was evidently impressed with Peterborough when he visited it before, as he returned to this fair city on Tuesday last and from all accounts remained here until last night. He has not been seen around his usual haunts to-day and it is likely he has again departed.

Jarry is the Cobalt king who arranged to purchase a $4,500 house and $1,500 worth of furnishings here a couple of weeks ago, and when the merchants were watching with suspicious eyes he took the 4.29 C. P. R. train for Toronto where he married a young lady, purchased two houses, furniture galore, as well as a couple of automobiles and after living at the young lady's home for a day or so, cleared out.

VISITED LIVERY BARN

Jarry, who has succeeded in becoming notorious in the past few weeks, and has received space in several papers, free gratis, paid Jones Bros.' livery barn a visit yesterday morning and received a letter which was awaiting him. He did not have much to say and as the men at the barn are entertaining an impression that he is a victim of hallucinations and a dangerous subject to be at large, they did not have much conversation with him. He did not volunteer any information as to his past actions, or his future intentions, but went his way.

A Review reporter inquired at Mr. Robinson's livery stables, if a man answering to the description of Jarry had put in an appearance there and it was ascertained that he called twice.

NOW HE IS BROKE.

On Tuesday evening he had been around looking for work and on Wednesday he had come back trying to sell some apparatus pertaining to harness, saying that he was trying to make money to take him to Toronto.

Those who have followed the movements of Jarry state that he must be insane to do the things he is reported to have done.

GETTING READY FOR TAG DAY

People on Saturday are warned against buying tags from any but those authorized to sell them, namely the girls who wear upon the sleeve the ribbons denoting that they are the proper canvassers. Last year it was learned that some precocious small boys had purchased tags for five cents and sold them again at a profit for themselves. Buy your tags only from the girls or ladies who wear the ribbons.

The school-children will be tagged to-morrow afternoon, Friday, at each of the schools. Parents are kindly requested to see that their children are supplied with money, sufficient to buy tags.

MR. SHERWIN LIKES ALBERTA CAPITAL

Spent the Summer at Edmonton and Will Return

Mr J. R Sherwin, of Pearl Avenue, who has been in the west since last May, only returned home on Monday, after having visited Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Saskatoon, and Edmonton, gave the Review a call this morning. Mr. Sherwin has been very fortunate in his investments in real estate in Edmonton and is very enthusiastic over the prospects in the western city. While in Edmonton he followed his occupation of contractor and builder erected three houses during the summer.

Speaking of building operations, he stated that in Edmonton there were several large buildings in the course of erection, including the Alberta parliament buildings, which are almost completed. The C.P.R. is doing much to boom the city and is constructing another bridge across the Saskatchewan river, this one to be three-quarters of a mile long and 175 feet high. The trains will run on a track at the top of the bridge, while the street cars and vehicles will cross on a parallel road lower than the railroad, on the same bridge. The Hudson Bay Company, which owns over one thousand acres of land in the centre of Edmonton, is surveying the property, and dividing it into city lots. The company is giving the city four parks.

The single tax system is in vogue in the Alberta capital, as in several other western cities, and that induces people to improve their properties, as the improvements are not taxed.

There is much threshing to be done throughout the west, but Mr. Sherwin thinks it will not be finished before the winter sets in.

Mr. Sherwin showed a Review representative a sample of the potatoes grown in an Edmonton garden. They are very large, from eight to ten lbs of the tubers being grown in one hill. They are selling at about 30c per bushel and the crop is so large that the market is crowded and the price is likely to go lower.

Among the Peterborough people in Edmonton whom he met were Messrs Bert Mullin, George Carter and Chas Telford.

Mr Sherwin intends taking his family to the West in the spring, and will likely settle in Edmonton.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

REGRETTED DEATH AT FLEETWOOD

The Late Edwin Atchinson Leaves Many Friends

Special Correspondence.

Fleetwood, Nov. 7.—It is our painful duty to have to record the death of Mr. Edwin Atchinson, aged 73 years, which sad event took place at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thos. Crawford, at Fleetwood, on Thursday morning, Nov. 2nd. Deceased had been ailing for some time, and was under the treatment of Dr. Hamilton, of Bethany, who had no hope of his recovery whatever. Deceased was born in Ireland and came to this country when quite young. He was married in Millbrook to Miss Jane Cairns, who died some time ago. Deceased and his family had resided in Manvers for a long time. He was always ready to assist a neighbor, especially in sickness, and he will be greatly missed in this community. He leaves to mourn his loss two sons and four daughters. Two other daughters died some time ago. The family is living in different parts of Ontario as follows: Mr. Alex. Atchinson, in Essex county; Mrs. Thomas Crawford, in Fleetwood; Mrs. Herb Sisson in Middlesex county; Mrs. J. T. Johnston, in Huron county; Joseph on the homestead, and Mrs. John Kerr at London, Ont. Mrs. Alex. Huskins and Mrs. J. A. Bush died some time ago.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place on Saturday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Thomas Crawford, Fleetwood, and proceeded to St. Mary's church cemetery. The Rev. J. C. Paston, of Bethany, assisted by Rev. R. M. Patterson, of Telford, both at the house and cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. Joseph Staples, William Coulter, Richard Grandy, Richard Wilson, John Leslie and Henry Timms. Among relatives from a distance we noticed Mrs. James Atchinson, of Lindsay, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cathcart, of Kendal.

Our sympathy go with the surviving members of the family.

SYLVESTER CO.

Toronto, Nov. 8—Judge Southeran, of the Victoria County Court, awarded the Galt Malleable Iron Company, of Galt, $285 on a promissory note issued by the Sylvester Manufacturing Co. $117 on a counterclaim for delay in delivering the goods for which the note was given in payment. The Divisional Court yesterday, on an appeal by the plaintiff from the decision on the counterclaim, reversed that part of the judgment, so that the plaintiff now has a clear verdict of $285.

A man began swearing in a saloon. "Look here," said the barkeeper, "you will have to cut out that profanity. Suppose a lady should come in."

ENDORSED PLATFORM OF TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS

Local Council Held Splendid Meeting — Some of the Principles

One of the best meetings the Trades Council of Peterborough has yet held took place last night in the Knights of Pythias hall, Simcoe street. The meeting endorsed the platform of principles laid down by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at Calgary in September last. Some of the principles are as follows:—

Free compulsory education.

Legal working day of eight hours, and six days to a week.

Government inspection of all industries.

The abolition of the contract system on all public works.

A minimum living wage, based on local conditions.

Public ownership of all franchises, such as railways, telegraphs, telephones, water-works, lighting, etc.

Tax reform, by lessening taxation on industry and increasing it on land values.

Abolition of child labor by children under fourteen years of age; and of female labor in all branches of industrial life, such as mines, workshops, factories, etc.

Abolition of property qualification for all public offices.

Those are a few of the principles laid down at Calgary and which will be followed by union men at the coming campaign.

The main question taken up last night was the government inspection of all industries. It was claimed that the inspection of factories and workshops should be more thoroughly looked into, and if this were done less accidents would take place. As one member put it: "There is no use in sending a man out to inspect machinery, who has been selling ribbon in a dry goods store all his life."

All unions and trades councils in Canada are on the alert at the present time.

PHILOMATHEANS ELECT OFFICERS

Roy Dixon is President for This Year's Term

The annual election of officers for the Philomathean Society at the local Collegiate Institute took place at 4.15 o'clock last evening. The following were the results:

Hon. Vice-Presidents—S. J. Stubbs, B.A., and G. F. Colling, B.A.
President—Roy Dixon.

Treasurer—Meredith Huycke.

The society has become one of the leading organizations in the school, and the general interest taken in the elections last evening is promising of a very successful season's work. It is the purpose of the society to hold a meeting every two weeks, the program to be given by the pupils. The main object is to give the pupils an opportunity to practice public speaking and to cultivate an ease of manner before an audience.

Mr. H. Rowed Sees Great Future for Waseca

After a short visit with his sister, Miss Annie Rowed, of 567 George street, Mr. H. Rowed went to his home in Campbellford yesterday. He will dispose of his property there and return again to Saskatchewan, where he has spent the past year, so pleased is he with the western country. Mr. Rowed showed a Review representative a sample of wheat grown in Saskatchewan, where it was reported the frosts had wrought havoc to the grain, but the sample displayed by Mr. Rowed was well developed and not damaged. It was grown not a long distance from Waseca, north Saskatchewan, where he has been residing, and averaged 34 bushels to the acre. Waseca is on the Canadian Northern line, and about 190 miles east of Edmonton. Some five years ago Mr. Rowed's son, Henry B. Rowed, and his son-in-law, pitched their tents, the first settlers. Now the town has two huge elevators, a population of one hundred and is growing steadily.

Fall wheat growing has been found to be successful, and samples compared with western Ontario grain, make a very favorable comparison.

"They can grow lots of potatoes out that way, too," said Mr. Rowed, "and you haven't got to contend with potato bugs. There are none there."

In Waseca he said there were good opportunities for the opening of business, such as a grocery store or a restaurant.

It is only about two hundred miles west of Rosthern, where Seager Wheeler won the prize of $1,000 in gold for the best wheat, the prize being offered for competition between Canadian and United States growers, by Sir Henry Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R.

CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE IS OFF TO GOOD START

Mr. Jack Pilling is Elected President — Bright Prospects for Successful Season

The Church Hockey League held a very successful organization meeting in the Y.M.C.A. parlors last night, and besides making some amendments to the constitution, elected the following officers for the coming season:

Patrons and Patronesses—The ministers of the several city churches and their wives.

Hon. President—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Hon Vice-President—Mr. E. N. McWilliams.

President—Mr. Jack Pilling.

Vice-President—Mr. T. B. Moffatt.

Sec.-Treas.—L. H. Ingram.

The executive will consist of one member from each club in the league, the president and secretary.

It was decided that the league this season consist of teams from the following four denominations, which were represented:—Anglicans, Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists. Clause 4 in the constitution was also amended and made to read as follows: That a player to be eligible to play in any league game must be a member of a church, Sunday school or club of the denomination his team represents, on or before Dec. 1st of current year. The fifteen players' certificates allowed each team must be signed and handed to the secretary of the league ten days before the date of the first game.

The prospects are very bright for a successful season of hockey. Everyone is enthusiastic over the outlook and with workers and organizers such as Messrs. Pilling and Maffatt, there should be some fast hockey this season. The inter-denominational scheme promises to produce faster teams and makes the interest more widespread.

SIMPSON OUT WITH TIGERS

The bugle sounded yesterday and the old hurry up call was put in with the result that two distinct surprises were enjoyed at the cricket field yesterday when the yellow and black squad trotted out for their first practice since the bruising contest last Saturday. The two surprises were in the shape of Ben Simpson and Art Moore in football togs. Last week it was announced in these columns that Simpson would be out, perhaps in time for the game with Argos. He resisted the call at the time but Saturday's game convinced him that he might, after all, be of some service and when it was definitely announced yesterday that Tommy Stinson was not only out of the game for the season but for all time, Ben could not deny Manager Tope any longer. So he got into uniform last evening and so took Art Moore, the artful one, by surprise that Art was coaxed into a sit and 'tis safe betting they'll stick now until the end of the season.

No definite announcement was made last evening, but it is understood that it is the intention to use Ballard, Simpson and Moore in Saturday's game against Montreal, for the purpose of having all three qualified for the Canadian finals and for any Big Four play-off should the games on Saturday result in a play-off series.—Hamilton Spectator.

DAIRY MEETING

The annual meeting for Peterboro County Eastern Ontario Dairy Association will be held at Norwood, Wednesday November 23 in the town hall. The speakers will be Mr. Henry Glendenning of Manilla, president of the D.A.C.O. and Mr. G. G. Publow, of Kingston, Chief Dairy Instructor. The chair is to be taken by Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, director of the Peterboro district.

ENSIGN MERRITT AT KNOX CHURCH

The lecture hall of Knox church will no doubt be well filled next Monday night, when Ensign Merritt, of the local Salvation Army temple, will give a lecture on the life and work of General Booth.

The ensign will be assisted by the Songsters Brigade of twenty voices. The public is cordially invited.

Drunk and Disorderly

A young man residing in the south end of the city was arrested yesterday for being intoxicated and acting in a disorderly manner. A night in the cells sobered him up and he was fined by Magistrate Dumble this morning $6.50, after pleading guilty to the charge.

It will Present Ulcerated Throat — At the first symptoms of sore throat which presages ulceration and inflammation, take a spoonful of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Add a little sugar to it to make it palatable. It will allay the irritation and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so painful. Some who were so periodically subject to quinsy have thus made themselves immune to attack.

ATHLETICS IN HOT WEATHER

Daily Exercise Gives Increased Nervous Energy in all Kinds of Weather.

It is a great mistake to suppose that athletic games or other vigorous exercises are intolerable in the hot weather, just because it is hot. This is a notion entertained only by those who exert themselves as little as possible, and who suffer with the heat. Those who participate in active athletic pastimes know better, if they stop to think about it, but in most cases they are almost unconscious of the fact that it is so terribly, dreadfully hot.

Not only does one feel so much better and possess so much more nervous energy when taking a certain amount of daily exercise, either in summer or winter, but he may keep cooler in times of excessive heat by so doing. This is due partly to the directly cooling effect of the evaporation of perspiration, and partly to the fact that in his exercise he consumes a certain percentage of the heat energy of the body, or we might say, at least the surplus heat energy. This makes for comfort during the rest of the day. We know that such heat energy is consumed in vigorous exercise. Running always makes one very warm, yet Marathon runners, after covering some twenty miles, often experience such chilliness that they call for their sweaters to wear during the last few miles. The strain of Marathon running is not to be recommended for the average man, but certainly an hour or even a half hour of truly active and vigorous exercise each day will make one almost immune against suffering from hot weather. Naturally it will help to do this also by giving him increased functional energy and vital resistance against ill-health.

This is a pointed and practical suggestion. If you prefer, run one or two miles, or take your other exercise, whatever it is, the first thing in the morning, when it is still sufficiently cool to enable you to thoroughly enjoy it.

The other special advantage of hot weather athletics lies in the fact that when the muscles are thoroughly warm they are capable of much greater activity. They act more quickly and with a more powerful contraction, or in other words, they are then capable of expressing their full strength. Every one knows how little he is able to do when he feels cold, in which case his muscles are more or less stiff and incapable of their greatest contracting power. The athlete or the gymnast knows that under ordinary circumstances it is necessary for him first to go through some preliminary exercises to get "warmed up," before he can do his best in competition or accomplish his more difficult feats of strength. To attempt a hard lift or a sprint when the muscles are stiff with cold is actually dangerous, for one is liable to strain himself or seriously injure a tendon. In the very hot weather, however, one may go right into his games without the necessity of "warming up" preparations to get his muscles in condition. This is true in running, tennis, baseball, or any other pastime in which one desires the maximum of muscular efficiency, and he will therefore do his best and most keenly enjoy the sport. The best athletic records are usually made in hot weather. Boys can play baseball with more alertness and energy in hot weather, when they are not too lazy to try. Sportsmen know that the fastest horse racing records are made on hot days.

ATHLETICS AND THE CHURCH

Speaking, recently, on the subject of athletics Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Chicago, who, as pastor, author, and orator, has a wide popularity, said the value of physical culture as an adjunct to the work of the pulpit was beginning to be more and more recognised.

Wholesomeness of the body is closely allied with wholesomeness of the mind and indeed with the spiritually of the soul. Such wholesomeness can only be attained by the practice of what may be called athletic hygiene, a term that includes all things that have to do with the welfare of the physical being. Therefore, it is the privilege and should be the duty, of the church to do all that it legitimately can to encourage clean athleticism among those who come within the scope of its influence. I speak more particularly of our young men and women, although for that matter, there are a good many older people filling our pews who would be none the worse and much the better if they would at times seek recreation with the help of golf-clubs or fishing-rods; horse or afoot, instead of invariably trying to find it in library or club; dining-room or theatre.

Big Enough to Work.

Artists do never look alike, any more than grocers or doctors do. Nevertheless, many persons are surprised at an artist who is not small, anaemic, delicate of feature, and decorated with a flowing necktie. Such a person lately visited the studio of a certain artist in one of our big cities.

The man in question wears a big red beard, and stands six feet and some inches high. His shoulders are broad, and his muscles hard from continued exercise. A woman entered his studio and asked for the artist.

"That's him, standing over there," the attendant said.

The woman looked over to where the artist stood, towering like an ancient viking, and gasped. "Why," she whispered, in surprise, "he's big enough to work, isn't he?"

Wrong Anyway

The violent-tempered manager was lecturing his clerk.

"Look here, sir," he thundered, "this won't do! What on earth do you mean by making such wretched figures? They're a perfect disgrace! Look at that 5, it's just like a 3!"

"I—er—I beg pardon, sir," replied the trembling clerk; "but you see, sir, the figure is intended for a 3!"

"A 3?" roared the manager. "Why, you idiot, it looks just like a 5!"

No man pays as cheerfully as he orders.

BAPTISED IN BLOOD

By Andre Roche

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

Paolo Franzetti sat idle in his tent, his helmet and his sword beside him on a stool, and on a table before him a map and papers. Thin, sinewy, clean-shaven, it was only the few grey hairs among the black locks clustered round his brow that betrayed his age.

"A mercenary," he muttered. "She calls me that."

"A mercenary, bought by the largest purse, unheeding vows and oaths, breaking with old friends and old loves as easily as a common soldier."

Where he first came from none save himself knew. He had fought under Coleone for Venice, and had looked to succeed that general in command of the Republic's troops. The Council of Ten had passed over his claims, and he went by open daylight to Ferrara. There he had been the leader, general of all the forces, the close friend of the duke, the lover of the duchess.

Now he sat under Cremona's flag, a dukedom in prospect, a fortune in retrospect. And from Ferrara to Cremona he had gone over in this night; not for fear of what men should say, but for fear of a woman's tongue.

The morning was dull and grey, the bright tents with their fluttering pennons showed up clearly against the sky. The wide open space in front of the general's tent was full of soldiers, who surrounded two men upon horseback. They were strangers to all but Franzetti, and he knew them for captains in the suite of the Duke of Ferrara.

The two heralds approached, and the elder spoke:

"I came from Ferrara to deliver into the hands of Cremona's illustrious general, Paolo Franzetti, this packet and this message: 'This outcast brat I send to Franzetti, a gift worthy of his estate. For I have found no priest so honourless that he will baptise the foundling boy.'"

So saying he handed to Franzetti a bundle of swadling clothes, in the middle of which appeared the red face of a little baby.

His senior captains had clustered round Franzetti. He spoke a few words, gave a few orders, and the word passed quickly round from mouth to mouth.

"To San Luca! To San Luca!"

Silently and speedily four thousand of his force swung into the saddle and marshalled on either side of the great square in front of Franzetti's tent.

"Gentlemen," he said, coldly and politely, "you brought to me a child, unbaptised, and besought me to take charge of it. I will accept the charge on one condition: that you go with me to the baptism and stand sponsors for him. We have no water here, but over yonder by San Luca there is fire, and such a baptism were worthy of a no man's son."

San Luca's fortress was in sight, and to the right of Franzetti's little band were Ferrara's marauders, all but cut off from their camp.

The horsemen of Cremona broke into a shout, and on command from Franzetti spurred towards them, a compact, irresistible mass. They crashed through the wavering lines, cutting a lane of blood, and turning, ploughed their way back again.

"See, see, my son," cried Franzetti, holding the infant high above his head, "your cradle song, the shouts of dying men. Here I baptise thee No Man's Son, and call thee Giovanni to honour of my mare Joan."

"Ferara and the Duchess Joan."

"What does it mean? What does it mean?" cried the general.

"The duches fights with them. I have seen her, on a black horse."

"God and the Madonna defend her!" exclaimed Franzetti; and lest his prayer should not be heard, he himself set off in search of her.

The defence had fallen back under the very walls of San Luca. Around a postern gate a little group fought steadily on. As Franzetti dashed into the midst of the group they broke and fled, hotly pursued by twenty. By the gate one stayed, a woman, tall, fair-haired, imperious of mien.

"Yen ride hard, my lord duke," she said, with bitter emphasis on the title.

"Madonna, you do me too much honour," he returned. "I am but Paolo Franzetti, general of Cremona's forces."

"A mercenary, a traitor, and a recreant," she added. "Good sir, in your modesty you forget half your titles." She leaned against the wall as though fatigued.

"Pardon, madonna, you have omitted one," he said after a pause. "I am also your son's father."

She laughed aloud, a bitter, mocking laugh.

"So the ruse succeeded," she cried. "You were deceived. Your simple vanity made you an easy prey. That village brat, brought into the camp two days since. Oh, Franzetti! your vanity has led you into strange beliefs. You—my son's father!"

Franzetti came nearer to her.

"Ay, madonna," he replied. "And my son is the son of a daughter of France, for Louis the King is brother to Joan of Ferrara."

He drew her to him, and, holding her close, kissed her passionately.

"Paolo, Paolo! Why did you ever leave me?" she asked, and her voice was faint. Her head dropped and her bright hair glistened on his shoulder against the blood-stained mail.

"Why did you not come with me, Joan?" he answered. "The chance is given you again. Throw off the yoke of Ferrara, as I threw it off, and join me now."

"It is too late, Paolo," she replied. She spoke slowly and with difficulty. "When your horsemen strike it is hard, and this one struck from behind."

It was true. Her left shoulder had been pierced; the steel had gone through gown and corsage and flesh.

"Paolo," she cried, "be good to him — the little one. He was my son, and yours, the son of a daughter of France."

Her lips sought his, and they took their last farewell.

RESIGNATION OF BALFOUR IS

that most insidious of all diseases—that disease which comes upon those who, without losing their health or intellect, nevertheless get petrified in the old course they have pursued; whose authority grows because they have been so long in public service, or are great men of science, or eminent men of business, but who cannot deal with the problems which in this changing world are perpetually arising with all. Freshness and elasticity are desirable in those who have got to conduct great concerns.

"No man knows himself when that hour arrives. I am vain enough to hope that I have not reached that period. But I would be miserable if I ran the margin too fine."

Mr. Balfour deprecates the reports of party dissension. There were always grumblers when the party was out of power. He believes it to be in normal condition and declared that the country was fast tiring of sweeping radical legislation. The party, he said, would soon return to power.

Many Conservatives contend that the question of his health was the only reason for Mr. Balfour's retirement. Some members of the Halsbury Club, which was reputed to be working for that object, point out that the club adopted a resolution of confidence in Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne only last Monday. They say that leading members threatened to resign if Mr. Balfour's retirement was made a plank of the club's program.

The Liberals and the adherents of the Irish party join the Unionists in regretting that the House of Commons debates will lose a great share of interest when the figure, to whom followers and opponents alike conceded intellectual pre-eminence, is no longer in the forefront of the battle.

Dissatisfaction with Mr. Balfour as leader has long been growing among the tariff reformers, who criticized his apparent lack of conviction on that issue, and gained great impetus when he advised the House of Lords to swallow the veto bill.

The average man isn't very proud when his wife is operated on, but he will say, in talking to his friends: "I suppose Doc. Smith, who did the work, is one of the greatest surgeons in the world."

You pay. About that there is no room for doubt.

And it's more than likely you believe in the necessity of the tariff.

BI-LINGUAL SCHOOLS

Toronto News.

"All education is intended primarily to give the child an equipment for the battle of life. Not only must he receive and retain a certain amount of knowledge, but in the process of receiving and remembering his mental faculties must be sharpened. Secondly, the intellectual and cultural influences about him—the personality of the teacher, the duration of the term, the range of his reading both in and out of school, and the nature of his play— will have their effect upon his mind and character for all time. These two sides of education may be termed utilitarian and cultural. Neither can be minimised. It is ultra-aesthetic poppycock to declare that bread and butter is an unworthy pursuit. If men are to live their lives in peace and plenty their school training in youth must be mainly practical. Only thus can a foundation be laid for the special knowledge which every business and professional man must attain after he leaves school.

It is the reproach of some bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario that they have failed to lay the foundation. It is notorious that such schools have turned out pupils knowing neither English nor French properly and that the proportion of pupils able to cope with the examination for High School entrance has been dangerously small. A complete report on the condition of bi-lingual schools in Ontario, is in preparation by a Government commissioner. But in the meantime some general principles arise which should be stated clearly.

It is true that the bulk of our import and export trade is with Great Britain and the United States. Both countries are almost exclusively English-speaking. Business of all kinds from Wall street and Threadneedle street to the corner grocery or chandler's shop is conducted in English. But in addition most of our local trade in this country is conducted in the English language. All the nine Provinces save one have a large majority of English-speaking people. Even in Quebec, English is understood by nearly all merchants and professional men. It stands to reason therefore that the man who speaks English alone will have a greater opportunity to earn a decent living in this country than the one who speaks only French. And this is no reproach to French or French speaking-people. Indeed they recognize the accuracy of the statement by the eagerness they show to acquire a good working knowledge of English.

For the reason that earning efficiency is dependent in large measure upon an ability to speak and write the English language, it is clear that all schools, Public or Separate, must give efficient instruction in that language. If bilingual schools fail in this particular they fail in everything and must be either reformed or abolished. This is demanded by the utilitarian principle of education. In this country French is cultural rather than practical. There can be no objection to teaching French as a subject. Indeed it is a reproach to the English people of the Province of Ontario—and also to our educational system—that so little attention has been paid to efficient French teaching. In spite of the vast army of boys and girls who have "taken up" French in High School, how many of them can write a good French letter, or engage creditably in French conversation? Scarcely a public man of the neighboring province can be found who does not speak English fluently. Our public men do not speak French. They do not need it to make a living, and the cultural side of their education has been neglected in this respect.

But it may be said that in French communities it is necessary to teach French because the children understand no other langiage. So far as the lowest grades are concerned this undoubtedly is true. But within two years after the six-year-old child has started to school, when he has learned to read and write French, serious English instruction should be given. At the age of nine all teaching could be in English. Thenceforth French should be considered as a school subject, but not as a regular medium of expression. Such a system of instruction would turn out children efficient in both languages, and enormously better qualified for bread-winning than the unilingual boy or girl. Certainly the mother tongue would not be lost to the child—and it would be a pity if it were. French has an historical, literary and social standing in this country. But if the schools can add to this mother tongue the ability to think and speak in English they will be doing efficient and necessary work. Any attempt to prevent children from learning English well is a crime against their future.

What about teachers? Where are you going to find young men and women capable of teaching infants in French and conducting third and fourth classes in English? It seems that one solution could be found in the establishment of consolidated schools. Bring the children of four school sections to a central building by means of a 'bus service and then grade the pupils in separate rooms. Have French-speaking teachers for the low grades, English-speaking ones for the higher grades. The consolidated school is used effectively in many rural sections of the United States, and it could be used in Ontario as well.

In all discussion of the bi-lingual question one view must be clearly maintained, that people pay taxes to have their children educated, and that they are not and cannot be properly educated in this country without having a good command of English. It is not a question of the rights or privileges of our French-Canadian brothers. It is not a question of abolishing the French language, neither is it a question of religion. The schools must be efficient. That is the sum of the whole matter. And on this continent, in this Dominion, in this province a pupil's knowledge of English is one of the most important tests of effiiciency.

IN THE LAUNDRY

Black cotton fabrics should be washed in hot water. Use suds instead of rubbing with soap, and rinse in very blue water. When dry, dip in very thin black starch. Hang on the wrong side.

Fresh wine stains may be removed by dipping the stained part in a pan of milk boiling on the stove.

If you want a tablecloth to look like new every time it is washed, do not starch, but let it get perfectly dry, then dip it in hot water, and wring just so that it will not drip, lay it on the board, and iron it perfectly dry. It will take an hour to do it, but you can get a beautiful polish. Roll on a long, round stick, and you will have a polished lineless tablecloth.

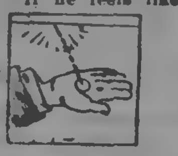
OUR CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

TO-DAY'S TRICK FOR THE SUPPER TABLE.

Here's a bully scheme for "working" dad for some spending money. Tell him you can make a quarter stick to the wall without using glue or anything else.



If he feels like arguing the matter, ask him if he will give you a quarter if you can make it stick to the wall. When he "bites" take the quarter and slam it flat against a smooth surface of wood—say the bookcase or a door panel—pressing it hard with a downward sliding motion, against the wood. Take your hand away and the coin will stick tightly.

The striking and pressing expel the air between the coin and the wood, forming a vacum which will hold the millionaire's dollar or Johnny's penny just alike.

BOY CAN MAKE.

Some Descriptions of Useful Articles for Camping.

Many boys look forward to going into camp as soon as school is closed, taking for their camping grounds some piece of woods or small island near their homes. It is also good fun to set up a camp in the back yard if one's parents do not wish to have one go away. Boys who are interested in this sort of good time will find it a good plan to start soon to make some of the necessary articles of the camp equipment. A boy reader has sent to this page some descriptions of articles which are useful for campers and which may be made at a very small cost or without any cost at all.

To make a camp lantern take a can and puncture it. A small block of wood may be hollowed out to make a holder for the candle. The block of wood is set inside the pail and the light shines through. This pail may also be used for carrying small fish or bait.

Another lantern is made of a glass jar which has a tin cover. Puncture holes in the cover and make a basket for the candle of wire which is twisted around so as to hold the candle as shown in the picture. There are two long strands of wire which come up through the lid and form a handle for the lantern.

A camp warmer and cook stove may be made of a pail.

The article to be cooked may be put in a covered pail and then covered with hot coals. To make an oven fill thepail with hot coals. The articles to be roasted may be placed on top of these coals.

ASOF AND HIS PONY.

An Arabian Story for Canadian Children.

Asof loved his pony Selim very dearly. He used to whisper in his ear that when he grew to be a man he would buy him a string of the loveliest pearls to hang around his neck and feed him on rose sugar drops. One day Asof's uncle came to see Asof and brought him a box of sweetmeats of most beautiful colors and shapes, 25 in all.

"Have a good time with these candies," said he. He knew his little nephew had a sweet tooth, and the sugar rosies, violets and lilies were made of the purest creamed sugar.

Asof nodded his head.

"I will have the best of times," said he. "I will eat five candies myself and feed the rest to Selim."

"To Selim!" echoed his uncle.

"Yes, to Selim!" merrily laughed Asof, and off he scampered to have a good time with his pony.

AN AFTER SUPPER THUNDER "STORM."

Here's some homemade, individually applied thunder that will outthunder old Vulcan himself. You can produce it on nights when there isn't a cloud in the sky—right in the house, and only one person at a time will hear it.

Place a piece of string around the other fellow's head, taking care that his hands cover his ears. Then cause the string to vibrate by drawing the moistened finger and thumb along the string.

The effect will be that of a rolling peal of thunder, audible only to the person operated upon.

INSECTS TOOLS.

There is a little fly called a sawfly because it has a saw to work with. The fly uses it to make places where the eggs will be safe. What is more strange it has a sort of home-made glue which fastens them where they are laid.

Some insects have cutting instruments that work just as scissors do. The poppy-bee is one of them, whose work is wonderful. This bee has a boring-tool, too. Its nest is usually made in old wood. This borer cleans out the nest for use. When all is ready, the insect cuts out pieces of leaves to line the nest and to make the cells. These linings are cut in the shape of the cells. You would be surprised to see the care taken to have every piece just the right size.

FUN FOR FRIVOLOUS FROLICS.

Seated in a circle you begin to count, passing rapidly from one to the next but instead of saying "seven" the player says "Buz" which must be repeated at 14, 21 and each multiple of seven; also instead of five or any multiple of five, take 10 15, etc., the player must say "Bang." A forfeit must be paid each time one fails to "Buz" or "Bang" at the right time.

You can get up a quarrel, but will you be any better off after you have quarreled so fiercely that peace will be agreeable?

MYSTERY OF THE AURORA

Ingenious Experiments Prove that the Borealis is Due to Electrified Sun Particles Playing About a Magnetised Earth.

That marvelous and beautiful spectacle, the aurora borealis, has hitherto been a complete puzzle to scientists. Until recently it was impossible even to make a photograph of the aurora.

It is certain that there is a connection between the aurora and electrical disturbances on earth, for the former never passes without the latter. During a great auroral display of September 25, 1909, telegraphic communication was interrupted all over the world.

Svante Arrhenius, the great Swedish scientist, has now put forward the theory that the aurora is the result of electrical particles thrown off by the sun. To test this theory M Birkeland has directed an electrical discharge of the kind described against a globe and succeeded in reproducing a miniature aurora.

The theory of Professor Arrhenius is that the sun is continually discharging ionized gases. They condense and form particles which are electrified negatively. These are thrown out all over the universe by the force of radiation.

These particles emit cathode rays, similar to those which produce X-rays. They enter into combination with terrestrial electric currents, are attracted to the poles in accordance with the laws of magnetism and give rise to the aurora, just as the cathode rays in a Crookes tube produce a beautiful light.

M. Birkeland directed a powerful mass of cathode rays upon a small magnetic globe representing the earth. It was covered with a coating of cyanide of platinum and barium to make visible the places struck by the cathode rays. A blaze of brilliant electrical illumination formed itself over the top of the globe, representing the North Pole, or over the bottom of the globe, representing the South Pole. The place where the illumination concentrated itself varied according to the manner in which the experimenter manipulated the cathode rays. It showed itself slightly between the poles. Altogether it was a close reproduction of the way the auroral lights are distributed over the earth.

A Delightful System

The young postmaster of a village was hard at work in his office when a gentle tap was heard upon the door, and in stepped a blushing maiden of sixteen with a money order which she desired cashed.

She handed it, with a bashful smile, to the official, who, after examining it, gave her the money. At the same time he asked her if she had read what was written on the margin of the order.

"No, I have not," she replied, "for I canot make it out. Will you please read it for me."

The young postmaster read as follows:—"I send you ten shillings and a dozen kisses."

Glancing at the bashful girl he said, "Now, I have paid you the money I suppose you want the kisses."

"Yes," she said, "if he has sent me any kisses, I want them, too."

It is hardly necessary to say that the balance of the order was promptly paid, and in a scientific manner. On reaching home the delighted maiden remarked to her mother:—

"Mother, this post-office system of ours is a great thing, developing more and more every year, and each new feature seems to be the best. Jimmy sent me a dozen kisses along with the money order, and the postmaster gave me twenty!"

Reno, Nov. 6.—Through the accidental discovery by C & Seager, of Madoc country, in an orchard at Oxpine Creek of a tree bearing seedless and coreless apples, it is hoped that with the assistance of Luther Burbank it will be possible to propagate seedless apples. The tree is seven years old, but has been nibbled each year by cattle. This year it bore 25 perfect seedless and coreless specimens.

THE MASTER KILLER

By Brest Brabazon

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

El Delgado Terrible — so he had been dubbed — was a tiger, a small Campeche tiger of south-eastern Mexico. In all the lumber and chicli camps, the rubber and cane plantations, and little villages that were sprinkled throughout the wide, vast expanse of jungle, he was known and hated and feared; this animal that seemed supernatural, so great was his prowess — The Terrible One — truly.

Never before had the district been visited by a tiger whose methods were so peculiar, so inexplicable, so phenomenal, for always was his prey the same — a steer, a bull, a cow— never anything smaller, never the favourite flesh of his kind, a young calf. One day he would kill at a certain place, and the next day he would be heard from some forty or fifty miles distant.

Heywood swore that he would have that beast — alive, and got busy.

Then he went to work; at the watering holes, the tiger's own little intricate paths, around the cattle corrals, he set steel traps, cunningly placed and hidden by his master hand. But all to no avail.

By and bye he located the animal's lair, a small hole in the base of a rocky cliff with a couple of fuzzy little cubs rolling around in front. Trap after trap of many kinds were fixed in vain and at length Heywood packed a month's food and established himself in a hollow giant mahogany close by the water hole. Early morning of the sixth day his eyes caught a huge black-gray boar waddling slowly, majestically along, and Heywood knew that a jungle tragedy was at hand. And he saw something he never could forget.

From an intricate tangle of dense vine work a form shot out — a long, thin, serpentine, tawny form — front paws outstretched, tail rigidly poised, and the cruel, sardonic mouth open. For twenty feet it passed through the air like a well-hurled dart, and then the tiger landed on the enemy's back. As the tiger struck the boar, the bristles that ran along the back-bone under the short, woolly hair, rose in a formidable mane; the thick lips curled up and showed all of the two long, dangerous tusks and sharpened teeth. It roared angrily, heaved itself up on its short massive hind legs, and with all its force flung itself backward. At the same instant, the tiger withdrew his two hind claws from his opponent's haunches; took a firmer grip with his fore claws; sank his punishing teeth and jaws into the back of the boar's neck, and with marvellous rapidity, coupled with all his strength, he whirled his body around in a circle.

Again the boar rose up; the tiger crouched, the grey beast jumped forward, hoping to crush the other beneath his hoofs, but the black and yellow bunch of steely muscles sprang to meet him, and they struck with terrible impetus. There was the gnashing of teeth on teeth, a firework display of swinging feet, each one trying to rip the other open.

Following on some severe and bloody tackling on both sides, in course of which the tiger had his throat slit, the big boar became antagonised and goaded to such a state that he was rendered almost crazy. His foaming lips screwed up in a snarl; his blazing eyes almost closed, and like some huge, awkward monster, he bounded wildly forward, grunting and bellowing his rage. But as he came on the elusive tiger side stepped, and just as the boar struck the ground, he sprang and twined his limbs about the hairy body. The boar toppled over and for a moment lay kicking on his back.

The Terrible One had been waiting for this moment. Every muscle in his body seemed tingling and twitching; his cruel, long mouth was open wide, and his eyes glinted red and green. Like a fearfully powerful piston-rod his serpentine form shot forth. He struck the boar squarely and pinned him down to earth. Deep —deep he buried his teeth in the gory throat and swayed his body from side to side. And then sounded a muffled shriek of satisfied longing; once more the tiger threw his body free from his opponent, and another life had gone out.

Heywood in his hollow tree trunk, relaxed his tense, clasped fingers and firmly compressed lips. It was the greatest, bravest battle he had ever seen.

And now, with eyes of respectful homage, he watched the tiger, standing silent, trembling a bit with weakness from his loss of blood, red fluid dripping from his mouth and sides, and the gashes on his neck and belly.

Heywood saw him walk painfully and softly forward in the direction of the watering hole — the trap surrounded water. For the fraction of a second the man deliberated, then his heart flew to his throat and he stepped forth, his mind made up, "Back," he yelled, pointing his arm at the tiger, "I don't want yu now — no — yu can live. Yu're the grandest thing I ever seen. Back!"

The weakened, battered tiger moved not an inch. He raised his stooping head and stared haughtily, scornfully, at the man.

Heywood's heart went out. At that moment he loved him as he would have loved a brother of whom he was vastly proud. He walked forward and spoke as if to a human being. "Back, boy, I tell yu there's traps there, back."

The tiger moved his eyes and gazed stonily at the spring. He seemed to understand. Heywood sprang to within five feet of the animal. He stretched his arm at the brazen face and broke out excitedly, "I tell yu, boy, there's traps there. Get back — get back to yu're mate an' young and let 'em fix yu up. Yu're game — the gamest thing I ever seen, an' by God, I ain't agoin' to hunt yu."

Once again the proud, fearless head was raised with kingly grace, the brazen, cunning eyes seemed to pierce the man through, and slowly, gracefully, arrogantly, El Delgado Terrible —the master killer of the bush— strode off through the thick, black jungle.

If it were not for the fact that most people ask too much, there wouldn't be much use for courts.

NORWOOD NEWS BUDGET

Special Correspondence

Warsaw, Nov. 8—Mr. A. F. Calder and Mr. Archie McBride of Peterboro spent a few days of last week in Dummer, shooting partridge.

Quite a number of the Warsaw people were present at the confirmation at Young's Point, Friday evening, November 3, when eight candidates were confirmed by His Lordship, Bishop Reeve, of Toronto. After the service, those from Warsaw were entertained to supper by Mr. and Mrs. Allen.

One of the ablest and most eloquent addresses the people of Dummer have ever had the opportunity of hearing was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Fusher, Anglican church minister of Marmora, in the Methodist church, South Dummer, on Sunday evening November 5th. About 300 persons were present to profit by his splendid discourse to Orangemen, and all the lodges in the vicinity were well represented.

The Y.M.C.A. intends giving a concert in the town hall on Friday evening, Nov. 10, part of which will be an exhibition of their muscular development.

The reular meeting of the Women's Institute will be held in the town hall on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock All ladies, whether members or not are welcome.

It will be interesting to the inhabitants of Warsaw, and to the farmers of the surrounding country to learn that one of our most prosperous merchants is putting a feed store in the building once used as a tannery. Ten thousand pounds of flour is his first investment and other feed stuffs in proportion.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was called for Monday evening this week, but on account of the inclemency of the weather there were not sufficient members present to form a quorum and consequently no business was transacted. Those members who braved the storm were the secretary and Messrs. C. E. Pakenham, E. B. Coffe, W. H. Cuthbertson, J. A. Finlay and John Doherty.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist church held a social on Friday evening last at the church. Quite a large number attended and spent a pleasant and sociable evening.

Constable J. T. Johnston is busily engaged distributing the tax bills. The villagers as a rule are quite pleased to note that the amount payable into the funds of the village is slightly less than the amount asked for last year. In view of the fact that a large amount was spent this year on street improvements the reduction in the tax rate speaks well for the financing of this year's council.

Mr G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, has engaged the town hall for a dairy meeting on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 22nd.

Mr. Coons, manager of the Singer Sewing Machine store in Peterborough, is in town on business.

Miss Edythe Koorex has returned from Belleville, where she was the guest of her sister.

Miss Gertrude Greenbank has returned from Toronto.

Miss Clara Puffer intends leaving on Tuesday for Chicago.

OBITUARY.

There passed away suddenly on Thursday last at her home in Asphodel a very popular young lady, beloved by all who knew her, in the person of Miss Lottie McMullen. The late Miss McMullen was in Norwood only the day before the startling news was spread through the village of her death. The deceased will be greatly missed by her many friends in the community.

The funeral, which was conducted by Rev. Father Kelly, took place on Saturday morning, from St. Paul's church to the R. C. cemetery.

Mrs. Sackville visited friends in Peterborough last week.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. J. Weir, who sustained injuries when she fell through a cellar door on Thanksgiving morning, is improving.

Miss Edith Nicol has returned from visiting her cousin, Mrs. J. Muller, in Montreal.

TANNERVILLE

Special Correspondence.

Tannerville, Nov. 9. — Mr. Charley Dawson has been erecting a new cement silo and has now his winter ensilage stored away.

Mr. Peter Dawson has been making an addition to his hen-house and expects to go into poultry raising more extensively. Mr. Thomas Tanner was the contractor.

There has been keen competition between Mr. James Pengelley and Mr. Richard Nurse, agents for the Mayers Milling Co., and Mr. Wilbert Barnard and Mr. Peter Dawson, agents for the Campbell Milling Co., in the buying of grain and selling of flour and many profited by the sale in the price of flour, which the competition afforded.

We were attacked by Benafort in the last week's issue rather unjustly and while it was said that farmers should follow the example of Lorenz in getting sulky plows for their wives that we were not intended to be labelled advocates of sulky plows for ladies as they had termed it and consider that it is nice to see a lady handling three horses on a sulky plow or other farm implement and that a farmer having such a partner should be proud.

The increased blacksmith's rates are a worry to the residents of this part, but we hope that Mr. Tommy Tanner may offer some inducement to some worthy smithy.

The women have great admiration for a man who says he never saved a cent until he got married.

Building contractors should get over the habit of taking their time. If it ever becomes necessary to have an ark in a hurry, we will all drown.

WHERE IS THIS BOY'S OVERCOAT?

If the boy hasn't been asking about it himself it's high time his parents were attending to the matter.

Many a lad prides himself on the length of time he can go without an Overcoat, but this sort of fool-hardiness in often paid for in doctor's bills.

PREMIER ASQUITH DEALS WITH CO-OPERATION IN THE EMPIRE

Britain Has no Jealousies Over Rise and Freedom of Over-Sea Dominions --- Key to Empire's Prosperity.

London, Nov. 10.—(Through Reuter's Agency to Ottawa.)—At the Guildhall banquet last night the lord mayor, Sir Thomas Crosby presided, and there was the usual brilliant assemblage of Cabinet Minsters, ambassadors, peers, members of the House of Commons, the Archbishop of Canterbury, bishops, judges, representatives of the navy and army and men prominent in finance and commerce.

Premier Asquith delivered a most important speech, devoted to Imperial and foreign affairs. He opened with a generous tribute to Mr. Balfour, expressing unfeigned and profound regret at the announcement of his resignation, acknowledging the irreparable loss which his withdrawal from constant interchange must involve to the daily life of Parliament. He hoped and believed that there were many chapters of Mr. Balfour's career still to be written by the pen of history. It would be long before there would be seen in the forefront of politics a personality so invaluable to his friends, so formidable to his foes, so interesting and attractive to friends and foes alike—such a unique combination of gifts and powers as made Mr. Balfour by universal consent the most distinguished member of the greatest deliberative assembly in the world.

PREMIER ASQUITH.

Turning to Imperial affairs, Mr. Asquith referred to the illustrious, world-wide concourse which celebrated the coronation. He said that the representative of foreign countries then witnessed in Westminster as impressive a demonstration as the annals of nations can afford of the unity of a great state, of the continuity of its history, of the assimilating and incorporating forces which can hold together a world-wide empire by ties of loyalty and liberty.

The day after to-morrow their Majesties start on the first visit which a British sovereign has ever paid to his Indian dominions, and he need not say that over the whole Empire they carry with them the hopes and prayers of all their subjects.

By a happy coincidence, he continued, the year of the coronation was marked by the first meeting of the Imperial Conference. For the first time representatives of the great dominions were admitted into full confidence regarding the ends and methods of our foreign policy and, surveyed together the strategic aspects of the Empire. We were able to come to a complete agreement concerning the reciprocal parts we were to take in its naval and military defence.

The proceedings of the conference were marked by a significant advance in the policy of co-operation without centralization, which is growingly re-

BRITAIN'S NAVY IS READY

London, Nov. 9.—Winston Spencer Churchill's first speech for the navy, as first lord of the admiralty at the Lord Mayor's Guildhall banquet to-day, stirred his audience. "The navy is strong," he declared, "and ready instantly to put forth its strength." He paid a tribute to Admiral Lord Fisher, of Kilverstone, who retired as admiral of the fleet this year, as the greatest naval lord of the century.

Mr. Churchill promised a reduction of the present abnormal expenditure without compromising national security. "It would be affectation," he said, "to pretend that the sudden and rapid growth of the German navy was not the main factor in Great Britain's vast expenditures."

PEKIN PREPARING FOR RAID BY REBELS; THRONE TOTTERING

Vast Stores of Provisions in the Forbidden City, Ready For a Siege—Manchus Will be Driven Out.

Pekin, Nov. 10.—(2.52 a.m.)—Pekin is still awaiting the approach of the rebels. The Forbidden City is filled with princes, high officials and others who are entitled to enter within the gates. Vast stores of provision have been transported to that place, which, strongly guarded, is ready for a siege.

Active preparations for what is considered the inevitable assault upon the capital are going on within the legation quarter, for it is now conceded that the Manchu dynasty will be ousted out of office. Foreigners, it is asserted, will be fully protected, but experience has taught that the temper of the people is not to be trusted when revolutionary movements are in progress.

The fact that Tientsin did not fall yesterday as was expected, is a hopeful sign, because it indicates that whatever steps the revolutionists are taking in the north, at least they are proceeding along careful lines and are acting with consideration and without haste.

While reinforcements have reached Pekin, reports have been received of numerous defections of the Manchu soldiers to the rebel side. The Government troops are an uncertain quantity, but there are still loyal regiments which are fighting for the dynasty.

At Nanking, where the revolutionists outnumber the imperialists five to one, the latter still hold Purple Mountain. They are strongly entrenched in that position and are said to have abundant supplies at their command.

A wireless despatch has been received from the American consul, Edward C. Baker, who has arrived at Hankow from Ichang. The consul states that the customs and other foreign officials are leaving Chung King in Sze Chuen Province, from which place the British consul sends reports that the situation is critical. The road between Ichang and Chung King is unsafe and there is danger from robber bands.

An American, who is in close touch with Tientsin rebels, says that they are divided into two factions. The conservative faction will probably control and wait until there is a material force behind before taking over the city. At the present time only 2,500 police within the city support the rebels.

The attitude of the foreigners is causing anxiety and distrust among the rebels. The rebel leaders point out that the consuls have permitted the Government to bring in soldiers contrary to the protocol of 1910, and have objected to Gen. Chang bringing in troops. Foreign railway officials, they say, provide trains at the Government's order, but not at Gen. Chang's. A threatening letter, referring to such incidents as not neutral has been received by the consular body at Tientsin. The Pekin-Hankow Railway officials likewise are pro-Manchu.

Gen. Tuan, with 2,000 men of the Third Division, has reached Pao Ting Fu. The remainder of the division is believed to be with Gen. Chang. The Chinese Foreign Board announces that the Phan Railway, which was reported blocked by the rebels, will soon be cleared.

Flees to Hong Kong.

Hong Kong, Nov. 10.—The Govenor of Hong Kong announced at a legislative council yesterday that the viceroy of Canton was coming to seek temporary asylum at Hong Kong. The viceroy, it was explained, had concurred in the declaration in favor of the Republicans in order to avoid terrible bloodshed. The governor said he confidently looked to the Chinese community properly to receive the viceroy, who was in distress, as their guest.

Says Consul Interfered.

Portland, Me., Nov. 10.—The strike of the Portland Longshoremen assumed an international aspect last night, when resolutions were passed by the Longshoremen's Society, charging that British Vice-Consul John B. Keating is promoting the organization of a rival society, for the purpose of breaking the strike. The resolutions say that the "society resents the interference on the part of a vice-consular officer of the Kingdom of Great Britain," and proposes that his "conduct" be called to the attention of the State Department and the British ambassador.

LOCOMOTIVE MEN ON STRIKE; BOILER-MAKERS WON'T WORK

Trouble Over Repairs to New York Central Engines—Strike-Breakers Ready.

Dunkirk, N.Y., Nov. 10.—J. A. Franklin of Kansas City, president of the International Boilermakers' and Helpers' Union, yesterday officially declared a strike against all the plants of the American Locomotive Co. About 2,500 men at Dunkirk, Schenectady, Richmond, Pittsburg and Montreal will be affected.

The boilermakers at the Dunkirk plant have not worked for several weeks. They refused to do work on engines from the New York Central System, where the boilermakers have been on strike since last February, and the officials thereupon closed the plant affected.

It is rumored that strikebreakers will be imported to Dunkirk to take the places of the men out here. A high fence is being built around the company's property, and it is reported preparations are being made to feed and lodge the men in the local plant.

New C.P.R. Steamer.

Montreal, Nov. 10.—A cablegram received by the Canadian Pacific Railway officials yesterday, announce the launching of their new boat, the "Princess Sophia," at the yards of the Bow, McLachlan & Co. of Paisley, Scotland.

UNIONISTS TO, MAKE CHOICE

Will Select a Commons Leader on Monday.

Austen Chamberlain Seems to be Favorite.

London, Nov. 10.—Eager discussion in political centres yesterday served to emphasize the difficulty the Unionist party will find adequately to fill Mr. Balfour's place. Monday's meeting, which not unlikely will need a ballot to decide the matter, will only select a new man for the leadership in the House of Commons, leaving the question of the leadership of the party as a whole to be decided later.

It is understood that Sir Edward Carson and Alfred Lyttelton have declined to be nominated. The choice therefore lies between Austen Chamberlain, the Rt. Hon. Walter Hume Long and A. Bonar Law. At the present moment Mr. Chamberlain seems to be the favorite.

John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Parliamentary party, said yesterday: "The resignation of Mr. Balfour gives the Nationalists a great advantage in the home rule fight as fighting against any prospective leader will be nothing compared with a fight against an old Parliamentary hand like Balfour. I am personally sorry to see Mr. Balfour retire, as he always fought fairly."

RUMOR THAT CASTRO WAS ASSASSINATED

Bordeaux, Nov. 10.—Relative to the report brought here by passengers on the steamer Perous, which arrived yesterday, that ex-President Castro had been assassinated in Venezuela, neither the captain of the Perous nor the agent at Laguaira had heard the rumor. A prominent Venezuelan, Delgado Chalban, who left recently for Venezuela, declared that Castro had taken refuge in the Andes Mountains.

Close of St. Lawrence Navigation.

Montreal, Nov. 10.—A tremendous rush of business, taxing the efforts of every longshoreman and dock laborer who can be obtained will make things hum along the waterfront during the next two weeks, for but sixteen days remain for nearly three dozen ocean steamers making for Montreal to reach this port, discharge, load again, and clear for their home ports. It is the general opinion of marine men that two weeks from Saturday next, Nov. 25, will see the last big ocean vessel here slip out of her berth and down the river for the last time this season.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY DEALS AT LENGTH WITH TAX REFORM

Premier Holds That Single Tax Would be an Iniquitous Thing—Commission to Reform Assessment Probable.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—Sir James Whitney expressed his views pretty freely yesterday afternoon on the matter of taxation. In answer to a question as to whether he would be willing to say anything regarding the suggested legislation exempting improvements on property from taxation, the Premier replied that he was not averse to making public his ideas on the subject.

"Well, now, the Government is asked to pledge itself to enact legislation to allow municipalities to adopt what is really the Henry George doctrine of levying all taxation on land, or, as its promoters put it, allowine municipalities to exempt from taxation improvements on land. The Government will not pledge itstlf, and any member of the House who does so will be unwise.

"Now, to come to the merits of the case. For the purpose of illustration, let us assume that a farmer, A, has $5,000. He buys a farm for $4,000, and puts up a house for $1,000. Another man, B, who has $20,000, comes along, pays $4,000 for the adjoining farm, which is of the same value as that of A, and puts up a house which costs him $16,000. The doctrine now advanced is that A and B shall each pay taxes on $4,000. In other words, the poor man has $1,000 exempt from taxation while the rich man avoids payment of taxation on $16,000. I shall not argue this point at all, but will say that when the farmers of Ontario make it clear that they desire the imposition upon themselves of such a rank and manifestly injustice, no Government will stand in their way.

"When you come to cities, towns and villages, the case is not exactly the same as it is in the farm districts. It is, of course, quite unfair that a man should be allowed to hold vacant land for a long time for speculative purposes while its value increases. I am assured by gentlemen of long experience in such matters in several of our cities, that as the law now stands it is very difficult by reason of the different schemes of taxation to which it is subject, to hold such land for a length of time without loss to the owner. However, I think some remedy should be thought out and applied, and I am sure some remedy can be found without the hasty adoption of any extreme view.

"It is our practice now to have the assessment law remodeled every four or five years. The Government will, of course, continue the practice, and have a special assessment committee meet after the close eof the session for the presentatiin and full discussion of all views on this subject, and I have no doubt that such discussion and the presentation of differing views —not merely one view—will aid in arriving at a substantiative conclusion in which everybody will concur.

"This is the sane and sensible way of dealing with such subects which are not in themselves of a party nature, and ust as it would be absurd and unwise to reject a conclusion arrived at by such committee, so it would be absurd and unwise for either the Government or members of the Legislature to give pledges beforehand adopting any particular view. Such a course on the part of members of the House would prevent them from giving consideration to any view except the one to which they were pledged.

"I intended to have said that propositions which might be of value in a new and comparatively unsetted country might easily make for bad results in an old, established country, where there are large municipal debts, and debentures outstanding, and where, as in our case, outside of school rates and certain debts, municipal taxation is limited to two per cent."

PUGSLEY FEELS IN GOOD HUMOR

Will Get Into Parliamentary Game Heartily.

Montreal, Nov. 10.—Hon. William Pugsley, ex-Minister of Public Works, reached the city yesterday from Ottawa, where he made a short stay en route home from Atlantic City. He expresses his intention of entering heartily into his Parliamentary duties with the beginning of the session.

"There is lots of good work for the Opposition to do," said Mr. Pugsley.

Speaking of the Transcontinental and the improvements at St. John, which are necessary to enable the road to use Courtney Bay as its Atlantic shipping terminus, Mr. Pugsley said that the new Government had done nothing at all to forward the steps taken by the old. Delay was serious, as the Transcontinental would be read yto use the port within a year.

ROAD HAS SLID INTO LAKE; LEGAL MIX-UP IN TILBURY

Thomas Long for Senate?

Collingwood, Nov. 10.—The name of Thomas Long, for half a century identified with the interests of this town, is being mentioned in connection with the vacancy in the Senate created by the death of Sir John Carling.

While maintaining his interests here for the past 25 years, however, he has established many affiliations in Toronto, where his standing as a financial man is unexcelled.

Mr. Long served two terms as a member of the House of Commons and had the Conservative party been in power during the past 18 years, his services would have been recognized. His claims are unsurpassed at this time and this town looks to see him rewarded.

Queer Action in the Courts Over Oil Land Leases.

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 10.—Alex. Chaplin, who secured leases from the Government to drill for oil and gas under the waters of Lake Erie, no sooner commenced the sinking of his first well than an injunction was issued against him by John Carr, owner of the farm opposite it, and by the Volcanic Oil & Gas Co., who lease from Carr. The Volcanic Company is an oil trust that practically now controls the Tilbury field.

The plaintiffs claim that Chaplin is trespassing on Carr's property and make a novel plea to prove their claim. They assert that the southern boundary of Carr's lot is several rods out in the lake and the crown patent to Carr's predecessor in the title granted land to the northwest limit of the old Talbot road, laid out about a century ago.

The original Talbot road has long since washed into the lake, along with several rods of the original township lot, but Carr claims that this does not affect his boundary lines.

As all the other farmers along the lake shore are in a similar position Chaplin finds himself in a peculiar position, and until the courts settle the farmer's rights in the matter his scheme to drill under the waters of Lake Erie will have to be abandoned.

GERMANS ARE BELLIGERENT

Reichstag Speakers Attack Britain in Debate.

Applause by House at Bellicose Remarks.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—That Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's position is badly shaken is the only possible verdict on yesterday's debate in the Reichstag on the Morocco-Congo treaties. After his speech had fallen completely flat, the speakers of the four leading parties, Conservatives, Clericals, Liberals and Socialists, successively attacked his arguments and vied with each other in criticizing the agreement.

The debate called out many sharp attacks upon England, which were greeted with applause by the House and galleries. The chief attack was made by Herr Von Heydebrand and was astonishingly bellicose.

Referring to Chancellor Lloyd-George's well-remembered speech, he said that Germany now knows where to find the enemy.

"Germans," he continued, "are not accustomed to submit to such things. The German people will give a German answer to this English question. The Government will know what answer to give them when the hour comes. When it comes it is for the Government to say, but its duty is to decide for the honor of the German nation. We Germans will be ready to make whatever sacrifices are necessary." (Long and continued applause.)

The president of the chamber had to beg the members to restrain their demonstrations. The speaker went on: "I can declare in behalf of all my political friends that we are ready when honor requires to make sacrifices not only of blood, but of treasure. We are ready to make such sacrifices whenever demanded."

GOVERNMENT STOPS BERESFORD BOOK

ADMIRAL LORD CHARLES BERESFORD

A sensation has been caused in London because of the sudden dramatic withdrawal from publication of Lord Charles Beresford's book, "The Great Betrayal." The public has been on the tiptoe of expectation because the book was expected to contain sensational revelations. It is rumored in London that if the book had been published the government would have removed Lord Charles' name from the retired list of the navy

A SAFEGUARD

The Hamilton Herald (Independent) thinks that the necessity of obtaining a fiat from the attorney-general before an action can be brought against the government, is a good safeguard, especially in the case of the hydro-electric. It says:

"Among the promises made by Leader Rowell in his election manifesto is this one; "We will abolish the right of the government to deny access to the courts to those who claim to have suffered wrong or damage through the action of the government or any commission appointed thereunder."

"It cannot be denied that the power possessed by the government to deny to any citizen the right to bring an action against itself save with its consent is a power which may be abused, and behind which grave injustice may be done. But it is a power which is held by all British governments and sometimes exercised by them. The check upon its abuse is the force of public opinion. Any unjust or oppressive use of the power cannot fail to be generally resented, and a government dependent for its continued existence upon the favor of the people will not put itself in jeopardy by a too arbitrary exercise of its right to prevent actions at law against itself or its agents.

"There are times when it is not only expedient but necessary in the public interest to prevent such actions. For example, if the Whitney government had not refused to sanction actions against the Hydro-Electric commission, the Hydro-Electric power transmission system would not now be completed, and the project would have been "hung up" indefinitely. The private electrical interests which were organised to do battle against the people's power movement would, through men of straw, have brought action after action against the commission, and carried each of them to the imperial privy council if necessary; would have obtained injunction after injunction to restrain the commission and its agents from proceeding with particular portions of the work. The project would have been exposed to a well-conceived system of harassment and obstruction, with some of the cleverest lawyers in the country directing the war in the courts—and, it is to be feared, with powerful auxiliaries on the bench. There would have been no lack of the sinews of war; the campaign of obstruction would have been carried on regardless of expense.

"The refusal of the attorney-general to grant fiats permitting actions against the commission prevented all this, and in preventing it, saved the public from endless expense and ensured the completion of a great and beneficial public work.

If Mr. Rowell really proposes to deprive the government of its right to prevent vexatious, obstructive litigation against the crown and its agents without its consent, he is making a mistake."

THE FEMALE WAGE EARNER

"Is it possible for a female wage-earner to save from her monthly wage an amount which in the aggregate will be sufficient to provide her with an income from the time her earning days are over?" was recently the subject of an interesting discussion at a Women's Club, and the conclusion come to was, that if the wage-earner were earning less than $500 a year this would be extremely difficult. For the purpose of illustration, the period of accumulation was assumed to be from 23 to 60, and the amount of capital required $6,000, in order to yield an income of $300 a year, which was considered to be the minimum amount on which she could maintain herself with comfort and respectability. All this may be quite true. But there is another plan of investing of which the ladies had evidently not heard, namely, the Canadian Government Annuities system, which is not only absolutely safe, but which will give a much larger return for a much smaller investment, and larger it may be said than any other plan available will give as a means of making provision for old age.

For example, if a woman of 23 were to deposit with the Government yearly the sum of $39.24 until she was 60, which she could do by weekly or monthly instalments if she preferred, or a total of $1451.88 only, the Government would pay her $300 a year or $75 every three months so long as she might live from and after 60. If she dies before attaining that age, the total payments made with 3 per cent. compound interest would be refunded to her heirs. If she died at 58 they would receive $2425.77, or $1052.37 more than she paid in up to that time.

If she had no one dependent upon her and was concerned about herself only, she could secure under the "B" plan the same quarterly income of $75 for an annual payment of $29.67, or for a total paid in of $1097.79, a yearly return for life no matter how long that may be of nearly 30 per cent of the sum invested.

Mark the enormous difference; on the one hand she would require at 60 a capital of $6000 invested at 5 per cent to yield her an income of $300, with all the accompanying anxiety of making safe investments, while on the other hand she could provide the same income for about one-fifth of the purchase money spread in easy payments over the accumulating period. In ninety-nine cases out of one hundred she would not, having regard to the recurring temptation to use the money, have the capital at 60 which would be necessary to give the income. You have only to write (postage free) to the Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, to obtain full information in regard to this provident scheme.

ASSESSMENTS

In Hamilton a rather curious situation has arisen in reference to the assessing of a ward. The assessment commissioner did not agree at all with the assessments made by the assessor under him, and appealed on behalf of the city to have the figures raised. The court of revision agreed with his view of the matter, and has raised the assessment in some cases forty and fifty per cent. It might not be a bad idea for Peterborough to appoint an assessment commissioner, in order to accomplish the same purpose.

The matter of assessments is one in which there may be plenty of slipshod work. The assessor is sworn to assess land and buildings at a fair valuation, neither putting the maximum estimate on property, and not undervaluing it. The assessors as a rule try to strike a valuation at which the property will be always held, in spite of the ordinary fluctuations of values—the ups and downs brought by changing commercial conditions.

The great majority of Peterborough people may not believe it, but property in Peterborough is assessed considerably lower than in cities the same size farther west. Perhaps the fact that there are comparatively few appeals is an evidence that the people as a whole are satisfied with the assessing, but the fact that the city has so little spare funds for city improvements, after uncontrollable expenditure is provided for, in spite of a tax rate of 22 mills, is an indication that its receipts from taxes are comparatively light.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A. G. MacKay does not intend to be downed in his riding, even though the Toronto Liberals made it impossible for him to continue as leader. In the words of the late premier, Sir George Ross, Mr MacKay will F-I-G-H-T.

Overconfidence is fatal in elections. If the Conservatives will work, and believe that the work is necessary, Mr Peck should have a clean-cut victory in this riding, but the danger is that everyone will take it for granted that his vote is not necessary. Every man's vote is as necessary for Mr. Peck, as it was for Mr. Burnham in the late election, and more so.

The Hebert case in Montreal will come before the courts in a few days. It would be very pleasant indeed to have the case taken through the courts to the privy council, to get an interpretation of the law as it now exists. The law has been variously interpreted by judges, and there is necessity for a standard decision in the matter.

A Kindred Spirit

(Orillia Packet.)

The Packet would like to have the pleasure of introducing the Peterborough Examiner to a gentleman in Orillia who appears honestly to believe that no Tory politician or government ever, even by accident, did anything right, and that no Liberal government ever did anything wrong. In this honest, but simple soul the Peterborough paper would find a kindred spirit.

The Least Fuel. The Most Satisfaction

When You Burn the Coal See That You Get the Value

It requires no argument to prove that the range you can use every part of, at the same time, is the range that will give you the full return for the fuel you burn. On the

HAPPY THOUGHT

Range you can use the oven and the top of the stove at the same time. While ironing you can have a batch of biscuits in the oven, and when baking you can prepare dinner without cooling the oven. This is the only way to keep down fuel bills and the only true range economy. The Patent Damper regulates the heat so that it can be used on any part of the range or on all the range.

Everywhere the Happy Thought, by its many labor-saving devices, is lightening the work of the housekeepers. Its efficiency is the result of the care taken to construct it and it amply justifies anything said in its favor by those who have used it.

More than a quarter of a million "Happy Thoughts" are in daily use in Canada.

CHAPTER I.

A Bad Start

"I am afraid that you are a poet, Miss Clifford."

"What do you mean, Mr. Anstruther?"

"To be polite to a young lady with an imagination. Did you not tell me when I was in Larkshire, that it never rained in British Columbia? Don't you remember how blue your skies were when you were six thousand miles away from them? May I be permitted to ask if this is a fair sample of your Eden?"

The speaker, a tall, slight man, of not more than twenty-three, stood beside an up-country cart, the collar of his waterproof coat turned over his ears, a wet cigarette drooping from his lips, and an icy sleet storm driving into the back of his neck, in spite of his endeavors to keep it out.

Every line of his thin, well-bred face expressed discomfort and disgust, whilst the smartness of his get-up emphasized the roughness of his surroundings. The ladies he was addressing, in spite of the disadvantage of sex, seemed infinitely more in their element than he did.

"Does it never rain in England, Mr. Anstruther?"

"Yes, but we admit it, though I never saw anything like this in that much-maligned country. I suppose this is what you call a blizzard," and he dug his heel irritably into his horse's ribs to turn that animal's quarters more emphatically upon the slanting deluge.

At this moment a man rode up on a ragged-looking cayuse, plain headed, and not too straight in the shoulder, but quick and handy as a cat.

This man looked at the speaker with a scarcely concealed sneer upon his weather-stained face.

"It's no good staying here, Mrs. Rolt," he said to the girl's companion. "This won't let up before dark, and it's going to turn cold. Shouldn't wonder if we got the blizzard that gentleman talks about."

"How far is it to Brown's, Jim?"

"Can't say exactly. Pretty Dick says we are off the trail. I guess he' right."

"What is this then that we have been following?"

"A watering trail seemingly. I've not been this way myself for years, but the tracks all break up different ways a bit farther on."

The month was early October, and in October the weather may be perfect upon the northern cattle lands or it may not. There is a whisper always; sometimes a threat of winter in the air. Even in summer, in spite of the glorious sunshine, you cannot quite forget that winter reigns here at least half the year.

That morning, the long undulating uplands had been stretches of sunlit purple, royal in coloring, boundless in extent, with fair broideries of pure gold where the cottonwoods shed their leaves in the little wet gullies; now, in the grey of coming night, these uplands were wild, colorless and desolate as a stormy sea, void and without shelter.

It was a dreary outlook for the two women in an open rig, drawn by two utterly worn out horses, but it was Mr. Anstruther who resented it.

"Do you mean to say, Combe, that you don't know where we are?" he asked impatiently.

"We ain't in England, Mr. Anstruther, and we forgot to order milestones when we heard you were coming," retorted the other, his color rising.

"No, we're not in England," Mrs. Rolt put in hastily, "we are in Jim's own country, and if we are off the trail for a moment, it does not matter a little bit. Which way, Jim?"

Jim's face relaxed at once. Like a high-spirited horse he flinched at the least touch of the curb, but the light hands of his Boss's wife could do what they liked with Jim Combe, the foreman of the Risky Ranche.

"I'm afraid we can't make camp tonight where we meant to. I got fooled by the weather myself. Didn't calculate on a rainstorm before morning, nor on its turning so plaguey dark, but I know you won't whine if you do get wet. You can't hunt and keep dry all the time. If you let the Indian drive and follow me, I'll get you to Riley's cow camp in no time. It's rough shelter and bad going, but it's better than this," and he shook his bronco and moved on ahead of the cart.

"Do you mind very much, Kitty?" Mrs. Rolt asked her friend.

"Not a bit, dear, if you can keep the peace between those two. They're just spoiling for a row. What a vile temper Jim has developed since I went back to the Old Country. It's not like him."

Mrs. Rolt smiled mysteriously behind the folds of her hood, but she spoke only to the horses.

"Get up, mare. Keep close to Jim. He can see through anything."

Kitty looked a question, but Mrs. Rolt's face was so innocent of any arriere pensee that the girl said nothing, but just cuddled down into her wraps to endure, as well as might be, the long and dreary drive over unbroken prairie, into and out of ravines, which by daylight would have seemed to English people impossible for any wheeled vehicle.

However, ranche horses and ranche rigs are used to such work, and the Rolt's pair scrambled safely through the ravines, though the cart swayed at perilous angles sometimes, and the water slopped about on the floor of the cart making it impossible to keep the feet dry.

After an hour of this the horses began to balk badly, and the cold increased, so that what had been sleet became hail, stinging like the lash of a whip.

"Do you really think that it is any good to go on, Mrs. Rolt?" asked Anstruther, speaking for the first time since his spar with Combe. He was wet to the bone by this time, had lost all confidence in an Aqua Scutum, and had been down two or three times, his big English hunter being as much at sea in this country as its rider.

"Do you think that it is any good to stop here, Mr. Anstruther?"

The figure only half visible in the darkness ahead, reined in his horse and waited. He was too far in front to have heard, and yet Mrs. Rolt was afraid. Jim's hearing, like all his faculties, was keen as that of a wild thing.

"I don't believe that that fellow knows a bit where he is," muttered Anstruther angrily.

"I don't suppose that he does exactly, but he will find his way if we let him alone. None of us could do that in this darkness."

"You trust him wonderfully, Mrs. Rolt."

"We have known him a long time. Haven't we, Kitty?"

But the girl had nothing to say. Perhaps her sympathy and her experience were not at one. Anstruther growled something under his breath, and the procession moved on again at a foot's pace.

"Well, your horses seem to have had enough of it, if you have not, Mrs. Rolt," he said at last, as the pair balked resolutely at the foot of an exceptionally steep pitch. "Get up, you brutes," and the angry man laid his whip savagely across the quarters of the nearest horse.

It winced but stood still.

Again the whip fell, and the horses backed so that the cart nearly turned over.

"Stop that, Mr. Anstruther."

There was an angry ring in the lady's voice, but he was too savage to notice it.

"Pardon me. Miss Kitty and yourself cannot stay here all night. The brutes must be made to go,' and dismounting, he proceeded to make them.

But he was hardly on his feet sooner than Mrs. Rolt was out of the cart, and as his hand rose with the whip in it, he was caught by the wrist, and held as firmly by those thin white fingers as if it had been a man who held him.

"You forget yourself, Mr. Anstruther. These are my horses, and I'll manage them myself. Go on and ask Jim to wait for us. Kitty and I can do without your help, thank you."

Anstruther raised his hat with a muttered apology, and did as he was bid, wishing himself back in England and pretty Mrs. Rolt at the devil. What, he asked himself, did women want in such a country? However, unless he was very much mistaken, she would be obliged to call him back to those horses before he had gone very far. Such ill-bred brutes could not be made to understand anything but the whip. But Mr. Frank Anstruther was very much mistaken. Polly Rolt was not only a superb horsewoman—as good with cattle, her husband boasted, as any cow-boy—but she loved them and understood them; understood them because she loved them. So she stood there in the deep mud and driving hail, passing her fine, soft hands over the wealed flanks until some thrill of her gentle nature had soothed the poor beasts.

Then she stroked their drooping ears, and took the mare's muzzle into her arms, putting her face down beside the beast's, and talking tender nonsense which beasts understand.

"Drop the reins altogether, Dick," she commanded. "Now, old boy, come along, come on lassie, up there, up!" and with her hand on the mare's neck she led the way up the steep bank, the horses going with her where no whip could have driven them.

From the top of the bank a tiny speck of light showed ahead in the driven gloom.

"Jim has camped, I think."

"Just in time to save my life," said a desolate voice from the box seat. "I say, Mary—"

"Yes?"

"Let Mr. Anstruther down easily. You were pretty hard on him."

"Not half as hard on him as he was on poor Bess," snapped the other.

"I know, dear, but he is in a strange country, and things are not going well for him. He isn't a muff, really, and yet everything has gone wrong for him so far."

What Polly Rolt answered, only the winds know, but her face cleared as she drew up at the little log cabin, beside which stood two dripping horses.

"I made it, you see, Mr. Anstruther," she called in the slang of the West, "so I will forgive you. Now come and help us out of the cart. Kitty is too water logged to move without assistance."

Anstruther hurried to the cart, and putting his waterproof over the wheel, helped Mrs. Rolt daintily to the ground, as if her skirt had not been one half alkali mud already.

But she tried not to laugh, and pretty Kitty, her face flushed rose pink, and her eyes bright with the weather, made amends, leaning a trifle more than was perhaps absolutely necessary on the supporting arm and whispering:

"Never mind Polly. She doesn't mean it, but the Boss himself dare not flog the horses when she is near."

CHAPTER II.

Two Stages of Development

When Anstruther had taken the ladies baggage into the cabin, a miserable log hut with a mud roof adorned by a few antlers, he turned to unharness the horses.

His fingers were numbed with cold, and none of the buckles were where his English experience had taught him that they should be, besides which, as a matter of fact, he had generally left the unharnessing to his groom.

"Not that strap, Mr. Anstruther. See, this is the way,"

But before Mrs. Rold could show him, the silent figure, which had just taken the saddles off the riding horses, took charge, the wet straps yielded as if by magic to the cow-boy's fingers, and the beasts were led off by the Indian to some unseen corral.

"Where have you put Ruddygore?" Anstruther asked Combe.

"In the corral with the others. Why? Do you want him inside?"

On such a night Anstruther might have been forgiven for thinking that the hut was none too good for his well-bred hunter. It certainly was not as good as the loose box to which that valuable beast had been accustomed, but Anstruther saw that there was no help for it. Ruddygore would have take his chance with the rest.

"Well, what can I do to help?"

"You don't have to do anything. Just make yourself pleasant to the ladies. I'll be through in a minute."

"You might cut some wood for us, Mr. Anstruther," called Kitty from the doorway. "I should love a great roaring fire. I am just perished, aren't you, Mary?"

Anstruther picked up the axe a little doubtfully, and looked hopelessly around for something to chop.

"There are some pines in that last gully we passed through," suggested Mrs. Rolt.

Through the dark and not quite certain of his direction, the unhappy tchee tchaco (tenderfoot) splashed his way, and once in the gully put his back into the work. It was not his fault that the axe never bit twice in the same place; it was to his credit that he kept on hammering, until at last a green pine, seven or eight inches in diameter, yielded to his perseverance.

With infinite toil he trimmed it, cut it into lengths, and then packed it back in three trips to the cabin.

Jim had been waiting for the last two trips, and as soon as Anstruther put his axe down, he took it up and disappeared for five minutes, bringing back a huge burnt "stick" on his shoulder.

There was rather more wood in that burnt "stick" than Anstruther had brought in his three trips.

With half a dozen deft strokes the cowboy cut two short lengths from Anstruther's green pine, for fire-dogs, tossed all the rest of that gentleman's hard-earned loads out of the way, chopped, split, and kindled his own dry log, hung the billy on an improvised gallows, and began to cut the bacon.

It was all so simple and so quickly done when you knew how to do it, but it was annoying to have worked for half an hour to no purpose.

"I don't seem to be much good," said Mr. Anstruther.

Mrs. Rolt laughed and shook her head at the cowboy.

"Jim," she said, "you are an old bear. Why didn't you tell Mr. Anstruther what kind of sticks to cut?"

Jim grinned. "I guessed he'd have known that much."

"How should he? He has not had to chop wood before."

"You don't say! Is it all coal over there?"

Mrs. Rolt ignored the question.

"You play fair, Jim. You've got to show Mr. Anstruther how to do things. If you don't, I'll go home."

"Right away?"

"Yes, right away."

"Stop and have its dinner first," he said, with impudent coaxing, and handed her a dish of bacon, the rashers cut as thin and as daintily toasted as if they had been prepared by a professional cook.

"Won't you have some, Miss Clifford?"

Too the younger woman his manner was deferential, if not nervous, and, seeing her advantage, womanlike, Miss Kitty looked at the bacon and sniffed.

"It's too greasy, Jim. I wonder if you would toast some of it a little more for me, Mr. Anstruther?"

Frank hurried to obey her, but the fire had been knocked together to make a blaze, and the little flames which shot out, burned his fingers and smoked the bacon, but would not toast it.

"Half a shake, partner. Let me fix that fire for you. Now go ahead."

WATCHFUL PARENTS

Make Home Attractive to the Children and Welcome Their Friends

Mothers should realize that it will not do to permit a daughter to go where she will at her own discretion, to seek her associates where she may. They must know what her amusements are, whose company she cultivates, where she spends her leisure. Mothers, retrace your steps, stand at her side, be her age, think her thoughts, commune with youth, learn again its lessons, share its blessed hopes, lead it around the pitfalls by gentle counsel, persuasive reason, says Woman's World.

Do not make it necessary for the young people to go away from home for their good times. Make home attractive, their friends welcome. Make deceit unnecessary. When they go elsewhere find out where they spend the time, with whom they spend it, in what manner they spend it. Precaution often saves a heartache by-and-by. Many a brand has been snatched from the burning by a knowledge that came in time. Many a mother's heart has been bowed in shame and sorrow by a lesson learned too late.

Parents cannot afford to trust too much, to expect too much, to be indifferent, complaisant, neglectful. When the time of payment comes, their house will be left unto them desolate.

Is your home a home? Do your sons and daughters come in to meals and to sleep, go out at will and no questions asked, no interest manifested? Do they keep irregular hours? Are they practically under their own entire control? It is not easy to see how any mother can sit at ease, hearing the door close behind son or daughter going out for an evening, not knowing to a certainty how and where it is to be passed. It is not easy to see how she can bear to feel them going away from her into companionship and among influences of which she is ignorant; how she can so far forget her stewardship; how she can quiet her conscience. No gambler takes such chances or plays for such high stakes as the woman who holds a child in trust.

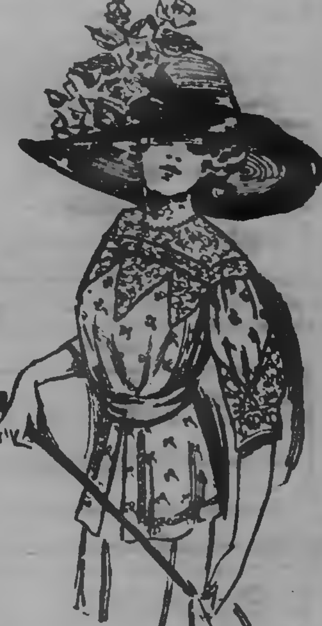
A case that holds an enormous power for evil recently came to note, however. In a nicely-furnished flat lived a young couple with their two small children.

But the son and daughter took advantage sometimes of their parents' absence, and had the wrong kinds of friends in to amuse them. This, however, was put a stop to by their father and mother when they learnt the facts. Soon all was altered, and things went happily again.

Vigilance is necessary on the part of all parents who want their sons and daughters to grow up uncontaminated.

Loving care and thought for one's children must be accompanied by a firm hand to guide them.

Children who love to obey their parents make the best citizens.



SUGGESTION FOR FLOWERED MATERIAL

Just over from Paris is a blouse made from flowered dimity, in which lace plays an important role. A yoke of allover lace is bordered with a band of insertion, below which are three deep lace points, front and back. The cuff on sleeve is a band of lace insertion topped with two lace points. The newest feature of this blouse, however, is the peplum, which has an inset band of insertion all around. The joining to blouse is made under a girdle of black satin.

WHY NOT?

Let the little ones get up early during the hot weather—as early as they want to—and have a scamper before breakfast. The best part of a summer's day is the early morning; let the children enjoy it. They will benefit more from an hour in the open air then than from two later in the day.

To keep a strong, healthy child in bed until seven or half-past may be positive cruelty. A child is like a bird; the moment he wakes he wants to be out.

HOME-MADE SOAP

An excellent way of using up waste dripping, fat skimmings, etc., is to make scouring soap of them. The fat need not be fresh, but it must be first melted down and strained. To every pound of fat allow one pound of red ash, two ounces of resin, and one gallon of water. Boil from five to six hours, according to the quantity, stirring frequently during the time. If it becomes too thick, add more water. The resin is not added until five minutes before the soap is lifted, and a handful of salt is added at the same time.

NO. 7 COMPANY HELD SMOKER

Good Time in Recreation Rooms at the Armories

The members of No. 7 company of the local regiment were entertained to a smoker and concert in the men's recreation rooms at the armories last night by Capt. Higgins There were also present the commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. E. B Clegg, Major Eastwood and Sergt.-Major Smith.

The opening part of the evening spent in card playing, after which the men gave an impromptu program, consisting of songs, recitations, instrumentals, etc.

About 10 a.m. refreshments were served by T. [illegible]er, and before the meeting broke up Lieut.-Col. E. B Clegg and Major Eastwood congratulated the men on such a large turnout. The rooms were open every night, he said, and Col. Clegg suggested that one night each week be laid aside as regimental night. Capt. Higgins wished his men to meet in the rooms once a week. The building was open and the regiment was not making enough use of it. The meeting broke up with the singing of the National Anthem.

LOCAL SPEAKERS AT OMEMEE BANQUET

The Men's Banquet in the Presbyterian church on Monday night proved quite successful and interesting notwithstaanding the decidedly unfavorable night. The tables were beautifully spread by the ladies of the church and looked as pretty as the dinner was toothsome, and it is needless to say that those present enjoyed this part of program as much if not more than what came after.

Mr. H. R. Armstrong was Toast Master for the occasion and acquitted himself with becoming dignity and grace. The speakers were Rev. Mr. Pogue and Mr. Cowan of Peterboro the former taking for his subject "The Saving of Man, a Man's Job," and Mr. Cowan's subject, "The Church's Opportunity," both being very interesting addresses. Mr. R. F. Downey, of Peterboro, a splendid soloist, contributed excellent selections accompanied by Miss Clarry. Rev. Wm. Johnston contributed a few words of felicitation at the close of the speeches.—Millbrook Reporter.

SOMETHING NEW AT ST. ANDREW'S

Young Men Came Forward With Unique Innovation

In future at religious meetings of any nature in the school-room of St. Andrew's church, the words of all hymns that are sung will be thrown on a canvas curtain, which will be erected on the platform and illuminated by a lantern, that through the enterprise of the young men of the church is being installed. This is anticipated to be a more successful method of having everybody take part in the singing, than is commonly done when hymn books are used in addition to the convenience which will be secured.

CHILDREN'S DAY

Large Staff of Willing Workers Will be Out To-morrow to Tag You

All sizes of silver pieces will be accepted to-morrow to the Tag Day workers for the Children's Aid Society. Larger donations will be more acceptable because the society has need of every dollar, that can be given by the citizens of Peterborough.

It should be unnecessary to bring the needs of the Children's Aid officials before the public as everyone knows of the splendid work this organization is doing. The money is necessary to carry on the present work and if still greater progress is to be made, co-operation must be forthcoming.

Peterborough has a population of 20,000 and if each person was to give but ten cents, the total would be $2000 and that would not be too much for a city like Peterborough, which has a people, who on the whole, are well able to present the Children's Aid Society with a gift of more than $2000. Last year's donations amounted to something over $1200, a splendid tribute to the work of the society, but to-morrow those who did not go down to the full depths of their "jeans" can make amends and do the right thing. The ladies will start their campaign bright and early and here's hoping that the day will be a successful one.

REGARDING THE STREET RAILWAY

Pay as You Enter System Not Yet in Operation

The three new street cars recently placed on the radial railway line are coming in for considerable attention and favorable comment these days, and passengers are frequently heard expressing their appreciation of the comfortable and up-to-date transportation accommodation that has been secured. At present the new cars are on the Jackson Park route and will be until December 1st, so Mr. Munro informs the Review. The reason is that the contractors who are working at the northern terminal of the street car line will not for ten days have the track laid for the "Y" which is being constructed there and which has to run out on the new dam. None of the new cars, therefore, can be put on the George street line until this "Y" is finished to enable the cars to turn around. The controllers have been ordered, but may not arrive until Dec. 1st. About 250 feet of new track will be laid altogether. The pay as you enter system is not yet in operation.

The laying of the gas mains in East City by the company is being proceeded with and they are expected to be completed this fall.

The water in the raceways at the power house has been partially turned on and the wheels placed in operation for testing purposes. The electrical apparatus in the power house being installed, is nearing completion.

BOOST FOR THE TOWN MARSHAL

Good Show Coming to the Grand on Saturday

Mills Bros. managers of the new theatre at Sodies, N.Y., write a very flattering letter to Manager Wee, who presents "The Town Marshal" at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, matinee and night.

Mills Bros. state unhesitatingly that the company gave better satisfaction than any other popular priced company appearing at the theatre. The piece proved to be excellent and the high class cast, a surprise. They thoroughly endorse the performance and give full permission to have same published.

THEATRICAL

That the theatrical season of 1911-12 is to be "hard times" for stage folk is loudly asserted by many actors in New York. They complain that the difficulty of obtaining an engagement this year is greater than it has been for a decade. There are to-day many well-known actors idle at what is usually the most active period—actors whose services have been in demand and who have seldom been without engagements. Others who have signed contracts and are awaiting delayed rehearsals, are in the same position as those without engagements. The dramatic agencies bear out the complaints of the actors. Their offices are over run with applicants.

The cause seems to be the tendency on the part of producing managers this year to hold back on the production of new plays until they have been able to feel the trend of the theatrical business. Managers who, heretofore have had half-a-dozen new plays before the public, or in the course of preparation by this time, are this year postponing their productions.

Sir Gilbert Parker, the author of "The Right of Way," which was seen at the Grand Opera House last week was once a resident of Campbellford.

McDERMID & JURY, the Druggists, are selling Hair Brushes for One Week at a 25 % Discount.

FOR TEN WEEKS

The Great McEwen who will be seen in this city in the near future has scored one of the biggest hits of any Hypnotist seen in America in recent years. For ten weeks he has appeared to crowded houses in Chicago and during one entire year he has divided his time between Denver, Salt Lake and San Francisco, playing to capacity at the very best theatres. McEwen is the world's foremost Magician, Mind-Reader and Hypnotist. The performances given by the Great McEwan are described as being the fastest and swiftest ever produced. They are different from the majority of its kind and so original that they are in a class by themselves.

The engagement is for one week, commencing Monday, Nov. 13th. Entire change of program every night. Prices 10, 20 and 30 cents.

DR. NICOLAI HERE FOR RECITAL TO-NIGHT

Dr Frederick Nicolai, the distinguished Belgian cellist, has arrived in the city to assist in the recital by Miss Mary G. Chalmers, at the Conservatory Music Hall to-night.

Speaking of his work at the Toronto Conservatory concert, the Toronto News says—

"Glazonows Interludium gave Dr. Nicolai, an opportunity to show his mastery of the cello. The ensemble in Rauchenecker's second quartet was a revealment of pure tone and expressiveness as also was Hayden G. Minor quarter, in which the instrumentalist displayed both breadth and refinement.

WEDDING BELLS

HUDSON—LEFLAR.

Orillia News Letter.

St. James' church was the scene of a very pretty, but quiet wedding this morning, when Miss Mary Hudson, daughter of R. G. Hudson, of Orillia, formerly of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. John Leflar, of Shelmont, Manitoba. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk, with silver lace and silver fringe trimmings, wearing the customary bridal veil and carrying a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Louise Hudson, sister of the bride, wore a pretty cream voile, trimmed with cream lace, and white satin trimmings, with white hat to match. After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was partaken of at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. R. G. Hudson, Mississaga street. The happy young couple left on the 4.40 train for Peterborough, where they will spend their honeymoon. On returning they will reside on Mississaga street.

TTAWA COLLEGE TO HAVE PLENTY OF SUPPORTERS

ut Blue and White Fourteen Should Win by Good Margin.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—Ottawa College, accompanied by two hundred supporters, will arrive here this afternoon and will stay at the Walker House. Father Stanton says he expects to use twenty-five players in to-morrow's game. Killian, the quarter-back, gave his ankle a wrench in Wednesday's practice, but expects to play to-morrow.

There is not a doubt in the world that Varsity will defeat Ottawa College here to-morrow at the Stadium, and land the Inter-collegiate championship. The blue and white have confined themselves to signal work this week but it has been of a strenuous nature. The game will be called at 2.30.

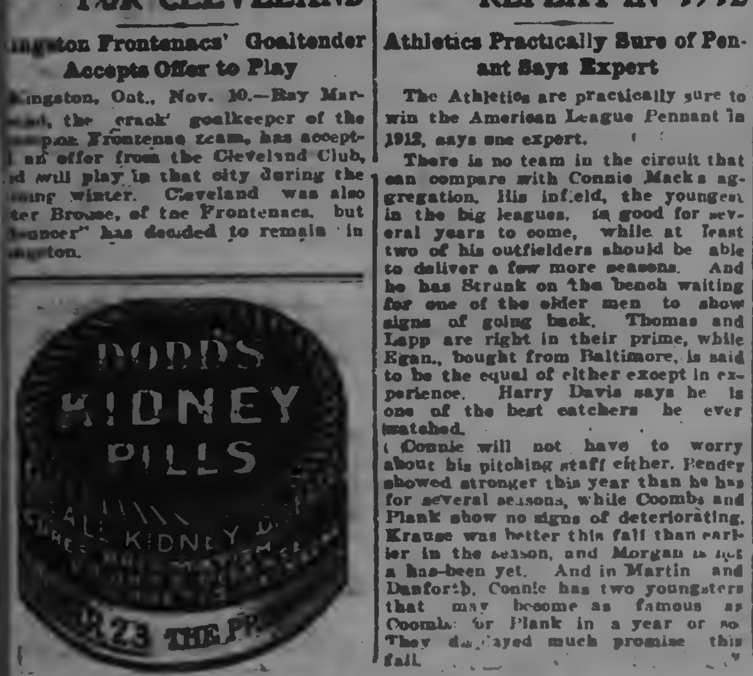
Looking over the record of Ottawa College, one can't go into raptures over them, for even leaving out the first game at Montreal, which they lost to McGill, they had their hands full in beating Queen's in Kingston two weeks ago, when they should have been and were at their full strength. Therefore, on the face of this it cannot be said that they are a good road team.

They beat Varsity in Ottawa when the blue and white were not as strong as they are to-day, and when Captain Maynard did not go on the first half. Varsity did not make any big complaint about losing the game, but one could learn in talking to the players that the officials were of the very worst odor.

AY MARCHAND FOR CLEVELAND

ngston Frontenacs' Goaltender Accepts Offer to Play

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 10.—Ray Marchand, the 'crack' goalkeeper of the champion Frontenac team, has accepted an offer from the Cleveland Club, and will play in that city during the coming winter. Cleveland was also after Browne, of the Frontenacs, but "Bouncer" has decided to remain in Kingston.



MACKS MEN TO REPEAT IN 1912

Athletics Practically Sure of Pennant Says Expert

The Athletics are practically sure to win the American League Pennant in 1912, says one expert.

There is no team in the circuit that can compare with Connie Mack's aggregation. His infield, the youngest in the big leagues, is good for several years to come, while at least two of his outfielders should be able to deliver a few more seasons. And he has Strunk on the bench waiting for one of the older men to show signs of going back. Thomas and Lapp are right in their prime, while Egan., bought from Baltimore, is said to be the equal of either except in experience. Harry Davis says he is one of the best catchers he ever watched.

Connie will not have to worry about his pitching staff either. Bender showed stronger this year than he has for several seasons, while Coombs and Plank show no signs of deteriorating. Krause was better this fall than earlier in the season, and Morgan is not a has-been yet. And in Martin and Danforth, Connie has two youngsters that may become as famous as Coombs or Plank in a year or so. They displayed much promise this fall.

"DENVER JACK" GEYER

Geyer, who is anxious to get a chance in top notch class, broke into the game when he won the amateur heavy-weight title at the Denver Athletic club tourney in 1909. He turned professional. He joined Jack Johnson's training camp, remaining with the colored fighter until he knocked out Jim Jeffries.

SPORT TALK

Many rugby fans are calling Varsity to win the Intercollegiate final with Ottawa College to-morrow.

The church hockey league, if the officers make satisfactory arrangements with the rink management, should have a great season. In past years the teams have developed some nifty players. The handicap of playing in the small rink was a difficult one to overcome, but with the use of the Brock street space this league should shape up well with the city league class of hockey.

Mr Thos. McGeachie will likely get a warm reception when he moves that amendment on behalf of the Peterborough hockey club to have the number of players to a team lessened to six. Imagine how Fred Denison would have been slam banged on a small foreign rink, last season, with Ray and Bud Kelly off for infractions. Denison doesn't travel like a mud train.

Physical Director Thompson, of the Y.M.C.A., favors the organisation of a juvenile hockey league, and would like to hear from teams who could enter in such a league.

The local hockey club should get a line on Billy Breen and endeavor to secure his services again.

The West End management doesn't get much more than abuse, for their efforts to give Peterborough fans some exhibitions of rugby this season. Had the West Ends not taken up the game, its a cinch there would have been no rugby in Peterborough. The West Ends have done considerable to promote sports in the city, and are entitled to no little credit.

The manager of the Lindsay hockeyists has his material at practice already and Bobcaygeon junior O.H.A. seven will need a lot of watching. The boys made a splendid showing last season, which was their initial appearance.

Trenton has entered again in the intermediate series of the O.H.A. A junior seven may also be seen in action this season.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Baseball League is announced for the third week in December.

Ingersoll, the home of Bud Kelly, will have junior and intermediate hockey this season. The new rink is completed.

In Dick Sheehy and Frank Heffernan Peterborough contributes 317 pounds to the Ottawa College fourteen. Heff is the heaviest with 169 pounds.

The annual meeting of the O.H.A. is to be held on Saturday, Nov. 18, commencing at 9 a.m.

Hugh Lehman, the Berlin goaltender, is slated to play in Vancouver this season.

Billy Allen, of Ottawa, won the Flanagan belt and title of lightweight champion of Canada by winning from Patsy Drouillard, of Windsor, in fourteen rounds at Toronto last night.

Frank Gotch and Yousif Mahmout, will be seen in action in Toronto the latter part of this month.

THE BASEBALL FAN

Humorously Told Tale of How the Scoffer Gets Dragged Into the Ranks of Rabid Enthusiasts.

The lure of baseball is continuous, says an athletic writer, and the ranks of the devotees swell with each recurring season.

The man who is not yet converted can't see anything in baseball. "Why go out there to see some galoots knocking a ball around while a few thousand more galoots yell themselves hoarse about it?"—that's his question. "But—the sport of it," you protest, "the excitement, the zest, the vim, the recreation of it." "Yes," say he, "but you don't play ball yourself, do you? You just sit there and watch the other fellows — you take your exercises by proxy." "But, man," you plead, "it isn't the exercise it's the glorious, riotous tension of tight plays, the appropriated delight of seeing your favorite do the stunts you would like to do. You really feel as if you were doing it yourself. It's the attack and strategy, the defense and counter-charge, the—oh, hang it all! It's the game, man! It's the game!" After all you feel that your argument is lame. There is something you can't convey. The virus is in your blood—you know that; but you also know that the man who has never fanned doesn't know, and the worst of it is he never can know, until he becomes infected. You might as well try to argue the yellow fever into a man as to try to argue his apathy toward baseball out of him.

There is only one cure—drag him to the game. Once there, he is in a vortex of electrical enthusiasm to which only a wooden tub would not respond. He is caught in a network of emotions, he breathes the breeze of daring, the nostrils of his soul scent the battle atmosphere from afar. Human batteries before him, beside him, behind him, play upon him with irresistible power. Watch him! Watch him! Who let out that whoop? Why, it was your friend, of course. It doesn't matter that he cheers at the wrong time or bellows encouragement to the out-of-town club. He's up in his seat. He throws his hat. He groans at the umpire. He shouts incoherent advice to the players. He sits like a man on a wire while a player crouches away from a base to make a record steal. He fairly exudes sympathy when a gallant attempt fails. First thing you know he's beginning to distinguish the players and call them by their first name. Rather proud of that, he is, and works it to the extent of his limited knowledge. He is experiencing his first intoxication by baseball. Between innings he gets into conversation with someone and learns something about "standings" and "averages," and on the way home on the car he lets casually drop a few of the choice slang phrases of the game.

cognized to be the best safeguard of our Imperial unity and strength.

At home during the year there had been a succession of troubles between labor and capital, which, in some cases, has led to resort to the barbarous methods of industrial warfare.

He said "barborous" advisedly. He said nothing as to the rights and wrongs of these disputes, except that he believed none of them were incapable of reasonable judgment. The Government had not escaped criticism. He affirmed, however, that the attitude of the state should be an impartial attitude, should be a neutral attitude, but it could not, especially when the interests of others besides the combatants were involved, be an attitude of indifference.

The Government had two clear duties to perform. It must exhaust all opportunities to provide machinery for conciliation, it must maintain order, prevent and punish violence, secure the public against stoppage of supplies and the suspension of indispensable services.

Looking abroad, he said there was much to arouse anxiety. China was in the throes of revolution. It would be rash and improper to hazard an opinion of the outcome, but he was glad to say that so far as foreigners and British subjects were concerned, there seemed no reason to apprehend immediate danger. Ships had been sent to the principal scenes of disturbance, merely for the protection of the British subjects and of other foreigners if they were unprotected.

"We have no disposition to interfere in any way in the national affairs of China," said Mr. Asquith. "We wish her a peaceful and progressive future.

"Nearer home the peace of Europe is unhappily disturbed by the war between Italy and Turkey, in regard to which we have declared and intend to pursue a policy of strict neutrality. Many have strongly desired that we should make an effort at mediation. None were more anxious than the Government if fit opportunity arose. (Loud applause.)

"It was a satisfaction to turn to the welcome and happy conclusion so honorable to the statesmanship of two great countries of the negotiations regarding Morocco between France and Germany. The settlement was a relief to Europe, for it removed perhaps the greatest obstacle to the smooth working of European diplomacy. "Our own gratification at these happy results is none the less profound and sincere because we had been suspected in irresponsible quarters of looking coldly upon the negotiations and even of a disposition to tamper with their success."

ELOPMENT CALLED OFF

Hubby Appeared on the Scene and Took Charge

An event took place last-night which was a boiling over of love romance and infidelity. A happy couple, as it were entered the Grand Union hotel after the arrival of the 8 o'clock night train from the west. They were to all appearances man and wife and as is customary were assigned a bedroom in the hostelry on request. They came from Midland to this town, and registered at one of the hotels as J. Shackleton and Ellen Landrigan, of Midland.

They had not learned to love each other for more than a few hours, when the husband of Ellen appeared on the scene. Then the course of true love, which has never run smooth rippled and bubbled, and foamed into a seething, billowy sea; with Mr. Shackleton's boat tossing and pitching on the turbid waters of love, that every moment threatened his annihilation.

Ellen's husband laid claim to her at once, but she waved him off, and in strong language expressed her approval of her second choice. Husband number one at once looked up the chief of police, who procured the services of Mr. L. V. O'Connor, barrister and the parties adjourned to the office of the chief of police, where in convention they concluded that no action could be taken against the runaway couple, just then.

The husband of Ellen, seeing that nothing was coming his way, agreed to sell out his right and title to the woman, on Shackleton paying over twenty-five dollars, which the latter disclaimed against as being exhorbitant, and that he could hold her at all events.

In company with Night Constable Short the trio ambled down Kent st., at midnight, to the Hotel Benson, where Ellen Landrigan was assigned room 30, and J. Shackleton was placed in room 32. The husband of Ellen was provided with accomodation at the Royal Hotel, corner of Lindsay and Kenty streets.

The latter party beat it out of town on the departure of the first train this morning and the happy couple, who had caused so much excitement have been doing Kent street taking in the fashionable millinery parlors and clothing stores in town, regardless of the night's adventure.—Lindsay Warder.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

A solitary drunk forfeited the usual $8 at this morning's police court session.

The presence of a consignment of horses from the West at the yards of the Montgomery Hotel attracted a large crowd of men this afternoon. The bidding if any, was very light.

JARRY IS CAUGHT

Police Will Press Charge of False Pretences

Toronto, Nov. 10—Alfred Jarry, the supposed wealthy miner, who with his tales of wealth last week induced Miss Edith Ridley to marry him, has eventually come to grief. He was arrested yesterday in Webbwood on a charge of theft and Detective Taylor left last-night to bring him back to Toronto.

The charge is laid by John Galbraith, who roomed at 227 Richmond Street west, the house where Miss Ridley and her mother also live. It was there that the wedding festivities were held and that Jarry and his wife lived awaiting the preparation of their new home on Foxbar Road.

Jarry left town last Tuesday afternoon and soon after his departure Galbraith missed an overcoat. When Jarry did not come back at night, he was suspected and a warrant for his arrest was afterwards sworn out. The man was traced as far as Peterboro and yesterday was located in Webbwood on his way to the Porcupine.

When the man comes back to Toronto more charges may be laid against him. He made purchases of diamonds, automobiles and houses, while in Toronto giving cheques which are apparently worthless. He gave a similar cheque to Rev. J. D. Morrow, for performing the marriage ceremony.

WATER PIPE BURST UNDER RAILWAY

Trouble at Corner of Romaine and George Streets

About 8.45 o'clock, this morning a water pipe at the corner of Romaine and George streets burst, underneath the G.T.R. track and the water gushing forth almost floated the ties away from underneath the steel. The G.T.R. section foreman, Mr. Harry Noyes, had passed that spot about ten minutes earlier but could not be located. When station agent, was informed of the trouble, "Charlie" Noyes, the Charlotte street gateman, who has had previous experience as section foreman, was called into commission to look after the passing trains until the break could be repaired. The waterworks men set to work and at noon the work was almost completed.

ATLANTIC TRIP FOR NEXT YEAR

Airship Akron Being Prepared for Long Flight

New York, November 9—The airship Akron will probably not attempt the trans-Atlantic flight until next year. This decision was announced last night after a conference between Melvin Vaniman, of Atlantic City, and F. A. Ziberling, of Akron, Ohio. The reason given is that the preliminary flight of last Saturday demonstrated the necessity of installing a third engineer as was originally planned.

To do this work and make other minor changes suggested by Saturday's flight, it was explained, would involve delay sufficient to carry the time when the next trial flight would take place into December, a period when weather conditions are likely to be adverse, making it impracticable to attempt the initial over-ocean flight this year. The time afforded by the change of plan will enble Mr. Vaniman completely to install and perfect the mechanical equipment for the Akron, making more certain a successful flight across the Atlantic next year after other trial flights to be made next spring have demonstrated that the airship is in all respects fit for the undertaking.

BAD ACCIDENT TO MRS. BATTEN

Thrown Out of Rig in Runaway At Stony Lake

Mrs. Joseph Batten, wife of ex-Ald. Jos. Batten, had a narrow escape from being very seriously injured or perhaps killed, on Wednesday of this week, while visiting her sister, Mrs. Albert Dunford, at Stony Lake. She in company with her niece, Miss Watt, from Milwaukee, and her sister, Mrs. Dunford, were driving a team down a rather steep grade in the vicinity of the Dunford home, when one of the horses put one foot over the pole of the rig which startled it to such an extent that it immediately broke away taking the other horse with it. It did not take much to upset the vehicle and the three women were thrown violently out on the hard ground.

Mrs. Batten sustained such a severe and deep scalp wound that afterwards nine stitches were required to close the cut. Her sister, Mrs. Dunford, got off with a broken shoulder blade, while Miss Watt was the most fortunate of the trio, sustaining only a few minor bruises. The horses stopped after a short run, and medical attendance was immediately summoned from Lakefield.

Mrs. Batten is at her home now, and feels rather shaken up, but is recovering as rapidly as can be expected.

They were joined in marriage twenty-five years ago in the year 1886.

Refreshments and games introduced during the evening contributed also to the pleasure of the evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Condon were the recipients of warm and sincere congratulations.

ROWELL WILL BE STORM CENTRE

First Class Row Likely in North Oxford Convention

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 9.—A first-class row is looked for on Saturday afternoon when the mass meeting of North Oxford Liberals convenes for the purpose of naming a successor to Dr. McKay, who resigned to allow N. W. Rowell to come in. There were many bolters at yesterday's executive meeting, the delegates from East Zorra openly stating that they would not stay with the party if an outsider were brought in. From other sections also, strong protests were made, and these will find further expression when Mr. Rowell's name is proposed on Saturday. There is a strong feeling among Liberals all over the riding against bringing in an outside man.

IN THE LAUNDRY

Black cotton fabrics should be washed in hot water. Use suds instead of rubbing with soap, and rinse in very blue water. When dry, dip in very thin black starch. Hang on the wrong side.

Fresh wine stains may be removed by dipping the stained part in a pan of milk boiling on the stove.

If you want a tablecloth to look like new every time it is washed, do not starch, but let it get perfectly dry, then dip it in hot water, and wring just so that it will not drip, lay it on the board, and iron it perfectly dry. It will take an hour to do it, but you can get a beautiful polish. Roll on a long, round stick, and you will have a polished lineless tablecloth.

SPOKE OF WORK AMONG CHINESE

Former Secretary of Y. W. C. A. Gave Interesting Address

Under the auspices of St. Andrew's young ladies' mission band, a largely attended meeting was held last evening in the Sunday school room, the outstanding feature of which was a most interesting talk on China, by Miss Agnes Dixon, a former secretary of the local Y.W. C.A. Miss Dixon has spent seven years in missionary effort in southern China, and from her close contact with the people of that land, was thoroughly competent to handle the subject. She confined her address chiefly to the work of the Presbyterian missions in that section, and outlined the progress made in the medical and evangelical branches.

She forcibly emphasized the pressing need of greater missionary activity and help to meet the vast requirements of the millions of dwellers in heathendom yet in China. Her talk was pleasingly varied by accounts of many of her experiences among the people with whom she labored.

Miss G. Mowat, the president of the mission band, occupied the position of chairman, and other numbers on the program were:

Piano duet—Miss Beatrice Starke and Gwen Smith.

Vocal selection—Miss Ina Spilsbury.

Piano selection—Miss Logie.

Vocal solo—Miss May Laing.

Piano selection—Jean Girven.

Afterwards substantial inroads into dainty but bountiful refreshments, occupied the attention of those present, at an informal supper served in the tea room of the hall, and to which everybody did ample justice. Taken as a whole the evening was one of helpfulness and real enjoyment.

LINDSAY LADY PUBLISHES PAPER

Is Successful With the Times at Stoughton Sask.

The district is represented in the newspaper business at Stoughton, Sask., by a lady who is a native of Lindsay. Mrs. A. T. Hind is the proprietress of the Times in that place, her husband, the former publisher of the paper having been carried off one year ago, by an attack of typhoid fever, leaving his wife and little daughter alone in the world.

The Printer and Publisher contains a cut of Mrs. Hind and an article on her work.

The Printer and Publisher says—

"The circulation of the Times was fair and the advertising patronage quite liberal. Mrs. Hind herself undertook the task of gathering the news but for awhile kept pretty clear of editorial articles. Many times she wished that she had a man's knowledge of current events but nothing succeeds like success and she is gradually acquiring a skill in editorial writing. For twelve months, the Times had continued to publish the news of the town and district with a constantly increasing circulation and advertising patronage, while financially, it has also been a success.

Mrs. Hind is a native of Lindsay, Ont. In 1891, she moved with her parents to Glenboro, Man. Five years later, she married Mr. Hind, who was a son of the Rev. George Hind of Durham, Ont.

COBOURG IS ALL A-TREMBLE

Justice Latchford Dismisses the Grand Jury in Anger

Cobourg, Nov. 9—Judge Latchford, presiding at the Assizes yesterday, dismissed the Grand Jury following its report in the charges of perjury against Mr. Henry Hicks.

The report stated that the Grand Jury were in session Tuesday from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m., and from 7.30 p.m. until 11 o'clock and examined nineteen witnesses, whose names were upon the indictment. Through their foreman, Mr. Charles Munson, M.P., the Grand Jury reported "no bill upon each of the three indictments against Hicks."

His Lordship said: "I have only a word to say to you, gentlemen: Ordinarily it is a source of satisfaction to one to find one's opinion justified by what ultimately occurs. In this case, however, it is a matter of regret to me that the expectations which I formed when I learned of the remarkable, and in my experience, unprecedented action of your foreman have been fully realized. Conducted as was then indicated your inquisition could have no result other than that at which you have arrived.

"Taking the view I do of what I regard, rightly or wrongly, in the circumstances of this case as an impropriety, I must out of regard for myself decline to receive any presentment from you and relieve you from further attendance at this court."

This concluded the business of the court. Mr. Hicks, who is an ex-Reeve, of Colborne, returned to his home in that village this forenoon. He is in his 77th year and his health is not good. His friends gathered around him to congratulate him upon the outcome of the affair, a large number of Colborne and Lakeport citizens being here.

It rests with the Attorney-General to say what further steps should be taken in the case. The charge against Hicks arose out of the Brimacombe murder trial and had caused almost as much excitement in Cobourg and vicinity as the murder trial itself.

M.P.'s PASSES

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In the Times of Friday an item appears to the effect that members of parliament get passes from railways. This is not the case. Railways, &c., do not give passes to member of parliament. The law of Canada as laid down by statute is that an M.P. is entitled to free transportation. The card that entitles an M.P. to travel free with baggage is a card of identification, signed and attested by the clerk of the House of Commons only, and reads: "No. 1911 (Arms of the House of Commons with words "House of Commons of Canada" underneath)———is a member of the House of Commons of Canada, and is entitled by law to free transportation with his baggage upon all railway trains in Canada—chapter 37." This, I trust, will do away with the idea that M.P.'s take advantage of their positions to hold up railways who expect favors in return which would undoubtedly be a reprehensible practice.

Yours,

ROSELLI IS ACQUITTED

Toronto Italian Escapes From Murder Charge.

Received News in Stupor and Indifference.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—"Not guilty," was the verdict returned last evening in the murder trial of Francesco Roselli, who was charged with killing Giacchini Ceci in a fracas on Agnes street on the night of Good Friday last. The jury retired at 3.35 and returned shortly after eight o'clock.

The counsel for the defence declared that there were no evidence to show that the accused had any vengeance in his heart, nor was there any motive which would prompt him to take the life of Ceci.

In reviewing the evidence, Judge Falconbridge reminded the jury that it was their place to give the prisoner the benefit of any doubt. He said that a verdict of manslaughter could be brought in should the jury so desire.

Donato Panzine, who was sentenced to one year for doing bodily injury to Andrae Mele, during the free fight at the Agnes street house, was brought from the prison farm at Guelph to give evidence and in so doing he flatly contradicted the story of Roselli. He declared that he went upstairs and procured a butcher knife for the express purpose of killing some one, and that after he had struck Mele in the backyard, threw the knife down and ran around the house.

This was entirely different from the story of the prisoner who claimed that he had fought with Panzine and taken the knife from him and in that way cut his thumb.

Crown Prosecutor Creswicke in addressing the jury, said that Panzine could not benefit in the least by telling such a story, and that the witness's testimony must therefore be true.

A minute or two after the jury returned, the prisoner was brought in. As he stood in the dock, his face was impressionless. He seemed to be in a stupor and come to a point where he cared little whether he would be set at liberty or sentenced.

When the foreman stated the conclusion at which the jury had arrived, Mr. Henderson rose and offered his hand to Roselli. The man at first just stared at his lawyer in an unconcerned manner and then shook hands in a very faint and meaningless way.

Even when the interpreter translated the verdict, Roselli appeared to be still in a stupor and during the judge's remarks he stood motionless as a statue.

In dismissing Roselli, Chief Justice Falconbridge said: "You have narrowly escaped the scaffold; you have stood as close to the gallows as any man I have ever tried and who has been dismissed. I do not find fault with the verdict. No one saw the fatal blow inflicted, unless it be that some of the witnesses have failed to tell us something they know.

"I trust that you and your compatriots will not take this verdict as a license for the using of knives on each other or on any of the King's subjects.

"You may not have understood all that I said to the jury; I did not join in the general belief. There are good Italians just as there are good Canadians and other nationalities.

"I trust that the experience you have gone through will be a warning to you and your countrymen. This practice of using and carrying weapons will not be tolerated in this country. It is to be said in your favor that you were not armed when you went to the Agnes street house."

The jury was then dismissed.

MR. SOUTHAM TAKES A HAND

Replies to Sir James Whitney's Statements on Taxing.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—In reply to Premier Whitney's statement on tax reform, Mr. Southam of The Ottawa Citizen said:

"The Citizen is replying at length, but I would like to add that when Sir James states the proposed local option in taxation is 'too absurd for comment,' he reflects on the intelligence of the labor leaders throughout the province, who have petitioned for it, as also on that of the editors of practically all the influential provincial newspapers who have editorially endorsed and petitioned for this measure.

"The Conservative Premiers of Manitoba and British Columbia, the Hon. R. P. Roblin and the Hon Richard McBride, would also be included in the category of those who are lacking in intelligence, as in both provinces, as well as in Alberta and Saskatchewan, local option in taxation is in force.

"Even the councils of Toronto, Ottawa and of 370 other municipalities do not escape, for they, too, have petitioned for this legislation, which in the opinion of Sir James is "too absurd for comment."

TAG DAY PARAGRAPHS

Giving coins to-day reminds us, that to do the thing that's right, we can dig deep down for more cash. Buy a few more tags to-night.

This is Tag Day, the day for the neglected children who are being cared for by the Children's Aid Society. There are about one dozen of those little ones at the Shelter.

"Better than last year," said one enthusiastic tagger this morning. "I know I have received a great deal more than last year," she said proudly.

The school children did nobly yesterday, something over $100 being given at the halls of learning.

One order of 12,000 tags was issued by the Review and about ten o'clock this morning Mrs. Peter Campbell sent in a hurry up call for 5,000 more.

One kind parent says his daughter came home yesterday and asked for some tag-day money. "How much," asked her dad. "Only one dollar," replied the child in all earnestness.

Some are giving coppers, others nickles, dimes or quarters, while not a few bring smiles to the fair taggers by dropping half a dollar or a bill into into the cash box.

The weather this morning was identical with that of the morning of last Tag Day. It is hoped that the donations will be much larger. The Society needs the money.

Little drops of silver, little drops of bills help the C.A.S. girls fill the empty tills.

This is the day when any old kind of a nag can look like a King's plate winner. The rosette does the trick.

Scene in a local restaurant;—The proprietor stands behind the counter—farmer's wife enters carrying a basket of chickens. One dollar a pair she asks. "Nothing doing," replies the white aproned one. "We're only paying 80c. to-day to balance up for tag day expenditures.

Everybody works but father, he hands out the cash, empties his trouser pockets, says things rough and rash. Mother's sewing rosettes, sister's selling tags. Everything's going in our house,—we'll be in rags.

"I think we will be away ahead of last year," said Mrs. Peter Campbell at noon "We have received one cheque for $100, and have also been presented with many five dollar bills

The girls with the tags sometimes found difficulty, in explaining to the farmers on the market and along the streets why they should purchase a pass. Several could not understand why they should part with their money.

Anyone who walked three city blocks this morning without being tagged was very elusive.

MORE POISON HAS BEEN FOUND

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Poison found in the viscera of two more of the ten persons who have died mysteriously beneath the roof of Mrs. Louise Vermilya, made more tangible yesterday the suspicions and accusations made against the woman. At the county jail hospital, where she lies ill from attempts to take her own life, she was not informed of the new evidence the police will bring to bear in charging her with murder.

Toxicologist Walter L. Haines yesterday communicated his report to the coroner's office. The finding was that arsenic was present in large quantities in the viscera of Conductor Richard T. Smith and of Frank Brinkamp, the latter being Mrs. Vermilya's son.

Three bodies were exhumed after poison had been found in the remains of Policeman Arthur Bissonette, the last of the ten to die, when relatives and friends told the coroner the circumstances of their deaths were similar to those of Bissonette.

In the case of Frank Brinkamp, Mrs. Vermilya's favorite son, the fiancee of the boy induced an investigation of the possibility of his having partaken of the "pepper box" poison. The coroner announced he would ask the state's attorney to request an indictment charging Mrs. Vermilya of having criminal knowledge of the deaths of Brinkamp and Smith.

Coroner Hoffmen said he was disposed to open still more graves of those whose deaths had occurred beneath Mrs. Vermilya's roof. There were at least three others whose deaths were, he said, recent enough for poison to be apparent if they had so died. Whether he would go into those cases, he said, depended upon the advice of the state's attorney.

Mrs. Vermilya was near death during the day. She is suffering from valvular heart disease.

Professor Gets Damages From Wesleyan College.

Board of Governors Scathingly Condemned.

Montreal, Nov. 11.—In a judgment completely sustaining the suit of Dr George C. Workman for wrongful dismissal from his position as a professor of the Wesleyan Theological College, and for aggravated libel, and pregnant with scathing condemnation of the board of governors of that institution, as well as the various committees before whom the case was originally argued, Mr. Justice Weir, yesterday morning, accorded to the plaintiff damages for wrongful dismissal and $1,200 for aggravated libel, making total damages of $3,700.

Judge Weir characterised the action of the board as "illogical, prejudiced, biased and unfair," and stated that "it was impossible to get any acurate statement of the questions asked or of the answers given before that body unless the version of Dr. Workman himself were accepted."

His Lordship declared that while the charges against Dr. Workman were based on his teachings in the college, no evidence as to such unorthodox teaching had been given. There had been merely a report of Dr. Workman's appreciation of Prof. McBride's lecture, which Dr. Workman had satisfactorily explained.

The judge characterized the fact as unfortunate that the first libel charge should have become legally proscribed through the length of time consumed in seeking redress before the Church courts.

He was also very severe upon the board for dismissing Dr. Workman, characterizing their action as "absolutely ultra vires and illegal." In fact his whole address was a sweeping denunciation of the action of the Board of Governors, the Committee of Trial, and the Church Court of Appeal. He defended Dr. Workman in every particular, and pointed out that "incalculable damage had been done to plaintiff. His life work as a professor had been stopped, and he had been occasioned anguish of mind greater than any money damages would compensate him for."

Quite Satisfied.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Hon. W. J. Bowser, Attorney-General of British Columbia, and Hon. W. Ross, Minister of Mines, who, since the departure of Premier McBride for New York, have continued their negotiations with the Dominion Government in regard to British Columbia's claims and certain matters which require adjustment between the Federal and Provincial Governments, left for home at midnight. They expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the negotiations which they conducted at Ottawa, and look for results in the not distant future which will be of much benefit to the province.

POLICE MAGISTRATE AND NEWSPAPERMEN

Chatham, Nov. 11.—M. Houston, ex-police magistrate, who was recently decapitated by the department, paid a glowing tribute to newspapermen yesterday. "During the twenty-nine years of my public career as a police magistrate," he declared, "I have never known a newspaper reporter to betray any confidence I reposed in him. I always made it a policy of letting the reporters know everything on the inside of police circles, putting them on their honor for such things as I thought should not be given immediate publicity. Among the scores of local and outside newspapermen I have dealt with in this manner I have never known one who took advantage of the confidence thus reposed in him. In fact, my experinece is that a newspaper reporter courteously treated in turn makes himself an invaluable friend. Now that I am forced to retire to private life I will always have the kindliest recollections of the men who gathered the news."

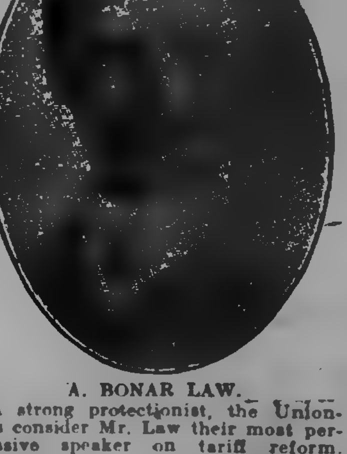
BONAR LAW IS CHOSEN AS NEW LEADER OF UNIONIST PARTY

Distinguished New Brunswick Lawyer Succeeds A. Balfour—An Exponent of Tariff Reform.

London, Nov. 11.—At a meeting to be held at the Carlton Club Monday Walter Hume Long will propose and Austen Chamberlain will second the nomination of Andrew Bonar Law as the leader of the Unionist party in the House of Commons to succeed A. J. Balfour.

Mr. Law's election is assured, and the leadership of the party will be placed in the hands of a man with a brief Parliamentary experinece and who has never held a seat in any Cabinet. In his short political career, however, Mr. Law has proved himself a brilliant speaker and a resourceful debater. The Liberals frankly acknowledge his fitness to be the party leader, and among all the names suggested for the position regard him the most dangerous from their party viewpoint.

Mr. Law, who now sits for the Bootle division of Lancashire, southwest, was born in New Brunswick, in 1858. His father was Rev. H. James Law. He was educated in Scotland. He



A. BONAR LAW.

A strong protectionist, the Unionists consider Mr. Law their most persuasive speaker on tariff reform. Therefore, the party will more than ever be committed to tariff reform, and expect that his leadership will infuse a strong fighting spirit in their ranks. His selection, however, being a compromise one, due to the rival claims of more prominent leaders in the party, is certain to engender much dissatisfaction and it is impossible at the present moment to predict how events finally will shape themselves.

Although an official announcement is not expected before Monday, all the morning papers are agreed that Bonar Law will succeed Balfour. In his appointment they see the choice of an admirable leader who will attract the interest and sympathy of the Canadian people.

"It is not fanciful," says The Morning Post, "to imagine that he may be destined to win in the Mother Country a great victory for the cause of national and Imperial union corresponding to the triumph achieved by the Conservative party in Canada. Unionists may confidently look to him to display the same devotion to principles and the same resolution and spirit in placing the policy of his party before the electorate as marked the successful campaign conducted by Borden."

The Chronicle says: "The Canadian is by far the ablest exponent of tariff reform in either House. His succession to Mr. Balfour means the substitution of a wholehearted zealot for an ambitious convert, of boiling water for tepid. The new leader may be trusted on all matters to keep things at a high temperature."

"Bonar Law," The Express remarks, "is the first son of our great dominions to become the leader of one of our great political parties. When the direction of Imperial policy is of such critical importance as is now the case, nothing could be better than the choice of a son of Canada as Unionist leader."

Off For India.

London, Nov. 11.—All preparations having been completed, King George and Queen Mary yesterday paid and received farewell visits and to-day will start in state for a visit to India for the coronation Durbar. This being the first time the Emperor and Empress have visited India, will make it the occasion for fetes and displays of unprecedented pomp and magnificence. Queen Mary will take along a number of wonderful dresses, including the coronation robes.

The festivities will last until Jan. 7, when Their Majesties will embark for the homeward journey and reach England at the end of January.

Giant Shark Captured.

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 11.—After an hour's fight, in which the fish was perforated with rifle bullets, a dozen men caught and killed a giant shark, which on Thursday devoured Jules Antoine.

Members of the crews of several ships saw the shark grab the body of the old man when he fell overboard and crunch it between its great jaws. Since then there has been a general shark hunt in progress. The captured monster was over twelve feet in length.

When the fish was cut open, almost the entire body of Antoine was found inside, including the head trunk, parts of the legs and pieces of clothing. The boots were almost intact, but bore the imprint of the sextuple rows of teeth.

Legislative Amenities.

Vienna, Nov. 11.—At the close of the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday Deputy Hummer accused Deputy Malik with having inspired a mendacious newspaper article. He said he regretted that he could not challenge Malik, as he was forbidden by the court of honor to fight duels.

Deputy Malik thereupon called Hummer a pickpocket, and lashed him twice across the face with a horsewhip. Other deputies then interfered and stopped the hostilities.

MASSACRE IN CHINESE CITY

A Thousand Persons Cut Into Shreds.

Business Places Are Looted and Burned.

Nankin, Nov. 11.—Nankin to-day is desolate. Fully a thousand of its inhabitants lie massacred and numerous business houses and dwellings have been looted and burned. Seventy thousand persons already have fled the city, and still others are joining the exodus. Along the railway tracks leading from the city a long, snake-like line of humanity is trudging, seeking a haven of safety.

It was the hand of the Manchus that brought the devastation. While the Republicans were in camp three miles away awaiting ammunition and reinforcements, the Manchus began the work of carnage. Men, women and children were slaughtered. Neither youth nor age was taken into account. White, the emblem of the revolution, marked its wearers for instant death. Chinamen with white shoes, a sign of mourning among them, or even a handkerchief, were ruthlessly slain. Queueless heads were everywhere to be seen.

There was little fighting yesterday between the revolutionists and the troops. The Imperialists are reported to be short of ammunition for their big Krupp guns, and their most capable gunners are said to have deserted them.

The Republicans complain that owing to the neutralization of the railroad they have been unable quickly to transport men and guns from Shanghai. These are being brought by boats and pack mule.

A desperate battle is expected shortly.

Missionary Institute.

Cornwall, Nov. 11.—The Missionary Institute which opened here on Wednesday was concluded last night. At the afternoon's session Rev. H. C. Priest gave an address on "Missions," which he said are in a very large degree in the hands of the Sunday Schools and their teachers.

He said that the Sunday School was really the Bible school and should aid to arouse and foster the missionary spirit. In conclusion Mr. Priest said that the Sunday Schools should lead the young people into more comprehensive praying.

BRITISH NAVAL OFFICERS ARRIVE FOR NIOBE PROBE

Fleet Had Good Trip From the Azores—Court Martial on Monday.

Halifax, Nov. 11.—The fourth cruiser squadron arrived yesterday and came to moorings off the dockyard. Rear-Admiral Kingsmill arrived from Ottawa last evening in connection with the court-martial which is to be held by Rear-Admiral E. E. Bradford into the stranding of the warship Niobe at the end of last July.

Admiral Kingsmill will have a conference with Admiral Bradford to-day, when arrangements for the court-martial will be finally made. It will probably begin Monday afternoon aboard the Niobe, and will be open to the public.

It has not yet been decided whether there will be three separate trials or one.

Three men are to be tried, the commander of the ship, the navigating lieutenant and the officer of the watch.

The court may decide to make one enquiry cover the three cases or a separate court-martial may convene for each officer.

The squadron had a good voyage across. The ships called at the Azores, but did not stay there long. The squadron will coal at the dockyard, two ships coaling at a time. The squadron consists of H. M. S. Leviathan (flagship), Berwick, Essex and Donegal.

FOR FAMILY USE

An Ideal Remedy for Coughs, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Weak Chest.

After having made a special study of the treatment of the throat and lungs for twenty years, Prof. D. Jackson states that in his opinion no preparation for general family use is so efficient, so healing, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone.

As his reasons for making this claim for Catarrhozone, Dr. Jackson says:

"Catarrhozone is free from opium.

"The patient can breathe its rich, balsamic fumes direct to the diseased spot.

"It is a remedy that treats and cures causes—prevents disease spreading.

"Reaches the innermost recesses of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes, and lungs.

"Alleviates chest soreness.

"Stops coughing instantly.

"Prevents bronchial irritations.

"Relieves clogged nostrils.

"Cures sniffles and nasal catarrh.

"Prevents La Grippe.

"Has proven itself a cure for weak lungs, loss of voice, speakers' sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, coughs, colds, and winter ills."

Catarrhozone is unquestionably the world's greatest breathable cold, cough, and catarrh medicine, and being free from all drowsy drugs, entirely safe for children and old folks; it makes an ideal family remedy. Recommended by the medical profession, and sold by all reliable dealers. Beware of imitations, get "Catarrhozone" only; large size lasts two months, and is guaranteed, price $1; smaller sizes 25c and 50c. By mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, NOV. 11, 1911.

MR. PECK'S ADDRESS

Mr. Peck has issued an address to the electors, and in it he makes some observations about matters under discussion in the present election that are worthy of deep consideration. Mr. Peck outlines one or two of the defects of the present workmen's compensation act. He points out that no workingman who in any way contributes to an accident to himself, by even the slightest negligence, is entitled to compensation for his injuries, even though the question of contributory negligence be a very doubtful one, and the injury very severe. Where the negligence is on the part of a fellow-workman, there is usually no recourse against the company, though one would naturally think that a company must be held liable for the acts of its employes in this, as in commercial mistakes. But the Act does not provide that companies or employers shall be liable unless the foreman, or the superior of the injured workman gives him orders, or, is responsible for such regulations that result in the accident. Manifestly, if an employer is liable for the commercial mistakes of an employe, surely it is equal justice that he shall be liable for some compensation for the mistake of an employe resulting in serious injuries to another man.

In addition to this, the system pursued by powerful corporations of appealing decisions against them, until they wear down the financial resources of the poor employe, or his relatives, is ripe for change. Lawyers know that in seven cases out of ten, in damage actions such as these, it is their good nature which carries the fight through the various stages—they running a chance on winning, and thus being recouped for their work. There should be some provision, either establishing some court for damage claims, or for limiting the right of appeal, provided that the plaintiff can show financial disability, especially in a case where technical legal grounds are the basis of the employer's triumph over the plaintiff.

These, of course, are laymen's suggestions, as regards the needed change. Mr. Peck in his address, refers to the fact that Sir William Meredith is now conducting an exhaustive inquiry into the working of the compensation act, and will make a report shortly, when the act will be amended so as to provide much broader protection for the worker. Mr. Peck states that, if elected, he will use his influence to further such legislation, and as a government supporter, he would naturally carry more weight than any opposition member.

Mr Peck is soundly in accord with the thought of this riding on the question of bi-lingual schools. He does not refer to the report which Dr. Merchant is making for the department of education on this vexatious question, but states that he is in favor of the education of the children in the public schools so that they will speak and think in English, and have a thorough command of the English language. He says that not merely is this the intention of the existing law, but it must be insisted upon, in the interests of the children themselves. No one can question this stand taken by Mr. Peck. It will not be an easy matter to eradicate the sense of privilege and the custom—which has been permitted to grow almost unchecked, in the schools where French speaking children are numerous—of teaching in the French language by French teachers. For thirty-three years the Ross government made no effort to check this growing evil, when it was in its bud, and could have been easily handled. Since the Whitney government has come into power, there has been an agitation on the question extending over some years, and the situation is such that, when Dr. Merchant's report is officially considered, it can be made the basis of some action that will restore the English language to its proper place in the French school districts of Ontario

It is undoubtedly very important to Peterborough that free opportunity shall be given to the hydro-electric power commission to exercise its powers to secure for Peterborough some relief in the power situation. It is idle to point out that the hydro-electric has enabled the Western Ontario municipalities to capture the factories that are being located throughout the province. If the hydro-electric has done that, all the more reason why it should be brought to Peterborough. Premier Whitney has said that it is his intention to invade central Ontario, to put a government power scheme into operation. Would Peterborough be justified in supporting an opponent of this, as Mr. Hall undoubtedly is, and a man who is affiliated with the power corporations which have fought so desperately to block the people's power scheme? Surely there can be no choice as to this! Even hard-shell Liberals must admit that everything is in favor of Mr. Peck, as a man, as to platform, as to prospects of advancing Peterborough's interests at Toronto.

TAX REFORM

Sir James Whitney's statement as to taxation reform, shows one or two matters in a much clearer light. Sir James did not object to the introduction of the Fripp bill; as a matter of fact, he was responsible for it. But at the same time he was not prepared to adopt so radical a measure as single tax, and he has decided objections to the "checkering" of Ontario in allowing municipalities freedom in the matter.

There seems to be considerable demand in the province for reform in the method of assessment. Sir James has promised this. He is ready to take up the question of introducing more modern methods of handling civic taxation, but he is still totally opposed to Henry Georgeism. There is a sound basis for his objection, for conditions in Ontario cannot be altogether gauged by what is done in Vancouver, Edmonton and Winnipeg. The development of these places is not due to single tax. It is due to the westward rush of people. People pouring into any city will create a great real estate stimulus, single tax or no single tax. The older Ontario municipalities have problems of somewhat different sort. We would like to get evidence of the effect of single tax in an eastern city, and an old city. To what extent would it wake the place up?

Remember the Peck rally to-night.

Mr. Hall's campaign so far has been so noisy that you could have heard a pin drop.

"PILLS LIKE A FYLL"

So Harsh and Drastic are Many Pills as to Seriously Injure Health.

In a letter written from his home in Valencia, Mr. Marsh Selwyn does service to thousands by drawing attention to the injuries inflicted upon delicate people by drastic purgative pills.

"For a long time I suffered from constipation. This condition compelled the use of pills. Like many another, I made the unwise choice of using pills that were like lightning in their activity. I began to be filled with intestinal disturbances, constant rumblings, gas in the bowels and diarrhoea. I grew pale and emaciated. Then the doctor told me drastic irritating pills had caused catarrh of the bowels, an almost incurable disease. Explaining my situation to a friend, he advised a trial of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I speedily experienced the healing and curative effect they exert on the stomach, liver and bowels. The intestines, freed from irritating drugs, rapidly regained natural tone, the bowels acted as if nature and not Dr. Hamilton's Pills were at work. I know it will be of value to thousands to know that a pill as mild and curative as Dr. Hamilton's is available to the ailing."

For bowel disorders, sick headache, constipation, liver and stomach derangement, there is no pill so invariably sure to cure as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse a substitute. Sold in 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Toronto has a Starr as head of a juvenile court. It ought to guide many an erring foot to better pathways.

The importation of Mr. Rowell into North Oxford has created a lot of trouble among the Liberals of that riding. The Row'll be quite pleasant to witness.

Mr. Hall's silence on the power question is becoming rather terrifying. Can it be that he has a six inch shrapnel shell to throw into the ranks of the hydro-electric supporters, on behalf of the power corporations?

Peck for a change in the Compensation Act. He promises to move in the legislature, if elected, for an act that gives the workingman better protection, and will do away with the present system of successive appeals, by which the rich corporation can wear down the poor employe or his relatives.

Premier Whitney says that Wilson Southam of the Ottawa citizen, was the head and front of the agitation for the change in the taxation system. At the annual meeting of the Tax Reform league, it was stated that one man alone had contributed $18,000 for the purpose of furthering the movement, financing the whole affair. It is evident that one man with some money and a hobby can make a powerful stir if he goes the right way about it.

THIS LADY GIVES A SPLENDID REASON

Why She Would Not be Without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the House

They Helped Her Husband and Cured Her own Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel of Thirteen Years' Standing

Cando, Sask., Nov. 10— (Special) — "I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house," exclaims Mrs. Jno. C. MacKenzie, of this place. And those who have heard Mrs. MacKenzie's story do not wonder that she is so emphatic.

"I was a victim for about twelve or thirteen of Bladder and Kidney trouble," Mrs. MacKenzie says. "It grew into Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel. Doctors attended me but they did not do me any good.

"My husband had used Dodd's Kidney Pills with good results so I decided to give them a trial. Before I had finished the first box I was greatly benefitted."

Dodd's Kidney Pills benefit and cure permanently all who suffer from any form of Kidney Disease. They cure the Kidneys and cured Kidneys strain the poison that causes the disease out of the blood. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel.

Society on Qui Vive.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Unusual interest is being shown in the drawing-room which Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will hold on Saturday evening, Nov. 18. The accommodation of the town bids fair to be severely taxed by the visitors from outside and there will be a large attendance of Ottawans.

Altogether it is expected that some two thousand persons will be presented, making it a very long ceremony.

It has been learned that Their Royal Highnesses have shown much concern over the arrangement which hitherto has obtained, whereby those awaiting presentation stood often for two or three hours in a corridor so cramped that severe crowding was added to the fatigue of long standing. The duchess in particular insisted that seats be provided for those awaiting presentation.

Thus the drawing-room, which has been rather a test of physical endurance of the majority of those attending, promises through the intervention of Their Royal Highnesses to be a far more pleasant form of entertainment.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

—BY—

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

A couple of touches in the right place from Jim's toe had created a glowing hollow, over which the bacon curled and sizzled merrily, but again it was Jim's doing and not Frank's, so that Kitty's pretty brow was bent, and though she laughed, there was a strong under-current of annoyance in her laugh when Mrs. Rolt began innocently to hum that popular American air—

"You ain't no good,
You c'aint cut wood,
Just kiss yourself good-bye."

The slight upward curl at the corners of Jim's mouth did not mend matters. He knew the air, though Anstruther did not.

"Now, I'm going to be lazy and have a good time," declared Mrs. Rolt, putting away her plate. "I know that women ought to wash up—"

"I'll do that, Mrs. Rolt."

"No, you won't, neither will you, Jim. Just put that plate down instantly. I know your idea of washing up. Do you know, Mr. Anstruther, when he batched, lived alone, I mean, Jim had more crockery than all the other ranchers in the neighborhood put together. Fifty plates I think he had. Kitty counted them one day when she was in short frocks, and we never knew what he wanted so many for until that poor young Webster took his shack for a winter shoot. Then I found out. Shall I tell, Jim?"

"Makes no odds," laughed Jim, "so long as you ain't what Mr. Anstruther calls too poetic."

"Kitty knows it's true, and you daren't contradict her. When we went to see how Mr. Webster was getting along, we found him eating his food off the kitchen table."

"Good place, too," chuckled Jim.

"'Hasn't Jim left any plates for you?' we asked.

"'Fifty-three, Mrs. Rolt; that's the trouble. I've not had pluck enough to tackle them yet. Come, and I'll show you,' and he took us to a pile as high as that, all dirty on both sides.

"Jim had had a clean side for one hundred and six meals. After that he let the house and the crockery. Here Pretty Dick, wash these things, please, and make them good and clean."

When the laugh against Jim had died out, and the Indian had carried off the crockery, Mrs. Rolt drew them all round the fire. The hail had stopped for a little while, and no wind touched them under the fly which Jim had rigged up on the lee side of the hut. With a good bed of pine brush on the ground, and a great fire of logs in front, there is no place cosier than a fly. Like a great reflector it catches all the light and heat, and yet gives you all the benefit of the sweet fresh air.

That interior made a pretty contrast to the drear and lonesome uplands, in which there were nothing but grey shadows and silence, the ruddy glow of the firelight throwing out the pretty figures of the women, and the smokers prone at their feet, in strong relief.

Handsome as Polly Rolt was in a half-boyish, half-matronly way, the go and dash of the sportswoman tempered by a few years of happy married life, it was no wonder that the men's eyes passed her pure profile to dwell on bonny Kitty Clifford. Even the Chinaman, who cooked for the ranche, worshipped her. She had been worshipped by everyone all her small, spoilt life.

From the crimson Tam o'Shanter, which she had unearthed from her saddle bags, to her gleaming gum boots, she was as dainty a little apple of discord as ever fell between two men.

On anyone else, gum boots would have been a horror, shapeless, huge, mud-beapattered. On her they only made you wonder where gum boots so astoundingly small and smart could have been made. Besides, they suggested an apology, if one were needed, for the extreme brevity of Kitty's skirts.

The fire was the most daring gallant in that crowd. It was he who touched Kitty's white throat with his rosy fingers, be who lit the deep blue of her laughing eyes, who threw that velvety shadow which so emphasized the full curve of her saucy chin, and, because even he became timid and uncertain in such a place, made you wonder whether that was a dimple just beyond the curve of those sweet red lips.

Yes, Kitty was pretty, and knew it perhaps too well, pretty with that face which has haunted England for so many happy centuries, going a Christmassing on the pillion behind old-fashioned fathers long ago, looking down perhaps as Guinevere or Gwendoline upon the mailed knights of the tournay, or to-day making young men's pulses beat as they pass through the Army and Navy Stores, where perhaps one meets more pretty women to the acre than in any other space on earth.

"Now sing, some one," ordered Mrs. Rolt.

"You don't mind my tobacco, do you?"

"No, of course not."

Taking his pipe from his mouth, Jim had started at Anstruther's words, and looked a surprised question at the Boss's wife. He had never dreamed that a man might not smoke in camp.

"All right, Jim, it's only Mr. Anstruther's English frills. Where we breathe we smoke in B. C., my husband says. He is my law. But must I give you a lead?" and without waiting for an answer she began to sing the "Old Swanee River" in a rich contralto voice, which gave to the words an infinite pathos as they died away in that homeless waste.

By a camp fire a song must have a chorus; without it the gregarious instinct of man is unsatisfied. Perhaps man sings, in part, because he is a little afraid of nature's silence, and of all choruses those French-Canadian choruses, roaring, rollicking, boating ditties, of which Jim sang one or two, have done more to hunt the blue devils from the rivers of lower Canada than anything else in the world.

They are full of a spirit of a recklessly daring people, and Jim sang them with the spirit of an old-time voyageur, and an accent which if not Parisian, was at least not London. It was noticeable in Jim that though his English was apt to stumble and wonder into all sorts of by-ways of slang, his French was good enough, and his English vocabulary at least as ample as an Englishman's. It was only with the constantly recurring phrases of every-day life that he and those of his kind played the mountebank. It was well for the more scholarly Anstruther perhaps that he did not follow the cowboy in any foreign tongue. Instead he sang them "The Hounds of the Meynell," and for the first time during that picnic Frank Anstruther placed himself, and was at home.

As he sang you knew what that spare horseman's figure meant; you realized where that lean high-bred face would seem a true type, and to Kitty, dreaming as he sang, came a vision of an old, many-gabled house, set, as one's ancestors loved to set them, in a wooded hollow, all the lawns of it alive with hounds, and round the porch of it a group of such men and horses as only England can turn out. Amongst them all that duffer who could do nothing right in Canada, had been the best man in the county.

"Say," said Combe, when the song was finished, "ain't it pretty hard to find a fox nowadays in the Old Country?"

Anstruther came back from the Vale with a start, and perhaps because you cannot adjust yourself to your environments in five seconds, answered a little superciliously.

"No, why should it be. People don't shoot foxes there."

"They are wild, Jim, like our Coyotes," put in Mrs. Rolt.

"There ain't no bounty on them then. Don't they play old Harry with the ranchers?"

"If they do we pay for it."

"Oh, well you see, I ain't been in England myself. I was raised in Canada, and it is good enough for me. I knew there were plenty of foxes when my grandfather hunted the Old Larkshire, but I fancied that the people would have been too thick on the ground now for any wild thing to live. This country is big enough, you'd think, but the Yanks have killed out the buffaloes, and will kill out most other things before they are through.. "When my grandfather hunted the Old Larkshire." It was said in such a quiet, matter-of-fact way that it took Anstruther's breath away, and yet he, who knew the annals of fox-hunting better than he knew his Bible, remembered that one of the best masters the Old Larkshire had ever had was Sir Greville Combe.

Could this fellow in shape and flannel shirt, who spoke such appalling English, be grandson to Sir Greville?

A quiet smile on Mrs. Rolt's face told him that it was so. In after years Anstruther learned to look through the clothes of the West and see the men beneath, but at the moment a horror took him, and he wondered how long it would take to make him a cowboy.

That was what he came out to be, or so he had told his father and his friends, but looking up he caught Kitty's blue eyes fixed upon him, and knew that he had lied.

"Do you think that I should ever make a cowboy, Miss Clifford?"

The question was very direct, and merited a snubbing, but Kitty had been caught at a disadvantage. There had been more in her eyes than she meant to show just yet, so she stumbled, and Mrs. Rolt answered for her.

"Oh, I suppose you would learn to ride."

"Thank you. I thought that was the one thing I could do."

"On schooled horses. You haven't tried a buck jumper yet."

"Yes he has, though," put in Combe, looking up from the plug he was whittling.

"And you did not give us a chance of seeing the show! That was mean, Jim."

RAILWAY SUPERINTENDENT CURED OF CATARRH!

Morriscy's "No. 26" Prescription Cured Obstinate Case.

PETITCODIAC, N. B., May 10, 1911.

"I had been troubled for quite a number of years with a very annoying case of Catarrh of the head. It kept me sneezing, coughing and spitting nearly all the time, and my work—running to and fro in the trains—aggravated the trouble more or less account being exposed to all kinds of weather. The car dust also added to the irritation. Your No. 26 Catarrh Cure for internal and external use was recommended to me, and I decided to give it a trial. I used 3 boxes and am entirely relieved, and I feel so much better that I wanted you to know it was your medicine that fixed me up. You have a fine remedy indeed in your No. 26 Catarrh Cure. Everyone who has Catarrh ought to know about it and should use it."

A. H. Robinson,
Supt., E. & H. R. R.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

ONE BABY WORTH 10,000 VOTES

Roumanian Princess Doesn't think Much of Suffrage

New York, Nov. 9—"I'd rather have a baby than ten thousand votes. The three babies I have are worth more than all the votes in the world," said Princess Zoe Maurocatado, who arrived yesterday aboard the Kronprinzessin Cecilie with her sister, Princess Ghika.

Both princesses have come from Bucharest, Roumania, en route for Newfoundland to meet their husbands who have been hunting in the United States and Canada for the past four weeks. The women in Roumania have so far not bothered their heads about votes, as they find their time fully occupied with their homes.

"Perhaps some of us will want to vote when the modern American ideas reach our country," continued Princess Maurocatado. "It may be all right for the single women, but we who are married have our husbands, our children and our homes to attend to. Roumanian women with spare time occupy themselves by teaching their poorer sisters how to add to their husbands' small incomes by embroidery work. Already we have established a big market in Paris for the result of their labors. Then we are interested in charity, so there is no room for suffrage. I think if any of us had votes we would cast them for men."

NEURALGIA CURED

This Painful Trouble is Due to Poverty of the Blood

Neuralgia is one of the most painful maladies that afflicts humanity. The trouble is usually seated in the face and head, following the course of some nerve, but it attacks other parts of the system as well. It is characterized by acute pains, sometimes steady, at others spasmodic and darting, headaches and a feeling as though the forehead was a band of iron. Medical authorities agree that neuralgia is a cry of the nerves for better food, and that if the blood is purified and enriched the trouble will disappear. This is the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure even the most severe cases of neuralgia. They actually make new, rich blood which feeds the tired starved nerves and thus cure the trouble, at the same time leaving the sufferer in better health in every way than was formerly enjoyed. In proof we give the case of Mr. G. Brooks, of Aurora, Ont., who says:—"About two years ago, while working in Collingwood, I was attacked with neuralgia, which became so bad that I was frequently unable to go to work. The pain would start over my right eye and would then spread to the whole face, and caused me the greatest agony. I was under the care of a good doctor, but his the care of a good doctor, but his treatment temporary relief, and I was therefore an almost constant sufferer. Acting on the advice of my wife I finally decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I am profoundly thankful that I did so, as in the course of a few weeks I began to improve, and after a further use of the Pills the trouble disappeared and I have not since had any trace of it. I may also add that while taking the Pills my weight increased by nine pounds, which shows that the Pills are a body builder as well as a nerve restorer."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

When seen he had nothing to say as to what he expects the Government to do, the matter being still under advisement.

Popular Majority Now 30,310.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery has received the official figures for 215 out of the 221 constituencies in Canada, and they give a popular Conservative majority of 30,310.

Four out of the six missing constituencies gave large Government majorities, which will roll up the figures to some thirty-six or thirty-seven thousand. Two of the missing figures are in Manitoba, being Winnipeg, which gave over 4,000 against reciprocity, and MacDonald, which also gave a large Conservative majority. In Alberta there are three missing, one being Calgary, which gave over three thousand for Bennett, the Conservative candidate, the other two being Edmonton and Red Deer. The Yukon figures will not be received for possibly a couple of months.

Hold Up In Brockville.

Brockville, Nov. 11—The police have taken into custody Walter Darling, a local character, and Henry Hudson of Mallorytown, for complicity in a hold-up on Perth street, a leading thoroughfare. The victim of the affair was John Kelsey, an oarsman of Charleston Lake, who stopped in town a few hours en route to Lansdowne. Kelsey was seen in company of the pair, also two others, Wilbert Blair and William Marks, who cannot be found. Kelsey says he was relieved of $97 by three of the quartette, two holding him by the arms while the other rifled his pockets.

Warrents are out for Blair and Marks, both of whom have served several terms for robbery and theft.

Charged With Theft of Beans.

Chatham, Nov. 11.—Bruce McGuigan, charged with stealing twenty bushels of beans from the barn of Andrew McDonald of Harwich, came before Magistrate Stanworth yesterday morning, when he was remanded for a week. McDonald claims that after he had cleaned up the beans, which, at $3 a bushel, were worth $60, McGuigan drove up in the night and carried them off to the market.

McGuigan refused to plead when he came up yesterday morning.

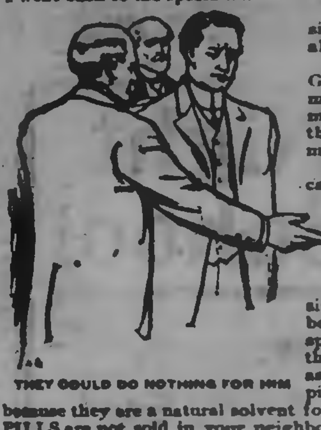
DOCTORS AFRAID TO OPERATE

Could Not Remove Stone From The Bladder. Gin Pills Enabled Him To Pass It.

JOLIETTE, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone In The Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush, and that they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly, and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and third box of GIN PILLS after which I went back to the specialist.



THEY COULD DO NOTHING FOR HIM

He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not relieve me of it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy, I passed the stone on October 3rd, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

Isn't it wonderful? Just think of these simple pills, that even children can take, being able to perform what the greatest specialists in Canada could not do. Surely, the days of the miracle have not passed away, as long as we have Gin Pills. These wonderful pills dissolve stone in the bladder or kidneys because they are a natural solvent for uric acid, which causes calculus. If GIN PILLS are not sold in your neighborhood, send us 50c. for a box or $2.50 for 6 boxes. Sample free if you write us mentioning this paper. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Dept. ACCIDENTAL DEATH EVERY FIVE MINUTES

Every minute twenty-one persons are accidentally injured, according to figures compiled from Government statistics by the Preferred Accident. Every five minutes one person is accidentally killed. Over 11,000,000 are killed or injured yearly, about 30,000 each day. Five times as many are killed and injured each year as die from natural causes. More die and are disabled from pin pricks and other slight injuries than die from pneumonia. More are kept from work by accidental injury than are idle from lack of employment. One death in every twelve is due to accidental causes. A person is twice as liable to die from accident as old age.

The above points out the great necessity of every wage earner carrying Accident and Sickness Insurance to guard against calamities such as befell thousands each day. We will protect you against accidents and also every kind of disease for the sum of One Dollar per month. The best accident and sickness policy issued to-day by any Company.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT'S CAR OF NORTH ONTARIO PRODUCTS

Educative Exhibit Free to Public at G. T. R. Station Siding—Open To-night

The car of the Ontario Bureau of Colonization which arrived in the city this morning from Belleville and is now on the G.T.R. siding, east of the station, where it will remain open to the public to-day and Monday, until 9 p.m. is attracting much favorable comment throughout the city and vicinity. The demonstration, which is in charge of Mr. R. A. Jones, Toronto, and George Palmer of Englehart is of the products of that part of New Ontario known as the Temiskaming district, particularly along the line of the T.N.O. Railway. The exhibit is of special interest to agriculturists and should be seen by a large number.

The exhibition of grain and vegetables was a revelation to all who saw it. The garden and field produce were secured from settlers in New Ontario, residing between Haileybury and Cochrane, some of whom have only been on their farms but two or three years. None of the samples, which are all good ones, were taken from the government experimental stations or from the T.N.O. gardeners. Mr. Jones, the demonstrator, explained that the ground in New Ontario is level and over a sub soil which is also rich and deep, there is a top soil of black muck composed of vegetable matter. From the photographs which line the inside of the car one gets a fairly good idea of the conditions in that new country.

The car is particularly fitted to show much in a small space. Along one side cases are filled with cereals and grains of every description, while on the other side is a table on which are arranged vegetables, roots, etc. At one end an office is fitted up, where circulars, etc., relating to this new agricultural mecca, are given out. In the office is also a folding bed, which, when it is not in use as a bed makes a restful seat for visitors. The interior of the car reminds one of a wing of the agricultural building at a country fair. Among the grain exhibits are fall and spring wheats, several varieties of oats, peas, barleys, beans, sheaves of grain, alfalfa hops, millet and peas and beans in the straw. In the vegetable line are pumpkins, citrons, summer squash kohl rabi, which is a Russian turnip mangolds, sugar beets, carrots, winter radish, parsnips, potatoes, cabbage vegetable marrows, marshmallows and onions. These were secured at fall fairs in New Ontario, from the farmers. The size and quality elicit exclamations of surprise from visitors to the car. Eastern people associate the word north with a cold barren district and wonder how the vegetables and grains can mature as they do.

According to Mr. Jones, spring wheat yields 31 bushels to an acre, and tests 61 lbs. to the bushel; fall wheat 43 1-2 bushels to the acre and tests 63 lbs to the bushel; oats 80 to 135 bushels to the acre, and 40 lbs to a bushel. One farmer sold this season $1700 worth of timothy seed to a Toronto firm. Mangolds often weigh from 18 to 25 lbs. and potatoes yield from 450 to 600 bushels per acre.

The object of this demonstration throughout the country is to give the Ontario young men who are leaving the farms here and migrating to Western Canada, an idea as to the resources in Onatrio. The car has visited nearly all the important towns and cities along the G.T.R. line and leaves here Tuesday morning for Port Hope and Cobourg.

New Ontario is operated by an Ontario Government commission composed of Messrs. J. L. Englehart, chairman; D. Murphy, Frederick Dane, Geo. W. Lee, and A. J. McGee, who is secretary-treasurer. Englehart is the centre of an important clay belt, where the exhibits were obtained and promises to be the most important city in New Ontario.

Those who have not seen this wonderful exhibit already should not miss the opportunity which will be afforded them to-night and on Monday.

NORTH ONTARIO PRODUCTS

Ontario Governments Railway Exhibition Car of Northern Ontario Products will be at G. T. R. Station siding, to-day and Monday, from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m., and free for the inspection of the public. R. A. Jones, representative of the Colonization Branch will be in charge to furnish all information.

JACK THE HUGGER IN THE WEST END

Young Ladies Frightened Near St. Andrew's Church

Another "Jack the Hugger" has put in his appearance in the city. When two young Cedar street ladies were walking home last evening they were accosted by a stranger at the rear of St. Andrew's church. He grabbed one of the girls and jostled her roughly, but they both screeched, and the one who was free began running for help, and Mr. Jack, probably becoming nervous regarding his own welfare, made off.

The much unstrung maidens were taken in by some neighbors, who heard their cries, and after soothing their ruffled feelings, they were piloted home.

The young ladies do not seem to have any idea as to the identity of the insolent stranger. There have been several complaints regarding the insults women and girls are subjected to on the streets of Peterborough, but if they would only complain to the police the "mashers" would soon be rounded up.

DR. JOHNSTON WAS LUCKY

Was Kicked by Ailing Horse in Akey's Barns

Dr. Johnston is congratulating himself to-day at being able to be up and around. This morning he was called to the livery barns of James Akey to attend to one of the Dominion Express Company's horses, which had been taken ill and collapsed. The doctor unfortunately touched a sore on the horse's body and, being in range of the animal's hind feet, was kicked with so sudden violence that he was hurled a distance of about twelve feet along the stable floor. His escape from serious injury was certainly extremely fortunate. He was rendered unconscious for some time. The men at the livery barns acted promptly and restored what they thought to be a very much injured patient. The doctor, however, is able to be about, but is painfully reminded by a feeling about the body, that he was not very gently used this morning.

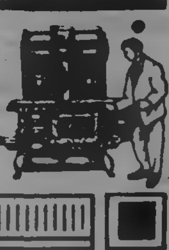
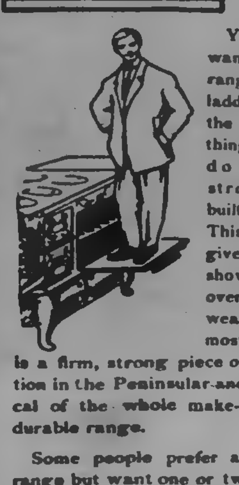
The Peerless Peninsular
a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences



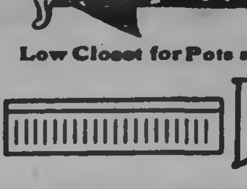


You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door — a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

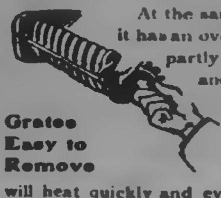
Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

The Peerless
is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.



Low Closet for Pots and Pans



Grates Easy to Remove

At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel — an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

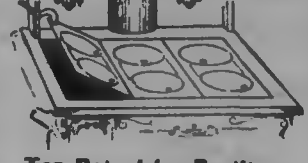
These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves — honest stoves — are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good—the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

All modern conveniences have been embodied in the Peerless, too.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.



Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"
illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

TAG DAY PARAGRAPHS

The railway stations were well guarded and according to reports passengers were liberal with their donations.

At noon the factory employees were besieged by the small armies of taggers and again good success is reported.

The Radial Street Railway Company permitted the girls to travel free on the cars while they distributed their tags. The conductors and motormen the girls say, are O.K.

One bright express driver to'd one fair maid that he had three rosettes and six tags and all he lacked was a girl.

"I'm broke," confessed one young gallant after he had been stalled for the thirteenth time.

Most people who went to market this morning were aware ere they had proceeded far that this was a real live Tag Day.

One party of taggers went to the street railway wharf and met the Rainbow. One lady passenger answered the appeal with the statement that she had seven small children and could not afford the price, with the present high cost of living.

The majority of girls confess that the young men are more liberal than their elders. This, of course, is an exceptional occasion.

Three hundred sales, including a large number of rosettes, was the result of the efforts of two young ladies this morning.

The following conversation amongst the "tag girls" was heard to-day;—

Miss A.—Oh—you are just awful: I saw you smiling at that strange man."

Miss B.—"Why—this is Tag Day and I only wanted to 'tag him.'"

A west ward gentleman stated to a Review reporter that he had been accosted by no less than fifteen C.A.S. workers between Park street and Charlotte street, on his way to business this afternoon.

AWNING DESTROYED

About 8.10 o'clock last night, someone in Graham and Martell's new billiard parlor over Moncur's drug store threw a lighted cigar stubb out through the open window on Mr. Moncur's awning which was directly underneath. A fire was started and the firemen called. They were able to extinguish the blaze before it had gone any farther than the awning, which was rendered a complete wreck.

THREE GENERATIONS

Kept Healthy By Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Over fifty years ago people began to find out the effectiveness of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills in correcting constipation and toning up the system.

Since then the popularity of this reliable old family medicine has grown steadily, and the increase in sales during the past year was the greatest in the whole half century.

As long as livers get sluggish, bowels constipated or kidneys inactive, just so long will cure these conditions and banish their distressing effects for those who are wise enough to use them.

Sick headaches, coated tongues, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and similar disorders are almost invariably caused by impurities which should be removed from the system by the bowels, the kidneys and the pores of the skin. By toning up these organs so that they can do their work properly, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure, or prevent altogether, a large proportion of the common everyday ailments which keep so many people miserable.

WITH THE HUNTERS

Enjoying Life in the Woods

TALES FROM THE SCRAP-BOOK ON HUNTING AND FISHING DEEDS

The deer hunters are now in the woods and are having the outing which they enjoy beyond all others.

It's a great change from humdrum business to get into the northern woods in November, camping in tent or in some log building, originally put up for lumbermen. You are sure to get a good variety of weather—sunny days, dull days, wet days, snowy days; cool nights and cold nights. You live the simple life, without fine linen and luxury. You are your own cook, enjoy chopping and splitting firewood; and if you smoke—eh, think of the soulful content after supper—a glowing fire, the tingle of your physical engine blessedly tired, the draw of a pipe doing its duty by a well loved brand—and withal three or four bucks hanging, head downwards, from the pole, that lies across the birch tree forks. The hunters congregate about the fire and tell their day's experience—one of how he shot the big buck, another of the one that got away, and the other of his all day walk without a shot. Then there's the new man—the first time out—and his case of "buck fever," for which he is gently guyed.

Camped Along the Shore

A delightful case of buck-fever occurred a few seasons ago, when a well known rifle man went on his first deer hunt. He was given the best runway and hadn't been waiting more than half an hour when he saw a fine buck on a hillside coming towards him. As he came beautifully within range the hunter stood with loaded rifle; but was so excited he didn't attempt to shoot but called to a companion a hundred yards away behind some rocks: "Here he comes, a great big dandy! Here he comes!" and then; "There he goes! There he goes!" The other hunter came over the rocks just in time to see his buckship disappearing in the distance and said; "Why the blazes didn't you shoot?" The novice then looked down and seeing the rifle in his hand looked sheepish started to laugh and exclaimed: "Well, I'll be banged, I forgot all about the rifle in my hands."

There's plenty of hard work. Too. Miles of walking through the woods, paddling up rivers and across lakes with portages in between. The exercise in the open air is bracing and exhilarating, and when you turn in for the night you sleep the sleep of the just and awake beautifully refreshed at day break, all ready for another day's hunt.

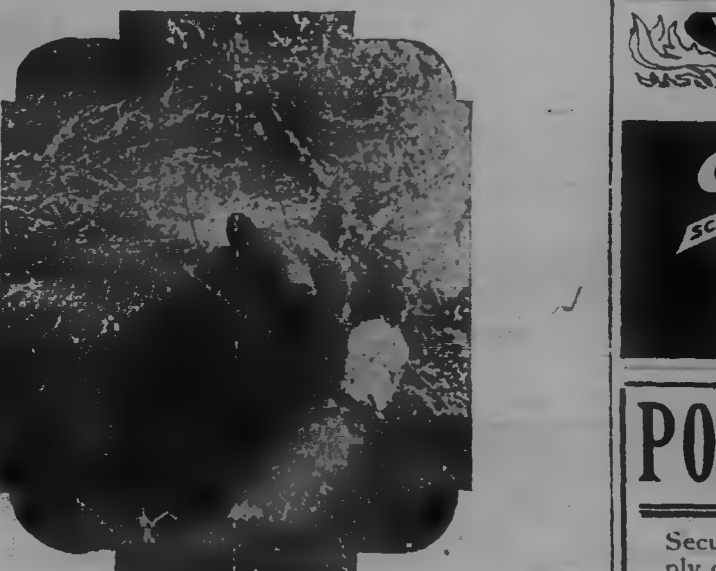
ONE OF THE OLD BOYS.

The writer had an interesting chat with an old timer who has just returned from the wilds of Stony Lake.

"I have seen the time when you could go out on a runway and bag five deer in half a day," he said when speaking of the fortunes of hunting parties in the years gone by.

This season he saw nothing but the marks of the deer, and that was last week, when a fall of snow put in its appearance.

"I have been at the game for the past forty years, but this is the only year that I have failed to land one at least," he remarked.



One Visitor Not Always Welcome

Captain Charlie Gladman and his Shewanaga party are having great luck in the Parry Sound district, while the Ketchecum Club, with Captain Winch in charge, have reported their success to be O.K. The far north hunters have to a great extent benefitted from those who do not travel so far from home. The latter scare and chase the animals in a northerly direction and right into the waiting arms of such camps as the Ketchecums. The season ends next Wednesday.

ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH.

Mr Thomas Rutherford, a veteran at deer hunting, tells a good story of how Mr. William Snowden, the late Thomas Boddy and himself left their camp one day and stationed themselves near a runway leading to the lake. His companion took a canoe at the edge of the lake, while he remained stationed in the woods. After a long wait the lone hunter espied a deer enter the lake on the opposite shore. At the same time the cook at the camp witnessed the same sight, and both started out in their canoes. Giving the cook the right of way, Mr. Rutherford put back, and the deer was captured and hauled to the camp wharf by Mr. Cook.

Meanwhile no stir had been made by the two in the canoes. On inspection both were found to be in the arms of Morpheus. As to the jollying they received and their surprise when shown the deer, it is not necessary to say anything.

Bringing Home the Spoils

SOME FISHERMAN.

Another local knight of the trigger, and one who also does a turn with the rod, quite unblushingly tells a tale of how he caught a few fish.

His, too, was a party of three for this particular day. He was alone in his canoe, but being somewhat of an amateur, soon succumbed to the monotony of "nothing doing," together with the warm sun. The line remained in the water while he slept. Suddenly aroused by his professional instincts, he found the line in operation, and by a dexterous movement, landed a fine trout into the canoe. The line dropped into the water again, and after a short spell of enthusiasm, the fisherman once more dozed off. He was awakened for the second time by the cries of the other too, and another choice one was hauled in.

After this one the story teller passed on to other lines of conversation.

BRIGHTMAN PARTY HAD GREAT LUCK

Secured Complement of Deer in Five Days

"The best hunt I ever had," was the way Mr Tom Brightman answered a Review reporter when he inquired this morning regarding his success on the trail this season.

Mr. J. W. Brightman's party, including Messrs. W. H. Brightman, of Brockville; J. Kenny, Bobcaygeon, W. Gill, Lakefield; T. Brightman, J. W. Brightman (capt.), Peterborough, returned home yesterday evening, after a five days' hunt in the vicinity of Renfrew and Scotia Jct., where they were most successful. Mr. Cyril Lee, who was with the party, returned home earlier in the week. The party bagged their complement when they were five days out. The deer were so plentifulthat only one was shot outplentiful that only one was shot outcamp, which was on the Forks of the Upeongo River and to-day the party of six are the possessors of as fine a bunch of deer as was ever brought to Peterborough.

THREE MOOSE SIGHTED

Three moose were sighted within one mile of the Forks of the Upeongo during the time the local huntsmen were in camp and a couple more were reported by other parties.

The hunters in that vicinity were numerous and all seemed to be having good luck and a good time.

Messrs. Brightman are enthusiastic in their praise of the G.T.R. officials along the line near which they were camped. They found all the railway men courteous and obliging, which they appreciated very much.

There is no doubt but that the Brightman party will return to this district another season.

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

ADDRESS OF E. A. PECK

The Liberal Conservative Candidate

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:—

Having been nominated as a Candidate by Delegates of the Liberal Conservative Association of West Peterborough, in Convention, I address you requesting your support at the pending Election of a representative for this Riding in the Provincial Legislature.

The Whitney Administration

1. A partial statement of work accomplished by Sir J. P. Whitney and his colleagues since assuming office in 1905, and of their plans for the future is set forth in the Manifesto recently issued by the Premier, which was published in the local Newspapers, and which you have no doubt seen; and I refer here to only a few matters of more or less special interest to you as Electors of the Riding.

Workman's Compensation Act

2. The adoption of a new measure in this respect has been under the consideration of the present Government for some time. The Act now in force was passed in 1885, and has not been amended in any substantial way since that period, and in my opinion is defective in several respects. For instance: No relief is now ordinarily given when some degree of negligence on the part of the injured person is shown; no relief is now given where the injury arises from the act of a fellow servant (other than a Foreman or such like person), and there is no summary remedy for determining the rights of the claimant, the injured person having to resort to expensive and frequently protracted court proceedings to recover damages.

The Government has appointed an eminent Judge (Sir W. R. Meredith) to prepare a Bill dealing with this question. This Bill will be ready for presentation to the House at its next Session. I feel a deep interest in this matter, and if elected will confer with those concerned here on the subject, and will endeavor to obtain the passage of an Act, which will be practical, comprehensive and simple in operation.

Education

3. The Government is to be commended for its efforts in the cause of Education.

Marked improvement has been made in the professional training of teachers.

Encouragement to teachers to remain in the profession by assurance of increased salaries.

The cost of school books has been very substantially reduced.

The establishment of continuation classes has been assisted.

Large increases have been made in the annual Grants to the schools, the total amount expended for Educational purposes during the past year exceeding $1,700,000.

4. There are no schools in the Riding which may be called "Bilingual," but as I have been frequently asked my views on this subject, and the matter is one which will no doubt be brought before the Legislature at an early date, I state here that I consider the children in the Province are entitled to receive such an education that they will think and speak in English, and have a thorough command of that language. Not merely is this the intention of the existing law, but in the interests of the children this must be insisted upon.

Highway Improvements

5. The Government has for many years made annual grants for the improvement of roads in the Northern part of the Riding. The sum expended in the Riding in this way last year was over $2,000. These grants will be continued, and I believe application might now be successfully made to the Government for further grants towards the improvement of the principal highways leading to centres of trade in the Riding. I shall be pleased to co-operate in pressing this matter upon the consideration of the Government.

Hydro-Electric Commission

6. A large amount of power is now in process of development along the Trent System, and it is of deep importance to the City of Peterborough that a substantial portion of this should be made available to power users in the City at reasonable rates. The Hydro-Electric Commission has rendered extremely valuable services in procuring cheap power for many Municipalities, and may be relied upon to assist in rendering similar services for the City. The position taken by the Government is that no undue monopoly of power developed upon Provincial streams shall be permitted.

Finances

7. The collection of all moneys to which the Province is entitled has been carefully attended to, and the annual income has been increased to more than double the amount of that in the year prior to taking office by the present Administration, and this income has been carefully and wisely expended in the maintenance of the public Institutions, the cause of Education and Agriculture, in assistance of Hospitals and Charities, in improvement of Highways, and in other ways for the benefit of the community.

In this connection the substantial grants made to the various Municipalities from the proceeds of Railway taxation may be here referred to.

Assuring you that if elected I shall do all in my power to advance the interests of the citizens of the Riding.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,

E. A. PECK

THE RISE OF ANGUS POINTER

Peterborough horsemen will watch with interest the work of Angus Pointer now that he has been placed in the stables of Charlie Barrett, the Parkhill horseman. The horse, when brought here about a year ago, was practically passed up, and was not fancied to any great extent, as a comer on the turf.

An ice track on the canal last winter brought the Pointer into what has proved to be his own, as his work on this occasion made several of the railbirds stop and take notice again.

Jimmie Timblin was asked to take charge of the pacer, and he started to work. He sized Angus Pointer up right, and recent developments show that the horse was actually made by the local reinsman. On one occasion he sent him round the Driving Park circle for a mile in 2.29, 2.19, 2.17 3-4 and 2.17 shortly after taking charge. Now Angus Pointer has passed on, and James will no doubt be one of the most tickled of ribbon holders if the horse pokes his nose to the front in coming events.

Successful Opening of Graham and Martells Parlors

The Halpany orchestra furnished an excellent program of musical numbers at the grand opening of the new billiard parlors at 465 George street last night and a large number were there to enjoy it and have a sociable game of pool or billiards. The rooms are very bright and airy and the tables are of the highest type. Graham and Martell's parlors are becoming a very popular place.

COLLEGIANS WENT THROUHG

Ottawa College in Good Shape for Game To-day

A large number of Peterboro people met the 4.28 C.P.R. train yesterday afternoon, on which the Ottawa College fourteen passed through the city, on their way to Toronto, where they battle with Varsity to-day for the Intercollegiate championship. Of course local interest was centred around the three Peterboro boys, Frank Heffernan, Dick Sheehy and Vernon Hayes, who have made good on the college team, but Peterboro people were also interested to see the team which, under the coaching of Father Staunton, who accompanied the boys and who left the train to meet the friends of his Peterboro boys, had managed to tie the Varsity fourteen for the Intercollegiate championship. Cornellier, the kid punter, came in for a fair share of attention. He is almost a hero in the eyes of his teammates as upon the wonderful kicking depends so much.

Heffernan and Sheehy claimed to be fit for the grind and they appear to be in fine shape. Heff is probably a little thinner after his season's training but feels tip-top. Vernon Hayes is being carried as sub with ten others, but Father Staunton intends using them all-day and Vern. will likely be one of the subs to get a chance.

Father Staunton, appeared very enthusiastic over to-day's prospects. He expects to tuck Varsity's scalp under his belt, and win the Dominion championship into the bargain.

Local fans are doubly interested in the Inter-Collegiate game to-morrow as Pete Campbell is the star on the Varsity line. He and big Heff., two old boyhood chums are being called upon to play against each other for the honor of their respective colleges.

From here it looks like Varsity as they seem almost invincible in their own stamping ground.

SPORT TALK

The majority of the local fans would like to see Hamilton Alerts in the Dominion finals.

ANOTHER RUGBY GAME ARRANGED

Victoria College Fourteen to Play West Ends

Peterborough fans are to have the opportunity of witnessing the West Ends in action once more this season. Manager Oldham has completed negotiations with Victoria College team, of Toronto, and they are billed to play the locals here on Saturday next. Captain Denison's fourteen resumed practices again to-day in preparation for the game.

Died in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Nov. 11.—T. L. L. Lewis, manager of the Northern Life Assurance Co. for the west, and with headquarters in Winnipeg, is dead in the hospital here, following an operation. He was well-known throughout the west. The remains are being shipped to Toronto for interment.

The late T. L. L. Lewis is well-known throughout Ontario. He was born in 1839, near Barrie, and conducted a large mercantile business in Chatham for many years. He was manager of the Crompton Corset Co. in Toronto previous to his departure for the west. His brother, the late Dr. Lewis, was rector of Grace Church in Toronto for many years. He leaves three sons, Osric L. Lewis, K.C., of Chatham, David L., of Barrie, and Fred. A., Okanagan Valley, B.C., and one daughter, Mrs. J. F. Lennox of Toronto.

Broke Game Laws.

Brantford, Nov. 11.—Heavy fines were inflicted in police court here yesterday when Chester Tapley and John Stewart were found guilty of a breach of the game laws. Tapley was fined $40 for having grey squirrel's skins in his possession and Stewart $35 for killing muskrats. Both pleaded ignorance of the law.

"BUCK" O'BRIEN

O'Brien the pitcher recently transferred from Denver to the Boston club has won 24 games out of 2 this season. He is also 24 years old.

OLD MEN MADE YOUNG

"An old man's game" used to be the scornful comment on the game of bowls. If ever there was truth in the jibe there is none now. Bowling, which has an ever-increasing bunch of followers in Canada, is still played by old men, and played by them at its best, but there are many young men who find on the velvety green as keen enjoyment and physical refreshment as are to be found in any other sport. Few games offer greater opportunities for social intercourse. Bowling is one of the games in which the players can "let themselves go" without detriment to the play. Excepting always curlers — who, indeed, are of the same breed — bowlers when on the green mingle with the varying fortunes of the game more of jollity and good fellowship than is possible in almost any other pastime. And thus old men are made young again.

Must Have Diet Change

They were telling baseball yarns when Dr. Mark E. Baldwin, famous old States' National and Brotherhood pitcher, pushed this one over the plate: "You all remembers Mike Kelly, one of the greatest baseball players the game ever knew. Sure you remember Mike. Well, one day he wasn't feeling any too good and called on a doctor. The latter, after an examination, turned to Mike and said: "Mr. Kelly, you have been drinking too much." This was too much for the grand old catcher, and after a minute's reflection he came back at the doctor with "That's all right, doc; but do you expect a fellow to eat all the time."

The more a man thinks of himself the less he makes of himself.

Our power of sympathy is largely dependent upon our sensitiveness.

Charles Costello was found dead behind a barn at Pembroke, having been accidentally shot.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Evidence from a Shark.

It may be a perfectly unwarrantable reflection upon an upright and exceedingly useful body of men, but somehow the mention of the legal profession irresistibly draws the mind to sharks. And there was at least one historical occasion on which a shark did actually play an important part in a criminal trial.

In 1799 the brig Nancy was captured by a British warship as a suspected slaver; and her release by the prize court at Jamaica, whither she had been brought for trial, seemed inevitable, owing to the absence of incriminatory documents. Curiously enough, the officers of the Abergavenny hooked a shark soon afterwards in the neighborhood, which was found to contain a bundle of papers relative to the Nancy.

These were preserved in ignorance of the capture of the brig, and eventually led to her condemnation. These interesting documents are said to have been stored in the museum at Jamaica, and perished in the great earthquake there a few years ago; but the head of the shark is still on view at the Royal United Service Institution, London.

The Reward of Thrift

In connection with the sale of the French "junk pile" at Panama comes the story that one bidder for the De Lesseps leaving was a man who but a few years ago was working in a junk shop at $7 a week, yet who was able to accompany his bid with a certified check for $115,000.

Such a fact serves to put a hitherto despised business in a different light. We shall do well to treat the lowly rag and bottle man with more respect. His potentialities are great. His shrewdness in taking profitable advantages of such seemingly simple openings as first present themselves deserves a higher appreciation.

A Novel Church Service

A real agricultural setting was provided at a harvest thanksgiving service, held in connection with a parish church in England. The service took place in the well-filled rickyard of a farmstead. The vicar, the Rev. C. Harrison, the assistant curates, the churchwardens, and the choir during the singing of the processional hymn, took up their places in a space surrounded by corn and hayricks and agricultural implements, and the vicar delivered his sermon from a farmer's waggon. A large congregation, attracted no doubt by the novelty of the service, was present.

Publish My Letter The World Over

The Words of Harold P. Bushy, Who Was Permanently Cured of Chronic Lumbago by "Nerviline."

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

LETTER NO. 4311

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Don't be cajoled into receiving anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." Large bottles 50c., trial size, 25c. Sold everywhere or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

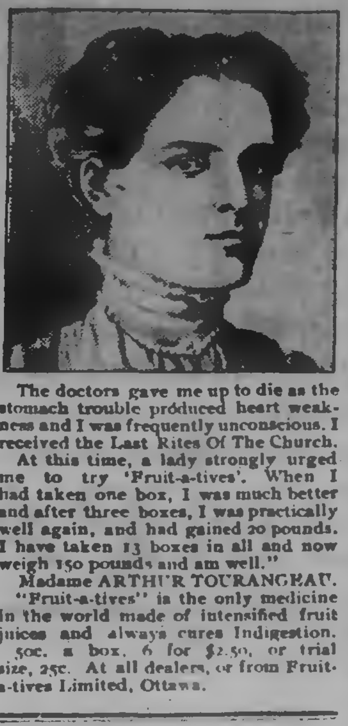
DOCTORS HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE

"Fruit-a-tives" saved my Life

RIVIÈRE À PIERRE, Q., May 9, 1910.

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate.



The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites Of The Church.

At this time, a lady strongly urged me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again, and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am well."

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost if the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are short and lifeless. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes, on receipt of price, fifty cents. B. V. Marion, sole distributor, Bridge-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HIGHER CRITICS.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Why does not John Carlisle keep firing his little pop gun at the intellectual giants called "Higher Critics?" Does he not know that they are wiser than what is written? And that they know more than the greatest sages of the past or the present? Their intellectual attainments enables them to go back over the pathway of time for six thousand years, and to proclaim with a loud voice that God never appeared to Adam as recorded in the book of Genesis. That the eleven first chapters of the book of Genesis are not historical, but mythic table. That Abraham never offered up his son Isaac in the land of Moriah as recorded in the 22nd chapter of Genesis, and referred to in Hebrews 11, 17. Such a demand could never be made upon the man of God. Thus according to their statements the account in the old and new are false.

The Pentateuch, they tell us, was not writen by Moses. As to this we are not concerned. Is it the word of God? The gift of tongues the "Higher Critics" tell us was never bestowed on the apostles on the day of Pentecoste, as recorded in Acts 2 3 and 4, but the people came there and learned the Greek language; but the scriptures says that "they were all amazed, and marvelled, saying one to another: Behold are not all these which speak Galileans. And now hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born? If they had heard the gospel in the language they had learned since they came to the country there would be a false statement in their saying it was in the language in which they were born. We need not marvel at this for the higher critics tell us that the Bible is full of errors and contradictions. That the original copy was lost and that it is made up from scraps and memory. That it was written by men of no education and we have no knowledge where they came from, nor who they were.

What an insult to Almighty God. See 2 Peter 1. 21 "For the prophecy came not in the old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." They were holy, they were men to whom God Himself selected to make known His mind and will to the teeming millions of the earth. But is the statement true? That they were all uneducated. I proclaim it to be a false statement. Paul wrote fourteen of the epistles, or they bear his name, and he was a man of learning. Luke was a physician, Matthew was a tax gatherer and I think that I have read that it required some education to fill that office in this day.

I confess, Mr. Editor, that if I had any leanings towards infidelity that I should have been mightily helped in that direction by what I have heard from the pulpit respecting the Bible. I don't wonder that some absent themselves from the church and have no desire that their children should sit under such a minister.

ONE OF GOD'S LITTLE ONES.

New Fife and Drum Band

A large and enthusiastic gathering met at the home of Mr. Thos. Palmer, on Queen street, last evening and organized what will be known as The Independent Fife and Drum Band of Peterborough. This band will be composed of about twenty-five men and will no doubt, be a creditable organization. Mr. E. A. Peck occupied the chair and the following list of officers were installed;—

President—Thos. Palmer.

Secretary—R. A. W. Hay.

Treasurer—Sam H. Baker.

Committeemen—Mr. Reckebay, T. White, O. Barrett, J. Hunter, and Robert A. Browne.

After the election of officers, short speeches were made by some of the members present. The new organization will have a natty uniform of blue with a neat cap of a similar color, and will be a credit to the city.

SICKLY BABIES CRY HEALTHY BABIES SMILE

Baby's cry indicates distress—his smile health and contentment. The mother may be sure there never was a baby who cried for the fun of it. Baby's disposition is naturally a happy one and it is only distress such as may be brought on by a disordered condition of the stomach or bowels that can change this. So mothers, to keep your baby happy you must keep him well. Baby's Own Tablets will do this. Concerning them Mrs. Chas. Potvin, Causapatcal, N.S., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have proved an excellent remedy for my baby. I had been using syrups, but they failed to help him and he cried constantly. The Tablets cured him, and now he is a fat, healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MISS CHALMERS RECITAL

A select and fair sised audience last evening greeted the appearance of Miss Mary G. Chalmers, the talented local vocalist, in her recital at the Conservatory of Music hall, when, assisted by Dr. Frederic Nicolai, the distinguished Belgian cellist, a musical treat of surpassing merit held the undivided attention of all present for nearly two hours.

It goes without saying that those who attended did so in the expectation of listening to a program of exceptional worth and their anticipations were most agreeably fulfilled. Beyond shadow of doubt Peterborough has been extremely fortunate in securing the services of such a gifted and popular soloist to augment the already enviable reputation the city enjoys, as a source of successful producers of musical artists. Miss Chalmers' first exclusive public appearance last evening was decidedly a notification to all present that a successful musical career awaits her in this city.

Her program last night was emblematic of the high standard of musical skill and quality to which she has attained, and not alone in the English compositions, but in Italian and French as well, her remarkable mastery of charming and selected numbers was most ably and accurately revealed. In her opening series of selections the third one, namely, Brackett's "Proposal," captivated the audience, so delightfully and perfectly was it given. At her second appearance she gave two selections in French, and it was in these that her pure idiom and faultless interpretation were most pleasingly displayed.

The "Lullaby" which followed was most acceptable to Miss Chalmers' sympathetic voice, and it was marked by a sweetness of expression and wonderful vocal control.

The "Spring Song," and Gounod's famous "Ave Maria" were her next numbers, and in the latter exceedingly difficult though beautiful creation, Miss Julia Choate supplied the violin obligato, and this with the piano accompaniment, contributed go make the number one of the most pleasureable and impressive of the evening. "The song cycle," which was intended by the composer to represent a dream of Egypt, and consisting of five distinct selections, was probably the most strikingly interpreted item on the program, calling for wide and flexible vocal powers in which sympathy and power blended most harmoniously. This number was rewarded by unstinted and enthusiastic applause.

The performance of Dr. Frederic Nicolai on the cello was something of an innovation to local music lovers. His command of the instrument was amply and most acceptably displayed. Dr. Nicolai came highly recommended, it being his initial appearance on a local public platform, and no meagre portion of the success of the recital last evening was attributable to his perfect mastery of the cello. Capable of extracting from the instrument the sweetest melody in cadences most soothing, and then again marked by vigor and passion, Dr. Nicolai made a marked impression on the audience by his skilful playing.

His selections were each of a very high class and won liberal rounds of applause.

The accompaniments, which added so much to the effectiveness of the various numbers, were most acceptably played by Miss Pearl McKee, of the Conservatory staff, assisted by Miss Beatrice Starke.

The accompanist for Dr. Nicolai was Miss Andries, of Toronto, who assisted most materially.

A beautiful bouquet was presented to Miss Chalmers during the program, coming from St. Paul's choir, of which Miss Chalmers is the popular soloist.

Strength for Bad Backs

You May Cure Your Lame Back by Giving Your Kidneys Attention—Booth's Kidney Pills Will Help You.

Most men, women and children have bad backs when the kidneys are sick. Older folks suffer with bad kidneys for the kidneys are the hardest-worked organs of the body, and an active life often wears them out before there are any other signs of advancing age.

You should learn the early warnings of sick kidneys and then it will be easy to take any trouble in the beginning and with the aid of Booth's Kidney Pills make a quick and lasting cure.

Some of the early signs of sick kidneys are backache, lame back, rheumatic pains, neuralgia sharp pains when stooping or lifting, nervousness irritability, failing eyesight, sallow drawn features, dark circles around the eyes, dizzy spells, tired out state, despondency.

And there are usually disturbances of the urine—too frequent passages, scanty passages, with scalding or burning pain, dark colored heavy urine, having to get up at night. This condition is speedily relieved by Booth's Kidney Pills. A trial is sufficient to prove the claim that they are without equal as a remedy for weak and sick kidneys and are fully guaranteed by the proprietors.

BACK WEAK AND TENDER.

George Gould, of 227 Dalhousie st., Toronto, Ont., says;—"My back was weak and tender and if I would sit for any length of time, a heavy dull pain would catch me across the small of it and in the region of the kidneys, leaving me unable to draw a breath for many seconds. The urine plainly told of the disordered state of the kidneys, as it was highly colored and scalding. The kidney secretions were frequent and irregular Nothing benefited me until I procured Booth's Kidney Pills and commenced treatment. In less than a week I began to improve. The kidney secretions gradually became normal. The urine cleared to its natural color and the pains entirely left me. Thanks to Booth's Kidney Pills I am now quite well."

FRAMED PICTURE GIVEN BY CHOIR

Interesting Event at Home of Mrs. C. McClelland

The choir of St. Andrews church most agreeably surprised their former organist and choir leader, Mrs. C. McClelland last evening, by visiting her residence on Boswell Avenue, where they presented her with the large handsomely mounted group photo of the choir, which was exhibited in Clark's jewelry store last week. Needless to say Mrs. McClelland was delighted at the kindness and thoughtfulness of her former choristers and most appropriately thanked them. A pleasant social evening followed with games and refreshments.

Mrs. Dormer read an address that accompanied the picture, which Mr. Murray Miller presented.

MORE NAMES FOR THE NEW SCHOOLS

Earl Grey and Duke of Connaught are Suggested

Two names have been suggested for the proposed new East and West ward schools, namely, the King George and the Queen Mary. An interested reader of the Review suggests they they be named the "Earl Grey" and the "Duke of Connaught" in honor of past and present governors-general.

PRESENTATION TO CHOIR LEADER

Mr. J. H. Callander Honored by Mark St. Choir

At the conclusion of choir practise at Mark street Methodist church last night a very pleasing event took place when Mr. J. H. Callander who has been choir leader for some years was presented with a purse of gold on the eve of his departure from the church. The presentation was made by Miss Addie Dickson and the following address was read by Mrs. Matchett.

The address was as follows—

Dear Mr. Callander—It was with deep regret that we learned of your decision of moving from this community, thus making it necessary for you to resign the leadership of the choir, and to sever your connection with the Mark Street Methodist church. All through the years, you have by your kindly disposition, your faithfulness to duty, and your constant desire to please, endeared yourself to every member of the choir. You were always present to practices and to the services, if your duties were at all permissible. Nor do we forget the interest you manifested in us by the many pleasant trips and outings you gave to the members, notably the excursion up the lakes in August last. Nor are we unmindful of the many changes you have introduced into the choir of late, bringing in helpers from all the other choirs, thereby adding spice and interest to all our services.

As a member of the Finance Committee, we have grown to prize your very valuable and practical suggestions, many of which are still vogue and will, we believe, prove of value to us in days to come. And now we desire to express to you in a somewhat tangible form, our appreciation for these services, and to ask you to accept this purse of gold, with the hope that with it your may secure something that will constantly remind you of the many happy times spent together in the service of the Kingdom in this church.

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

JAS. E. CRAGG,
MALCOLM McINTYRE,
JOHN SPEER

Mr. Callander is not leaving the city but is removing to another part of the city, which will not permit of his active association with Mark Street church.

The Envy of her Neighbors is the woman whose kitchen shines with a handsome, roomy range—whose face beams with the satisfaction afforded by a perfect cooking equipment.

For every woman wants a good stove. Whether she does her own cooking or not, she eats the meals that are prepared on it, and feels a pride in having the best. GURNEY-OXFORD satisfies that pride; justifies the neighbor's envy. Gurney-Oxford stoves and ranges carry every known feature of convenience, economy and control with some new points of excellence that are exclusive.

First of all is the lever that holds. No danger of the fire going out between meals. The Oxford Economizer will hold the heat at a low ebb till you want it; then turn the handle, and your stove is hot in a jiffy. Besides this saving of time and worry it saves in fuel to the actual extent of one ton in six.

THE DIVIDED FLUE STRIP is the envy of all women who bake. It guides the heat equally along sides, back and front of the oven.

Let us demonstrate these and other strong advantages of the Gurney-Oxford line. We have stoves for every purpose, every fuel, and a variety of prices.

KING AND QUEEN DEPART FOR INDIA ON EPOCH-MAKING TRIP

Booming of Guns as Their Majesties Depart to be Crowned Emperor and Consort.

London, Nov. 13.—King George and Queen Mary started Saturday morning on a journey which has no parallel in the history of the British throne. For the first time a reigning Emperor of India is going there to be crowned and to receive the acclamations of his subjects.

After saying farewell to their younger children at Buckingham Palace the King and Queen, with their suite, drove in three open laudaus to Victoria Station. The weather was typical for a London November morning, a grey mist prevailing.

The King, in the uniform of an admiral, rode in the first carriage. With him was Queen Mary in a blue dress and furs. The Prince of Wales and Princess Mary also rode in this carriage, which was escorted by a detachment of the Horse Guards.

Cheering crowds greeted the royal procession along the route to Victoria Station. The station, from which the public had been excluded, was filled with members of the royal family and prominent dignitaries.

The band of the Coldstream Guards played the royal anthem, and as the imperial special pulled out of the station at 10.30 o'clock, on its way to Portsmouth, there was a remarkable demonstration of affection.

The special crown of India, which the King will wear at the durbar at Delhi, on Dec. 12, and other state jewels, are already aboard the vessel. They were placed in safes, and with the regalia were taken to Portsmouth Friday unostentatiously. They were packed in brown paper by the court jewelers and were carried to the steamship without guard or formality except the presence of a single Scotland Yard detective.

Warships Boom.

Portsmouth, Eng., Nov. 13.—The Medina of the P. & O. Steamship Co., carrying King George and Queen Mary to India left the harbor at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon to the accompaniment of a royal salute by the guns of the warships and forts. The ships were manned, the bands played "God Save the King" and enormous crowds on the esplanade at South Sea cheered rousingly as the royal vessel passed out.

Along the sea front off Spithead eleven dreadnoughts, composing the first battleship squadron and attendant cruisers, awaited the Medina and led her out to sea. The Admiralty yacht, Enchantress, with the Lords of the Admiralty immediately followed the Medina and the four first-class cruisers, the Cochrane, Argyll, Defence and Natal, which in command of Sir Colin Keppel, will convey Their Majesties to the far east, completed the pageant.

The fleet is due to arrive at Calcutta during the first week of December and two days later the party will proceed by train to Delhi, which they should reach on Dec. 7. There will be elaborate ceremonies at Calcutta and the durbar proper at which His Majesty will formally assume the title of King-Emperor, will be held at Delhi, on Dec. 12.

Seven Men Missing.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Seven men are reported missing as a result of Saturday night's storm on Lake Michigan. They left Chicago Saturday morning for a fishing trip in a gasoline launch and are believed to have lost their lives. The launch was last reported passing the life-saving station at Evanston, Ill., at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Royal Canadian Navy.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—Saturday's Canada Gazette contains the following: His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the naval forces of Canada receiving the style of the "Royal Canadian Navy," and of the ships of that navy being designated as "His Majesty's Canadian Ships."

TORNADO SWEEPS OVER THE STATES; IS MUCH DAMAGE

Many Perish in Disastrous Storm in Wisconsin—Seven Deaths in Janesville—Illinois Town Wrecked.

Janesville, Wis., Nov. 13.—At least seven lives were lost and scores of person injured, some fatally, in a tornado which swept Rock County at dusk last night. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' damage was done.

Saturday night dozens of families sought shelter in small structures out of the path of the storm. Others found themselves without a roof and because the flooded roads made travel impossible, were forced to pass the night in the open fields.

Measures for the relief of Orfordville, Hanover, Milton Junction and Milton have been instituted by Janesville and Beloit, but much suffering necessarily must ensue.

A cold wave followed the storm, and sleet and snow added to the misery.

At Orfordville Mrs. John Clowder, 80 years old, was killed, as were also a father and two daughters of a family whose name is Smith, and a Mrs. Broede.

At Milton one person, as yet unidentified, is reported dead. Amy Korban, 8 years old, was killed when her home, just north of Janesville, was demolished.

Footville, Magnolia, Pewaukee and other villages also are reported to have suffered severely.

Illinois Town Wrecked.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 13.—A tornado swooped down on Virginia, Ill., at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, dealing destruction. A number of persons were seriously injured, while the town was wrecked.

Many had miraculous escapes, but none was killed. The most seriously injured were Early Whittaker, the little son of William Whittaker; Ed. French and Otis Middleton.

Not a building that lay in the storm's path escaped damage. A hundred dwellings were unroofed while the business section is a mass of wreckage. Saturday night the town was in total darkness and rescuing parties groped their way with lanterns throught the wreckage looking for the injured.

Many persons took refuge in the Methodist Church. The building was crushed and many in it were injured. The buildings reported demolished are: Opera house, city hall, City Hotel, Pollard building, Kramer building, Mann Hotel, Catholic Church and the Methodist Church.

Scores Injured.

Springfield, Mo., Nov. 13.—A tornado swept over Springfield late yesterday, wrecking a number of residences and injuring a score of persons. Earl Prescott was fatally hurt.

Gale at Buffalo.

Buffalo, Nov. 13.—The first blast of winter struck here yesterday, ushered in by a 68-mile an hour gale and a drop of 40 degrees in temperature. The storm's trail was marked by shattered plate glass windows, a stranded lake freighter and a demoralized street car service. No fatalities occurred in the city, but at Kennedy, Alonzo Dewey and his wife, an old couple, blinded by the storm, drove in front of an Erie passenger train and were killed.

About 12 o'clock the wind tore down the transmission cables of the Niagara Falls Power Co. The lines on both sides of the river were prostrated, thus cutting off all source of power for street cars here, except emergency storage batteries, which were exhausted in twenty minutes. Between 12.30 and 3 o'clock traffic was at a standstill. The tie-up came when traveling was difficult, if not dangerous, and the majority of the passengers clung to the shelters of the cars until traffic was resumed.

The 550 foot freighter J. Q. Riddle of Cleveland was torn from her moorings back of the breakwater and swept toward the beach at the foot of Michigan street. When the lines parted a watchman on board opened her water-gates and the boat settled on a sandy bottom 150 feet from the shore. She is broadside to the wind, but so low in the water that her position is not considered dangerous.

Colder Weather Coming.

Toronto, Nov. 13. The cold wave of yesterday corresponds with weather conditions of a year ago, according to the meteorological office. The disturbance for the past few days over the lakes, were followed by a cold wave from the west, the thermometer indicating 28 degrees with still lower depression for two or three days. The wind velocity yesterday afternoon reached a maximum of 46 miles an hour.

Falls In Winter Garb.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 13.—A severe gale blew here all day yesterday, accompanied by snow during the morning. The wind raged all last night, with the mercury many degrees below freezing. Where the spray from the falls fell, great icicles have been formed as in the depth of winter. An inch of snow fell during the morning's blizzard.

ARTHUR HAWKES IS APPOINTED IMMIGRATION COMMISSIONER

Hon. Robert Rogers Makes Announcement in Montreal.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—Hon. Robert Rogers was in Montreal yesterday on his way home from New York. He announced that there were to be several changes and reforms in the Department of the Interior. Among them is the appointment of Arthur Hawkes of Toronto as special commissioner for the Department on immigration matters. Mr. Hawkes is to enter upon his new duties at once and will make a tour of inspection, first through the West and then through Great Britain.

In speaking of the Federal election in the West, the Minister declared that the vote as returned did not represent public opinion; that the Conservatives were unrepresented at many polling places; that the deputy returning officers, scrutineers and poll clerks were creatures of the late administration; that there were no proper voters' lists; and that the above-named officials voted sections as they saw fit, unchallenged.

He declared that proper lists would be prepared for the next election under Federal supervision, so that the next election would not be a screaming farce.

GRAINMEN ARE PESSIMISTIC

North-West Association Report is Gloomy

Winnipeg, Nov. 13.—Further details of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association report on the crop situation tend to make the outlook not only for this year, but also for next year, anything but bright. The report says that only 70 per cent. of the grain has yet been threshed, and about 50,000,000 bushels (estimated) remain in the stack with no immediate prospect of seeing a separator. The setting in of a thaw would almost ruin it, or at least reduce it several grades. The report is not hopeful of the grain threshed, saying that 60 per cent. of it is four or under. Of the 50,000,000 bushels remaining in the west, half will be needed for seed and feed.

The prospect is darkened by the announcement that very little fall plowing has been done, owing to the sudden setting in of winter and that means delay in the spring.

Further comment on the congestion of traffic at Fort William is made. It is attributed to the incoming coal for the West, due to the shortage caused by the western miners' strike.

Mr. Peck will address the electors of Ward One, at Van Every's Committee Rooms, To-night.

SEVENTEEN HORSES BURN

Fire Consumes Halifax Boarding Stables

Only One Horse Was Saved of the Lot

Halifax, Nov. 13.—Fire at an early hour Saturday morning burned the boarding stables owned by Festus Marriott on Hollis street, and destroyed seventeen horses, the property of physicians and others in Halifax. Four of the horses belong to the Eastern Stage Coach Co., that runs a line along the shore from Halifax. A large quantity of sleighs and wagons were burned and one motor car, the property of Dr. H. K. Macdonald. One of the horses destroyed was the property of the Canadian General Electric Co., for which they had refused $300 the day before.

The fire broke out with great suddenness and nothing could be done to save the animals, or indeed any of the property. Of the whole number of horses in the stables only one was rescued. This animal was got out by the heroic work of John Kennedy, a driver of the stage line.

Marriott had no insurance, his policy having run out a month before. The total loss will be under $10,000.

C.N.R. Buys Land.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—Deeds of several hundreds of acres of land transferred from farmers and property owners in Neapean Township, southwest of Ottawa to the Canadian Northern Railway, have been registered at the county registry office. This purchase lends color to the recent rumors that the company intends to build extensive workshops here at the junction point of the Ottawa-Toronto division with the main line to the west.

Larsen's Latest Venture.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 13.—If he reaches Detroit safely by Wednesday in his motorboat Niagara, which shot the whirlpool rapids, Capt. Klaus Larsen will next summer attempt to cross the Atlantic in a fifteen-foot motorboat. He left Lewiston Saturday, going through the Welland Canal and will go thence along the coast of Lake Erie to Detroit.

CHINESE REGENT MUST STAY IN PEKIN TO AWAIT HIS FATE

Yuan Ki Shai Refuses to Become the Premier—Going to Pekin to Have Consultation on Affairs

Pekin, Nov. 13.—Yuan Shi Kai and the Government exchanged telegrams yesterday morning. Yuan has agreed to come to Pekin to discuss the situation, but he adheres to his resolve not to accept the Premiership. It is expected that he will arrive here to-day and an audience with the Regent has been arranged.

It is not believed generally that Yuan Shi Kai has yet advised the throne to abdicate, as some reports stated, but he may do so later. Saturday Yuan sent a message to the Government from his home in Changtefo. He then proceeded to Chengchow, on the Penhan Railway, where he conferred with a deputation from the Honan assembly, endeavoring to dissuade the delegates frim the proposed declaration of the province's independence, which, he said, would damage the throne's position seriously.

The fact that the man on whom the Government depends more than anyone else is coming to Pekin has caused a general feeling of relief and of hope that he will evolve plans to end the present chaos. It is understood that the court will remain in the Forbidden City, realizing that their departure now would be fatal. It is also understood that the throne is willing to accept a pension and retire to Jehol if safety is assured.

Prince Ching, the acting Premier, does not desire to remain in office, but he continues to support the regent, who has no other trusted advisor.

The situation at Kaifeng, Honan Province, is serious. The governor's family left for the north Saturday night on a special train. The governor remains at Kaifeng, but does not sleep at the yamen.

Foreign refugees who have arrived here from Taiyuenfu, Shansi Province, report that no foreigners have been harmed. The governor and his wife and thirty Manchus, however, have been beheaded. The rebels are maintaining order, and the new arrivals say that their administration is excellent. The whole province of Shansi is supporting the movement.

Mukden and New Chwang are controlled by defence societies, consisting of troops and civilians. The conditions prevailing in these places practically amount to independence.

Wu Chang Bombarded.

Hankow, Nov. 13.—(Delayed in transmission.)—The Imperialists have bombarded Wu Chang without noticeable effect. They have practically abandoned Tenkilometer station, owing to the effective shooting of the revolutionaries. Otherwise conditions are pacific here, except for sniping.

Yuan Shi Kai, in writing to Gen. Li Yuen Heng, the rebel leader, setting forth terms for a settlement, has expressed dissatisfaction with the Government at Pekin. He urged acceptance of the constitution with a limited monarchy and asked that the Emperor be given an opportunity to prove the sincerity of his promises for reforms.

Executing All Suspects.

London, Nov. 13.—A despatch to a news agency from Nanking says that martial law has been proclaimed there. Gen. Chang Jen Chung, the viceroy, is executing all suspects, including some of his own men, and is enlisting numbers of roughs.

The rebels have retired to their nearest camp, fifteen miles distant. The Government troops are bringing up artillery to attack them, but are respecting the neutrality of the railroad. Food supplies in Nanking are becoming exhausted.

Foreigners Safe.

Shanghai, Nov. 13.—Reports from Nanking say that that city is now orderly and that all foreigners are safe. Chin Kiang, a short distance from Nanking, is awaiting the results at the latter place, but the rebel flag still flies on the forts. The revolutionaries have taken Chuchow on the Pukow railroad, thirty miles north of Pukow.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The annual report of the weights and measures department of inland revenue, just issued, shows that the total revenue collected from the inspection of weights and measures for the last fiscal year was $98,661, as against $92,814.05 the previous year.

The total revenue collected for the inspection of gas and gas meters was $52,567.25, as compared with $54,331.20 the year before.

HOW SEATS ARE ARRANGED

Hon. Geo. E. Foster Next to the Premier

Room is Left for Graham or Fielding

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The seating plan for the House of Commons, which was finally arranged by the chief whips on Saturday, gives a clear idea of the transformation which will be noticed in the House of Commons when it meets on Wednesday.

Premier Borden and his followers will, of course, be to the right of the Speaker, at least all of them who do not occupy the overflow colony of Government supporters to the left of the presiding officer. The Premier will occupy the seat from which Sir Wilfrid Laurier has led the House for fifteen years, and his deskmate, as in Opposition, will be Hon. G. E. Foster, the oldest Parliamentarian in the Cabinet. To his right will be Hon. F. D. Monk, who is seated with Hon. W. T. White. To the left of Mr. Foster in the front row are Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Frank Cochrane. Hon. L. P. Pelletier is seated with P. Blondin, who is not a member of the Cabinet.

David Henderson and Hon. John Haggart have front seats, as also have Haughton Lennox and W. F. Maclean, P. Marshall and F. R. Lalor are desk mates in the front row.

In the second row of the Cabinet Ministers, Hon. J. D. Doherty is directly back of Mr. Borden, with Hon. J. D. Reid as his desk mate. Hon. Martin Burrell and Hon. T. W. Crothers are desk mates, while Hon. J. D. Hazen and Col. Sam Hughes are placed together. In the third row are Hon. A. E. Kemp and Hon. G. H. Perley, and Hon. Dr. Roche and Hon. B. Nantel.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as was predicted, has no desk mate, evidently leaving room for either Hon. Geo. Graham or Hon. W. S. Fielding to enter later. On the ex-Premier's left is Hon. W. S. Pugsley, who has as his deskmate, Hon. R. Lemieux. Other front seat Liberals are Hon. Chas. Marcil, Hon. E. Emmerson, Hon. Chas. Murphy, who is paired with Hon. Frank Oliver, Hon. Dr. Beland, Jacques Bureau, E. M. MacDonald and W. A. Charlton. Back of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is his chief whip, F. F. Pardee, and Hugh Guthrie as his desk mate. F. B. Garvel and Hon. A. MacLean are given prominence, as are also W. F. German, who opposed reciprocity, and Clark of South Essex.

This week will be a gala one for Ottawa and is being looked forward to with more than ordinary interest by both politicians and the social world. Members are already arriving in the city, and to-night will see them pouring in on every train. The question of accommodation promises to be a serious one, as more than the usual number of members and Senators are bringing their families to the capital on account of the briliant social season which is anticipated.

For the opening there will be notables and society folk here from Halifax to Vancouver. There are going to be many disappointments at the opening, for every available seat has already been assigned, and applications are still pouring in by the hundreds.

The drawing-room on Saturday night will be one of the most gorgeous functions ever seen in Ottawa. The duke and duchess are sparing no pains to look after the comfort of those attending, so that despite the crowd, it is not expected there will be much inconvenience.

Pickering Chosen as Site for the English Earl's Scheme.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—Pickering is to become the postoffice address of quite a group of gentlemen farmers, according to the developments that have quietly taken place there in the last three months. The district around this town has been practically all taken up by wealthy people, who will establish large estates and make of them high-class farms.

Lord Somers, who has been in Toronto for about a month now, has purchased considerable acreage on the north side of the Kingston road, in Pickering Township, halfway between Pickering and Dunbarton. Associated with him is a relative, Mr. Somers Cocks, and these two gentlemen will build an imposing mansion on their property in the spring. They will be joined by their families, and will make Pickering, Canada, their permanent residence.

The extent to which Lord Somers, who is a wealthy landowner in England, has purchased property around Pickering is not known for certain, as the residents of the district are rather in the dark to what has and is transpiring around them, but his holdings already run into the hundreds of acres.

Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Sufferings and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

COMPENSATION DISCUSSION

The Toronto Star Weekly discusses at some length the Workmen's compensation Act, and refers to an editorial that appeared in the Review, criticising the circular issued by Mr. Hall on the subject. The Star Weekly, in its very able article, assumes wrongly that because the Review pointed out that there might be some occasion for injustice to employers in having the law made so that an injured workman would get full compensation, no matter whether he had deliberately invited the injury or not, it is opposed to the principle of compensation in every case.

The Star Weekly tells of the thousands of maimed and crippled workers, issuing from the factories of the land, many of them handicapped most seriously for life, and without getting from the employer compensation for their injuries. Of course, the Star Weekly knows that in almost every case, it is the insurance company which has to do the fighting to stave off damages, and not the employer direct. We can in many cases dismiss the employer or the corporation from the case, as not directly involved financially.

It is the insurance company which does the fighting through the courts, to beat the workman of his family on any technicality that lends itself, or by successive appeals until the workman's financial resources are exhausted, and he can go no farther. The Star Weekly denies that a workman will, because he is hard up and in order to get compensation, "shove a finger under a buzz saw or a hammer." It says that in European countries where there is compensation for every injury, no matter whose negligence causes it, workingmen do not go out of their way to sustain minor injuries in order to get money through compensation. That may be. It is quite true that the Ontario Compensation Act is much too unfavorable to the workman, and too favorable to the insurance companies, and the employers. The question of contributory negligence should not enter into the case, but surely there might with full justice, be some line drawn at total negligence. Supposing a man came to work under the influence of liquor, unknown to the foreman, or his employer, and while incapable of working efficiently, gets into some accident. Should the employer be held responsible for that, or must a man be stationed at the entrance to see that he is in fit condition to work? Suppose that a man thought he knew how to do something better than his foreman, and in direct disobedience to the latter's instructions, performed work in such a way as to cause an accident to himself. Should the employer be responsible, or should he station guards through the shop to see that no workman thinks he knows better than the foreman?

• • •

No one with human sympathy and kindness can help feeling for the battered and wrecked specimens of humanity that issue from the shops and factories, their earning power impaired, and their prospects for life ruined. The State might make some provision for these, but when the law is supposed to deal strict justice and equity, we think there may be cases where the employer cannot morally be held responsible for the accident, and any jurist would have to hold the same view. The Star Weekly is entirely right on broad, humanitarian grounds, and no one would like to see the present injustices to workmen removed more than the Review. Yet there might be cases where provision for the injured, by means of insurance, would have to be made by a paternal state, as it could not properly be fastened onto the employer.

SOME BENEFITS

Following are some of the measures undertaken by the Whitney government by which the people benefit directly from the provincial treasury, in money spent in or handed over to the municipalities.

In 1904, the Ross government spent $136,800 on colonization roads, and in 1905, spent $178,000. Last year the Whitney government spent $452,000. Of this amount $3,023 came to East Peterborough, and $2,030 to West Peterborough.

Before the advent of the Whitney government there was no such thing as a railway tax. Under the existing law, half of the railway tax goes into the provincial treasury, and half into the treasuries of the municipalities. In 1910 the municipalities of Peterborough County received $6,593 as their share of the railway tax. Nothing, under the Ross government.

In 1904, there was given in aid of hospitals and charities, $235,900, and in 1910, $352,000, or an increase of about forty per cent.

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC

In its comments on Mr. Peck's address to the electors, our esteemed contemporary the organ, does itself proud. It has got to attempt some criticism, apparently, but the criticism of Mr. Peck's address resembles in many ways the Rowell platform—the toes are bound to stick out over the edge. For example, take the remarks made by the Examiner about power. These are somewhat humorous, we think in view of the power situation here, and the fact that the organ is defending a man who has been tied up in private power corporations, which have fought the hydro-electric to a finish. Let us quote these remarks—

> Mr. Peck, in glorifying the Hydro Electric policy of the Whitney Government, ignores the fact that the hydro-electric scheme has operated to the disadvantage of Peterborough. He does not tell those, whose votes he seeks, that the Whitney Government has expended millions of the funds of the Province, to assist in supplying power to cities and towns West of Toronto, helping the location of industries there, at the expense of Peterborough and Eastern Ontario. While every street in Toronto may be well lighted by Hydro-Electric "juice" the farm of every farmer in Peterborough is practically mortgaged to give Toronto cheap electric light. Mr Peck could if he reflected, see that there is a large share of the money spent in the benefit of one part of the Province to the exclusion of the other, which could be better spent in improving the roads of the country, or promoting the interests of agriculture.

Really this is trying to make a point, with a vengeance. What are the actual facts? The power receipts from the municipalities in the hydro-electric system to October 31, 1911, were $168,000. The total cost of operation was $143,000, leaving an excess of receipts over expenditure of $25,000. This was for the first year. What is the estimate for 1912? Cost, including four per cent interest on the capital, will be $472,000. The revenue will probably reach $475,000. Does that look as if the rest of the province were being burdened by the hydro-electric? In 1913 the system will be self-sustaining, counting the interest charges on the capital involved.

As to the charge that Peterborough is suffering because of the introduction of the hydro-electric, would the Stratton organ rather see the whole of Ontario in the grip of the private corporations? We believe it would. Its candidate is identified with them. Why should it not defend his interests? It, of course, does not mention the fact that the Whitney government is prepared to extend the hydro-electric system to the Trent Valley, and give Peterborough the same treatment as the western municipalities are receiving. It would rather have no hydro-electric either here or western Ontario. If it talks about the benefit of the hydro-electric system in eastern Ontario and Toronto, why does it oppose the bringing of the hydro-electric benefits to Peterboro? Surely the benefit of the government system in one district would be duplicated in another! The Examiner is so absolutely uncandid and misleading that it were better to have kept its head under the sand.

THE CASUS BELLI

The letter on the license administration, appearing in the Examiner on Saturday, is such a distortion of the true facts and conditions, that one has to seek behind the scenes to find a casus belli. Perhaps the failure of the license commissioners to comply with repeated efforts to secure a wholesale brewing license for Peterborough, might explain the malignant attack, which contains many things utterly untrue, many statements deliberately distorted and misleading, and many equivocations of a miserable sort. It is such a letter that the man who wrote it would be afraid to come out in the open with his innuendoes.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The objectionable feature to the administration of the liquor license laws in Peterborough arises from the fact that it is not being handled by the provincial secretary of the Ross government.

Perhaps the late provincial secretary of the Ross government would like to take up the administration of license affairs again for Peterborough and show 'em how to do it. It is not much wonder that he feels dissatisfied with the amateur bungling of the Conservatives.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 11.—The late strength in America yesterday was reflected here at the opening, and values were unchanged to ⅛d lower. Following the opening there was free realizing, and values declined ⅛d to ¼d, with the undertone easy. This selling was profit-taking by yesterday's buyers, induced by the favorable weather in Argentine, lower Buenos Ayres close and free offerings of new Argentine wheat at 3d to 6d decline. It is expected that shipments to the United Kingdom this week will be heavy. Advices from Australia are more favorable, and Russia weather is mild, with port arrivals there large and offered at a decline. Just before the close there was some little show of strength, with shorts profit-taking on the unfavorable weather in Canada, and at this time prices were ⅛d to ¼d up from the low, and ⅜d lower than yesterday.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Wheat snapped back more than 2c to-day after a sudden upturn of a cent. Shorts in a stampede over sensational damage said to have been caused by the blizzard in northwest, forced the bulge until a deluge of profit taking sales on spreads between Minneapolis and Chicago sent prices down with a crash. The close was comparatively steady, but at a loss of ½c to 1c net.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

— BY —

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

There wasn't much of a show."

"Well, I'm not sure that you would do much better yourself over a post and rails," said the girl hotly. "It all depends what you are used to. I suppose you put him on Job. That brute would throw anyone but a broncho buster."

"Didn't throw Mr. Anstruther anyway."

"What! Did not Job get him off?" The girl's whole face lit up with pleasure and pride in her friend.

"Wasn't to be done unless that cayuse had shed his hide," said Jim quietly. "Your friend can ride," and if Jim put a little too much stress upon "your friend" the admission that he could ride was very hearty and generous for a cowboy who was jealous.

The girl knew it; knew, too, that horsemanship was Jim Combe's great gift, and for a moment her eyes dwelt seriously on that big loose figure in shape, that old friend who had taught her so much, and borne with her so long. If only he could speak English, if only he was not "so Canadian," would he not be the better man of the two?

A year ago, before she had been dazzled by the glamor and luxury of the Old Country, she would have been able to answer. Now she hesitated.

"After Combe's testimonial, which I appreciate, do you think I shall ever make a cowboy?" persisted Anstruther.

"Riding is not all. It may make a cowboy. I was thinking rather of a Western man."

"And your ideal of a Western man is a high one?"

"Just the highest. Your best Westerner is the best that can be made out of the best English material, tempered by such a life as man ought to lead."

They were getting into deep water, and Mrs. Rolt was not sorry to see Combe reappear, carrying a huge load of brush, boughs of young pines, which he waved one at a time through the smoke of the camp fire, until most of the rain drops had left them.

With these he vanished into the cabin, and after a long absence, returned to announce, "bed time, ladies. I'm afraid that your bed isn't what it might be, but with your slickers over that brush, and your blankets, it will be dry enough. Don't worry to turn out till I call you."

"Where are you going to sleep?"

"We'll sleep right here, if Mr. Anstruther don't mind, so as to be handy in case you want anything. Let's go and look at the horses, Anstruther. Good-night," and the two strolled away into the night whilst the ladies turned in.

CHAPTER III.

Cattle Thieves

"Are you men up?"

The mist wreathes of early morning, the very last of them, were slowly trailing away like dainty long-skirted dames from the hollow below the cabin, and the top half of the sun was showing through the timber which crowned the rise to the east of the camp, when Mrs. Rolt's head was protruded from the cabin door to ask the above question.

But no one answered her. The fire had been made up and the men's blankets were hung on the bars of the corral, but there was no other sign of life if you except a grey bird like a jay, who was making a careful inspection of relics.

"No one here, Kitty," Mrs. Rolt called back into the cabin. "Now is our chance to make our toilet, and of course that dear old Jim has everything fixed for us, basin and water and towels. Makes me feel quite 'to home' as he'd say."

"How do you know that it was Jim?"

"How do I know, you ungrateful girl? Hasn't Jim done these things ever since we came to the country? You don't suppose that your new chum would ever have thought of it?"

"I think that you are very hard on my new chum," said the girl, showing a delightfully rosy face in a mist of disordered hair.

"And I think that you are hard on your old—friend," retorted Mrs. Rolt.

She had almost said more than she had intended to, but caught herself up in time and buried her face healthily in the basin to hide her confusion.

"Polly."

"Well?" blowing the soapsuds out of her eyes and shaking the water from her wet hair.

"What an object you do look, dear. It's lucky your fringe is natural."

"Is that all you wanted to say, Miss? I am all natural and so were you before you went back to England. Now you must needs wear that thing!" and she pointed indignantly to a portion of Kitty's looks which that charming maiden carried in her hand."

"You must wear a toupee in England. How would you keep your head smart without one."

Mrs. Rolt held up her hands with a little gesture of horror.

"Spare me that word, Kitty, before breakfast at any rate. Smart! That is your gospel nowadays. Who said that you must be smart. I loathe smart people."

"You prefer—Jims."

"Yes, infinitely. Jim is a man."

"And Mr. Anstruther is not?"

"I did not say so. I don't know. He may be one in embryo, but he'll take a lot of making."

"Would you not rather that Jim had some of your pet aversion's 'making' in the English language for instance. Or, is it necessary to talk like a broncho buster to be a man?"

Polly Rolt hesitated. She did not want to lie. Indeed downright truthfulness was one of her occasionally painful characteristics, but she did not like to admit any blemishes in her favorite.

"Oh, well, fine English is as easy to put on, for a man like Jim, as your toupee is for you. A man must speak the language of a country if he wants to be understood in it. You used to understand Jim well enough before you went home."

"And now I don't. He seems to me to have changed. In some way he does not seem to be natural any more."

"I thought your complaint was that he was not sufficiently artificial—smart I mean."

"He isn't that, either. But hurry up. Here they come," and the two ladies whisked round the corner and into the seclusion of their cabin, to put on the last finishing touches.

A minute later they were congratulating Combe and Anstruther upon a fine buck which the two slung into the wagon.

"Who shot it, Jim? You, of course," asked Kitty, her dainty head as trim as if she had just parted from her maid, though Mrs. Rolt's fringe was still a trifle damp and straight.

"No, Mr. Anstruther killed him."

"And that is all I had to do with it," added Anstruther. "Combe found his tracks; I went right away from them, walked all over the country until I was beginning to grow tired. He told me to get my rifle ready at the foot of a hog's back, and as we peeped over, said 'shoot!' That is all I knew of our hunt."

"Jim had him picketted for you," said the girl.

Jim laughed. "Picketted to his feed, Miss Kitty. T'aint much of a trick to know where a buck would be this time in the morning."

"It is a trick you will owe your steak to, more than to my rifle," retorted Anstruther generously, and then between them they set about preparations for breakfast.

Before that meal was over, the Indian, Pretty Dick, came up with the horses.

"Plenty man track in the swamp," he said.

"Fairclough's boys been hunting, I expect," said Jim, "though it's a long way for them to come for deer meat. I saw their tracks. Didn't you notice them going up that first rise to our right, Anstruther?"

"No. I saw nothing. I was looking for a deer."

"Not Fairclaw crowd, Jim. Mika tum tum Chilcotins," put in Pretty Dick.

"What does he say?" asked Anstruther.

"Says he thinks they were Chilcotin Indians. Why do you think so, Dick?"

"Me see old camp. See plenty little sticks go this way," pointing south. "You come along, Jim, I show you.

The two went away together, and after a short absence returned. When they did so, even Kitty could see that something had gone wrong.

"What is it, Jim?" asked Mrs. Rolt.

"Chilcotins. Khelowna's band, I think."

"That doesn't matter, does it? Old Khelowna is all right. They won't bother us?"

"I suppose not. No, of course, they won't. Old Khelowna is as tame as a wet hen, but I don't like that," and he held out for inspection a small piece of fawn-colored hide.

Anstruther took it and turned it over in his hand. "A buck's ear," he said, in the tone of a squire who had found a rabbit wire. "The beggars have been shooting our deer, but you can't prevent them, can you? There's no game law in this free country."

"No, we can't stop them shooting deer and don't want to. There's plenty for all, but that's not a buck's ear. The Risky Ranch don't mark deer."

Anstruther saw then that the ear had been cut in a peculiar fashion, so as to make it swallow-tailed.

"Why, that is our mark, Jim," cried the Boss's wife.

"That's what I'm thinking, Mrs. Rolt. That's our mark sure. The Boss will have to keep an eye on those fellows. There's been a lot of stock missing lately."

"The Boss won't like that."

"No, nor I'm afraid you won't like what I'm going to say, but there's no help for it. We've got to give up our shoot and go back. We'll have to round up those cattle thieves right away."

Kitty's face fell. She had looked forward to her shooting picnic and hated to give it up.

"What should you do if we were not with you, Jim?" she asked.

"Follow them right away."

"But you couldn't take them all single-handed."

"No, nor don't want to, but I could see who they were for sure, and maybe get proofs against them."

"Why could we not go with you, Jim?" suggested Kitty. "It would be better fun than hunting. I'm a born detective."

The girl's bright face was all alive with excitement. The thought of fear had never yet entered her head. To tell the truth there are in British Columbia no terrible legends of Indian warfare to shake any one's nerves. There, the ordinary Siwash is a peaceable creature unless he is drunk, and then it is the white man's fault for making him so.

"Yes, it would be better fun, Miss Kitty, but not so safe. I think we had better all of us go back to the ranche and get the boys out, unless you think, Mrs. Rolt, that you could find the way back without me."

"I could try. Where is the ranche from here?"

"Come to the top of the rise and I'll show you."

Together they rode to the edge of the plateau, from which they could see bench upon bench of grey cattle land, bounded by low hills in the far distance, near which a depression suggested the bed of an unseen river.

"That's the Fraser and those are the Ground Hog mountains," Jim said, pointing to the hills beyond. "It will take you eight hours' riding to get to the river where those big red bluffs crop up. You know them. You can see the ranche from there. It's nine o'clock now."

"Then we could be in sight of the ranche by five."

"Yes, but there's no place where you could camp."

"Once we saw the ranche we shouldn't want to camp."

"There's no telling. It looks fine enough now, but so it did this time yesterday."

Certainly the day looked fine enough. The storm of the day before had cleared the air so that it was more brilliantly lucid than usual, and the long sloping lands radiant in the morning sunshine and sweet with the strong scent of the sage brush, were eminently provocative of a gallop.

Kitty's horse, not entirely innocent perhaps of his rider's heel, began to dance about and pull at his bridle as if he would drag the swaying girlish figure from the saddle.

Jim's eyes dwelt on her hungrily. That was how he loved to see her. Had he not taught her to ride when she was but the ten-year-old darling of the ranche, and was not the handsome beast who carried her now the colt on which he had expended such endless trouble whilst she was away in England?

It was hard to give up this holiday, and harder to leave her to spend it with that haw-haw young fool from the Old Country.

"I don't half like letting you go back by yourself, Mrs. Rolt," he said, "nor I don't like spoiling your pleasure, but those fellows will be out of the country before we can get on to their trail if I don't get a move on."

"Don't worry about us, Jim, we can get home all right, only we must not stand here talking any longer. What are you going to do with Pretty Dick?"

"Send him along with you with your ictas. I don't want him too near me. He is a Chilcotin himself, if he is half civilized. But hold on a minute."

He stood shading his eyes and looking far away to the west.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

HEAD Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

ACHE is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

GERMAN GIRL OF TO-DAY

In Leisure Time She Cultivates Some Special Taste

According to Madame Ola Alsen, who writes in a German weekly, alterations have taken place in the standard of taste of the young girl of today. While there exists, in Germany as elsewhere, a large number of young women whose inclinations must, perforce, be turned to wage-earning, there is a large number of girls of leisure who have time to cultivate their tastes, and opportunities of doing so, for the mere sake of the pleasure to be derived therefrom. Not every girl is compelled to spend her life in the rush and bustle of a business or a profession; luxury provides them with just as good chances of developing their individuality as wage-earning. Thus, the girl whose taste leans to sport may make that the aim of her life. She plays tennis, and delights in the fact that she is queen of the realm, enclosed within certain lines marked with white chalk on a court. That, however, is not sufficient for her; she goes, in due season, to climb mountains, to show her prowess with the skis, to gain the reputation of one who can manage the sails of a yacht with seamanlike skill. In the lecture-rooms there are girls who do not make culture a means to an end, who never dream of emulating the teaching women, the lecturers, or those who earn a living by the pen. They enjoy a special study for its own sake, and for the joy it brings to them. They travel alone in certain districts, but they do not go without chaperons into fashionable resorts. In couples earnest girls study painting in Rome, Florence, Holland, Brittany, etc., or listen to music at festivals at Bayreuth or elsewhere.

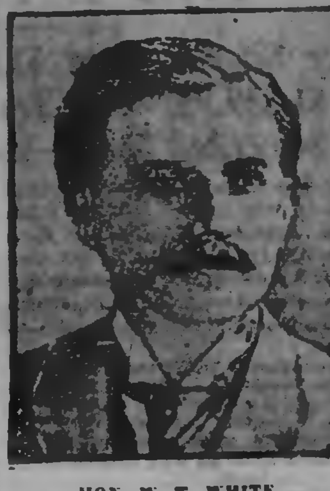
WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

HON. W. T. WHITE

When it came to the filling of the position of Minister of Finance, Cabinet-builder Borden must have recognised he was up against the big proposition of the programme. That he has chosen one of the best at command will be readily granted. Admittedly there was at hand good material from which to make a choice, but in selecting Mr. W. T. White his nominating smile fell on one who is acknowledged as being of the front row financial men of Canada today. His genius for organization has been in great demand by the public institutions of Ontario and now that the country has the command of his talents many financial reforms may be looked for.



HON. W. T. WHITE,
Minister of Finance for the Dominion.

A. R. CREELMAN, K.C.

Shining Railroad Legal Light

In railroad, and in Canadian business circles generally, it is recognised that in prevailing upon Mr. A. R. Creelman, K.C., to abandon his Toronto practice and transfer to Montreal as general Counsel for the company, the C. P. R. did just the proper thing for that big concern. It was at a critical time in the railroad's affairs; Canada was waking up in real live earnest to her possibilities, and with the country's prospects, were, of course, bound up to very great extent the future of the C. P. R. shareholders. Brilliant legal talent was on demand to help pilot the ship. The men at the head of affairs calculated they could not go far astray with Mr. Creelman as counsel, and the success with which he has carried out his duties since that time—duties that sometimes have involved millions of the Company's money, and the preparation of cases for argument before the highest tribunal of the Empire—was recognised a short time ago when Mr. Creelman was awarded the coveted distinction of being elected to the directorate of the C. P. R.

At the time of his appointment to Montreal, in 1901, he was partner in the firm of McCarthy, Osler, Haskin & Creelman, and had been in practice in Toronto for over a score of years.

A native of Richibucto, in New Brunswick, Mr. Creelman, was educated in the grammar school at that place, and at Chatham Academy, but he studied his law in Toronto. In the same year in which he entered the legal firm before mentioned namely in 1878, he married Margaret Cummings, daughter of the Rev. John Jennings, D.D., of Toronto.

Mr. Creelman never allowed himself to become entirely absorbed in the dry intricacies of the law, but took an active interest in many forms of sport, and was besides for four years in the Canadian militia. These outside interests he still preserves and he is a member of the leading social and sporting clubs in Montreal, as well as in Toronto and Ottawa.

GORDON C. WILSON

Mr. Wilson, who resigned his North Wentworth seat in the Provincial house to run against W. Oscar Sealy, member for Wentworth in the Commons, and who, more recently, to show his loyalty to the Conservative party, stood down to provide a seat for Hon. Frank Cochrane on his appointment as Minister of Railways and Canals, is referred to by his familiars as "one of Whitney's Fair-Haired Boys", and has a big bunch of real friends over many Canadian acres outside his own immediate political sphere of influence.

Local Conservatives strongly favored his return to Provincial politics, and the fact that he had recently been twitted with running away from front of Dr. McQueen in a local fight, was advanced as one strong reason for the surrender of Federal honors in addition to the desire to accommodate the new minister.

He is recognised as a born fighter; a progressive member of the local government who has done splendid service for his party, and for the public interests generally, and yet higher honors are set for him on the prophecy list.

Born about forty-two years ago in Dundas, Ont., Mr. Wilson is a general merchant of considerable success in his native county of Wentworth, and like many other Canadians who can claim a Scots descent is a man of sterling worth all the way through, and a platform debater of no mean standing. He is a strong advocate of municipal ownership, and during his two terms in the provincial legislature was an ardent supporter of the Ontario hydro-power project.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

You are safe in rejecting the article offered as "just as good."

ACCIDENTAL DEATH EVERY FIVE MINUTES

Every minute twenty-one persons are accidentally injured, according to figures compiled from Government statistics by the Preferred Accident. Every five minutes one person is accidentally killed. Over 11,000,000 are killed or injured yearly, about 30,000 each day. Five times as many are killed and injured each year as die from natural causes. More die and are disabled from pin pricks and other slight injuries than die from pneumonia. More are kept from work by accidental injury than are idle from lack of employment. One death in every twelve is due to accidental causes. A person is twice as liable to die from accident as old age.

The above points out the great necessity of every wage earner carrying Accident and Sickness Insurance to guard against calamities such as befall thousands each day. We will protect you against accidents and also every kind of disease for the sum of One Dollar per month. The best accident and sickness policy issued to-day by any Company.

BIFOCALS
— OR —
DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments.

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

WHAT IS YOUR FAMILY WORTH?

If your family is worth the best you can afford in house and food and clothes, is it not worth the best reading as well? And the best reading—best for boys and girls, best for men and women—is to be found in The Youth's Companion.

Of stories alone The Companion will print nearly 300 in 1912. With all the rest of the paper thrown in, and counting the glorious long serial stories, they cost the subscriber less than a cent apiece. Moreover, you will look long before you will find stories so varied and interesting: stories of coolness in the face of peril, strange adventures with creatures of the forest and the sea; moving stories of life's obscure heroism; stories breezy with good-natured humor, quaint and curious character sketches.

Now is the time to subscribe, for the new subscriber in Canada will receive free from the time his $2.00 is received all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911, containing the opening chapters of Ralph D. Paine's great serial story of the Boxer Rebellion, "The Cross and the Dragon." And there is the gift of The Companion Calendar for 1912, "On the New England Coast," litographed in ten colors and gold. Only $2.00 now to Canadian subscribers, but on January 1st, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.25.

ANOTHER GOOD MEETING IN MR. PECK'S INTERESTS; SATURDAY NIGHT RALLY

Conservative Candidate Assisted by Mr. W. H. Moore, K. C., Mr. Jas. Kendry, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P.

Mr E. A. Peck, was rewarded with another good rally at the Conservative committee rooms Saturday night, the meeting being of more than usual interest. The speakers were Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., who presided. Mr. Jas. Kendry, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., and Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P. of East Peterborough.

All the speakers' remarks were right to the point and the electors gave an attentive hearing throughout.

A PRESENTATION

It was the pleasant duty of Mr. Jas. Kendry to present to Mr. Burnham, on behalf of the Liberal-Conservative Association a gold-headed ebony cane in appreciation of Mr. Burnham's in winning West Peterborough for the Conservatives at the Dominion elections.

The few remarks which Mr Kendry had to make, were heartily endorsed by the meeting and the recipient made a neat acknowledgment.

MR W. H. MOORE, K.C.

"Looking back seven years," said Mr Moore, "we can scarcely believe the vast change that has been brought about by the Ontario Government. Previous to that we had as bad a government as ever existed in Canada, possibly the worst. It was not for good legislation so much as for keeping the Grits in power.

"Then Whitney came and attacked the Liberals at every vulnerable point and the people came to know him as an able man and also that the Liberals were no good. He had to show that the measures he proposed were good—he was honest—and if placed in power the measure would be put in force.

"What did he do? He promised to destroy the numbered ballot. He had agitated this year in and year out, but could not get the system overthrown because the government was using it with such power.

"But on coming into power and at the first session of the House he did destroy the numbered ballot. He had carried out all his promises and the people had the utmost confidence in him.

"We have a good government, a good Premier and a good candidate and it will be our own reckless folly if we don't give Mr Peck a majority of over 400," said Mr. Moore, in conclusion.

WANTED—PROOF.

Mr. Burnham, as the next speaker, took up the article in the Examiner of Saturday evening headed "A Little of What One Who Knows About Partizan License Administration." He characterized the insinuations that the Conservatives had made use of the license department for political purposes at the last election as a bigger than usual lie, given in the usual inimitable manner of the Examiner.

"There isn't a man in the riding who is not ready to deny the statement that that there was any attempt in any direction to influence any man who held a position under the government," said Mr Burnham. "We recognize the freedom of the people and we all stood to one side; there was no attempt.

"And this is in direct contrast to the Liberals when they used to 'sweat' the liquor men."

"That the insinuations were false and he defied the Liberals to give proof," was the challenge of the speaker. Proceeding, Mr. Burnham referred to the necessity of the government in making provision for the care of the consumptives. He also referred to the government's extensive work for the interests of the farmer.

THE CANDIDATE.

Speaking of the ravages of consumption, Mr. Peck, next introduced, held that some vigorous policy was needed to stamp out the evil. There were difficulties in the way of the government in dealing with the question. There was a limit to the amount to be expended without direct taxation to the people. Mr. Peck pointed out that the government had encouraged the people to provide places for the aged, poor and sick and for the consumptives, as a local undertaking.

Last year the Nicholls hospital had received a contribution of $1,500 and St. Joseph's hospital $1,000. It was much better for the people to erect these places themselves.

"The government may be persuaded to do more along this line," said Mr. Peck, "And I will do my best to help stamp out the disease."

THE WORKINGMAN

Mr. Hall and his friends had referred to the Whitney government as having neglected the workingmen. They had declared that the Premier had done nothing for the workingmen. But Mr. Hall knew better. Last session the Building Trades Protection Act was passed requiring that scaffolding and such erections must be carefully built and an inspector appointed by the city in which the work was done.

Another act passed provided for precautions being taken in the use of electricity in the mines.

Another speaker had said there was no provision of technical education for the workingmen. But provision had been made. The Boards of Education could provide technical schools or night schools for the workingmen and the government would assist.

Mr. Hall had the audacity to label the "Workmen's Compensation Act," the Whitney Compensation Act, while the fact was the act was passed in 1885 by the Liberal government and was said to be a fine measure. For nineteen years no changes were made by the Liberals and now Whitney was blamed by them for not giving a more comprehensive act.

It is only right to say, that Mr. Hall is just as energetic for the workingmen as I am. And I see no reason to doubt that he is sincere," said Mr. Peck. "The act is defective and I hope to have a more comprehensive and simple act passed." The Liberal leader had issued his address to the electors, but his platform had been covered by Mr. Whitney in his address. Mr. Rowell had suddenly discovered that his government had passed the taxation measure, said to be so unfair.

MR. THOMPSON.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., followed with a short speech in which he explained some of the splendid work accomplished by the government.

In 1910, he said, out of the revenue of $8,891,000 there had been expended for the people $8,888,000. The interests of the individual and not those of the corporation were being safe guarded.

The speaker gave a fine account of the work being done by the government in Northern Ontario, and concluded with an appeal for active assistance for Mr. Peck.

MR. M. O'BRIEN TOOK PART IN DEBATE

Mr Michael O'Brien of this city, who is attending St. Michael's College Toronto, took part in a debate at the college Thursday night, and was on the affirmative, the subject being, "Resolved that newspapers have more to do with moulding public opinion, than all other agencies." The negative was taken by Victoria College students, who won the decision by several points.

HEAVY FINES METED OUT

Retailer and Consumer of Liquor In Police Court

It was a day of big fines at police court Saturday, and the drain was deep in every case. Magistrate Dumble seemed determined to make an example of the whiskey fiends and after his summary disposal of today's budget of drunks, blacklisters etc., it would not be surprising, if a considerable improvement was noted.

The total amount of the fines netted $113.20.

INSPECTOR GOT BOTH

The first on the list was Charles Clarke, a blacklister found guilty of being under the influence of liquor. Charles will be minus now, $22.10, that would have been nice at Christmas time, to buy presents. The cause of his downfall in this instance was Albert Crouter, who was found guilty of supplying him with the liquor. The latter's fine was a little higher being $25, and costs, or $27.10 in all. License Inspector, Jos. Stewart was instrumental in bringing the offenders against the pledge, to light.

ROWDYISM PUNISHED

P.C. Meharry arrested three young men this morning in front of the White House, who were swearing and using profane language to the disgust of passers by. Liquor played a prominent part in the cause of their ungentlemanly conduct. In each case $5.75 was extracted from the guilty parties.

MORE BLACKLISTERS

Shortly after twelve o'clock this morning. A drunken fight at the corner of Wolfe and Aylmer streets caused a phone message to be sent in to the police station. P.C. Meharry responded and on reaching the spot, found three men. He listened for five minutes to the racket. The men were talking about one being stronger than the other. Their names were James Pilling, who was recently blacklisted, his brother, Edward, and a youth from Douro, named Robert Scully. He arrested the three of them and brought them to the police station. There he asked the lad, Scully, where he had secured the whiskey that he had been drinking. At the trial to-day, the officer stated that Scully, had told him that James Pilling had given it to him. P.C. Kidd who overheard part of the conversation, corroborated the statement.

The youth however in the box, denied absolutely that Pilling had given him any liquor, but related a yarn about a man at the C.P.R. station having given it to him.

As the evidence was not strong enough to convince His Worship that the youth was not telling the truth imposed a fine for the drunk charge alone.

Edward Pilling a brother of James and a blacklister also, was found guilty of being intoxicated, and it was another $20 penalty for him, bringing the grand total of fines up to the amount mentioned.

SOMETHING FOR THE YOUNG MEN

A sermon intended to give an upward stimulus and an inspiration to the young life of the city, will be delivered in George street Methodist church next Sunday evening by the pastor Rev. Mr. Couch. The remarks are intended to delve deep into the problems of a young man's life, and which will be treated in more than a superficial manner. Arrangements are being made for something new in the line of suitable and appropriate singing by the choir.

Last fall a certain man had a fat hog. People said to him: "What a lucky man, you are!" But his kin heard about his having a fat hog, and, by the time he killed it, four of them were living with him.

Most men are pretty deliberate when about their work, much as we say about Americans being overworked.

THEATRICAL

"THE TOWN MARSHAL"

"The Town Marshal," on Saturday night at the Grand, was seen by a good house. It is a first class attraction of the type of Way down East, and the Old Homestead, and has many a good laugh in it as well as a few tears. The pastoral comedy is increasing in favor, for city audiences like to get back to the country again, with its simple ways, and its homely humor. The company presenting the "Town Marshal" was capable, from every standpoint and the principals were especially efficient.

An International Dicker.

Brussels, Nov. 13.—Reports have been current for some time past that a grand repartition of Africa was under consideration by interested powers, to which some color has been lent by certain observations by the French Premier in the course of a recent speech. These have taken more definite form, and it is reported on good authority that the proposed scheme provides for the withdrawal of Belgium from the Congo, which will be divided between Great Britain, France and Germany.

In compensation, according to reports, Belgium is to receive the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg and territory along the left bank of the Scheldt, Holland to receive counterbalancing colonial concessions.

These reports will form the subject of an interpellation in Parliament, which will reassemble on Tuesday.

Not Our Hamilton.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—Some of the papers on Saturday fell into the error of saying that Bonar Law, the new leader of the Unionist party in Great Britain, attended school in Hamilton, Ontario.

As a matter of fact he attended the Gilbertfield school, near Hamilton, a town near Glasgow, Scotland.

DR. ARMSTRONG AT GEORGE ST.

Discourses on the Missionary Problem in Japan

Congregation Made Increase in Their Missionary Offerings

Yesterday will go down as a banner day in the history of George street Methodist church, establishing a record success in the annual missionary anniversary services, and marking the advent of increased enthusiasm amongst the entire congregation along the lines of more active and useful missionary effort. Both services were unanimously conceded to have been the most enthusiastic, largely attended and genuinely successful in the history of the church, and despite the desperately adverse weather conditions, the two services were most encouragingly attended. The presence of Rev. Dr Armstrong, of Toronto, who preached, and who through years of missionary labors in Japan, was admirably qualified to discourse on the great missionary problems of the day and more especially with Japan, was largely responsible for the notable attendance.

It was somewhat remarkable that Rev. Isaac Couch, the pastor of the church, on three previous Sundays had delivered strong missionary sermons discussing missionary problems and enterprises from a philosophical standpoint. So effective and popular did these addresses prove to be, that they most acceptably and fittingly paved the way for the sermons delivered by Rev. Dr. Armstrong yesterday, and had placed the congregation in a state of mind most favorable to profound impressions.

In dealing with the evangelization of Japan, the key-note of Dr. Armstrong's remarks was based upon the fact that the people of Japan were being led into Christianization by being able to penetrate the imagery of idols and false gods, and see that they merely represented spirits pertaining to God and uplifting things.

INCREASED OFFERING.

The missionary offerings yesterday were reported to be away in excess of previous contributions.

Dr. Armstrong is a cousin of Mr T. M. MacFadden, of this city.

Horse Thieves Busy.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—Horse thieves are greatly in evidence. Two fine horses were stolen within thirty hours of each other, and neither has yet been recovered.

On Saturday evening Paul McKellar, 294 Huron street, left his horse standing outside Adam's furniture store on Queen street, while he transacted business, and when he returned his horse and trap were gone. On the previous afternoon a horse and carriage were stolen from the corner of Bay and Wellington street. Two boys were seen with this outfit a short time afterwards, but the police have nothing further to work on than their description.

Mr. McKellar describes his horse as standing 16 hands, dark sorel, dark tail, white spot on forehead, left hind leg white and swollen. The animal weighs about 1,200 pounds. The buggy had rubber tires, red gear and dark body. The harness was light and mounted with brass and rubber trimmings.

Disabled Steamer Safe.

Shields, Eng., Nov. 13.—The British steamer Fairport, which it had been feared had foundered in a storm after leaving Hamburg on Nov. 1, was towed in here yesterday by three trawlers. She was picked up 260 miles off this port, without coal and drifting helplessly before a gale.

Walked 12,800 Miles.

Boston, Nov. 13.—With his arrival in Boston, 20-year-old Frank Hines of Halifax, has completed 12,800 miles of a 15,000 mile walk that he is making for a purse offered by the Halifax Yacht Club. Hines started on his trip in 1909. He expects to finish on Oct. 17, 1912.

Voted to Strike.

Magog, Que., Nov. 13.—By a practically unanimous vote employes of the Magog mill of the Dominion Textile Co. Saturday night voted to strike unless a ten per cent. increase of wages was granted them. Yesterday at another meeting it was decided to send a committee at once to Montreal to confer with the heads of the company before taking action. If the increase is not granted the men threaten to strike next Monday.

Arrested for Larceny.

Boston, Nov. 13.—Charged with the larceny of $10,100 from Mrs. Susan McDonnell of Amesbury, R. I., Freeman, formerly a Boston stockbroker, was held in $10,000 for trial when arraigned in the Superior Court in this city Saturday. Freeman left this city last spring. He was arrested in Toronto last week and brought back to this city Thursday night. Miss Alice Munroe, a Dorchester salesgirl, who disappeared at the time of Freeman's departure, returned from Toronto on Thursday night. There is no charge against her.

CAPT. JOS. H. PATTERSON

A Federal Veteran of 1866

Capt. Patterson, president of the Federal Veterans of 1866-70 Association, was born on Rideau Street, Ottawa, in the early forties, and at the age of 38 he went to the United States, where he lived for thirty years in New York being then in the manufacturing business. But before he left Canada the Fenian raids of 1866-70 called him to service with Her Majesty's troops, and he served through three campaigns, 1865-66-70.

In 1865, when 22 years of age, he went out with the Ottawa Rifles stationed at Prescott. In 1866 he was on the flying column and stationed at Cornwall, and in 1870 he was attached to Col. Forsyth's Ottawa Field Battery, in operations about Lake Huron.

Since the captain returned to Canada in 1902, he has lived in Ottawa, and is very well known in that city.

Mr. Kingman of Montreal is by way of business a member of the big group of Canadian gentlemen who handle financial propositions, and is recognized as a successful and reliable business man. To the general public he is, however, more widely known as one of the pillars of the Young Men's Christian Association, his active interest in which runs to a directorship of the International Organization, formed in 1854 in connection with the Associations of the United States and Canada. To Montreal belongs the honor of having opened the Y.M.C.A. movement in the Dominion. This was in 1851. Men of all faiths, even those with no religious professions whatever, are free to acknowledge the value of the good work being carried out by all departments of the body, and in connection with the effort in Montreal particularly, Mr. Kingman's name stands well to the front. He has been an active member from an early stage, and is looked upon not only as a conscientious worker, but as an able adviser in financial matters in which latter connection, his business capabilities admirably fit in.

ARCH. P. McKISHNIE

Mr. McKishnie, fiction Editor on the Canadian Century, issued from Montreal, is one of Canada's young writers who turns out his stories in a fashion that attracts and holds the interest of his readers from the initial letter to the final word.

If you are by nature a lover of the woods, lakes and the wild things which inhabit them. If you have a good outdoor story or hunting yarn to spin, Archie P. McKishnie is your friend. The well known writer and author of Gaff Linkum and "Love of the Wild" is Canadian in birth and sentiment and comes of that grand old Scotch Ontarian stock about which Ralph Connor has written so many stories. You do not meet the real McKishnie when he is at his office desk or in his study — tho' to be sure his personality impresses you right away with visions of the open and the nature he knows and loves so well — but trail with him thro' the tangle of bush grown uplands in buff shirt and corduroy; paddle with him along placid, mountain hemmed lakes; or lay for drenching chilly hours in the reed blinds, and you will know McKishnie aright. The love of the wild games of the forest and marsh is his to impart to the ready listener, and McKishnie's camp soon receives his initiation into the Grand Lodge of the Open Spaces.

ARCH. McKISHNIE

Journalist of Toronto and Montreal

He is a practical man in wood woe: he knows his animals, reptiles, fish and birds at first hand. Nature selected him as one of the few to whom she reveals her secrets.

There is nothing conservative about him. Tho' his first love is the woods and the creatures of the wild, he has an open heart for kindred subjects, and is well informed upon topics other than that of nature. His numerous magazine stories show that he has a grasp on a wide range of subjects, while his next book will be illustrative of spheres far remote from that of "the wild."

MISTLETOE FARMING

By A. Pitcairn

(Copyright by Publishers Press, Ltd.)

Century after century has passed since the mistletoe was held in an esteem bordering on veneration because of certain supposed virtues of healing attributed to it, yet the halo of former glory still clings to it, though softened by the mists of time. Indeed, so subtle and mysterious an attraction lies in these little green leaves and sticky white berries as to make them an indispensable adjunct to our Christmas festivities; something of the joyous element of Yuletide is lacking unless at least a few sprays smile forth from the gorgeous setting of red-berried holly, or lurk mischievously among the evergreens adorning the hall.

Walking along the streets of any of our large towns when that bustle of joyous expectation is in the air, denoting that Christmas preparations are in full swing, one is struck with the place of importance this little plant assumes for the time being. Crowds of people are to be seen at the stalls in the market-place, the shops of the greengrocers, or the modest barrows of the costermongers, making purchases in accordance with the size of their purses or the requirements of the household. From a purely sentimental standpoint one is therefore inclined to wonder why we allow this parasite, breathing so eloquently of ancient tradition, and at the same time so redolent of the mirth, laughter, and hospitality of the "merry homes of Canada," to owe its cultivation, for the most part, to foreigners.

To look at the matter from a practical point of view, why should this source of revenue be neglected by our farmers, who are so loud in their complaints over the depression under which agriculture is, at present labouring? The thrifty peasants of Normandy and Brittany, who supply Europe with mistletoe by the ton, assert that, though their apple crops suffer by the toleration of this parasite on the trees, it is to their advantage to sacrifice a portion of the fruit, as mistletoe pays better than apples.

Probably after the lapse of a few decades, when the effect of the scientific education in agriculture already in progress has eliminated the present-day class of farmers, their more intelligent successors, bent upon receiving from Nature a fuller measure of the bounty she is ready and willing to bestow, will consider it worth while to turn their attention to so remunerative a by-product.

In the meantime, the peasants of Normandy and Brittany are reaping a rich reward for their efforts to satisfy the enormous demand from across the old country, and they no doubt wonder why others do not more generally avail themselves of this pleasant source of profit. It is to Normandy that we must wend our way if we wish to see mistletoe-farming on a large scale. Several thousands of tons of mistletoe, cut from apple, poplar, and other trees, are shipped to English ports each Yuletide from Brittany, as well as from Normandy, and many steamers laden with nothing but mistletoe may be seen making their way to the shores of England. St. Malo, Granville, Havre, and Dieppe are the chief coast-centres for its exportation, the first-named port dispatching between three and four hundred tons every Christmas.

During the middle of December the ports all along the northern coast of France, from the Belgian frontier to St. Malo, are alive with busy throngs engaged in attending to these enormous consignments. Trains loaded with cases and crates full of the popular Christmas decoration are brought up alongside the ships waiting to receive their cargoes, and for over a week the regular traffic is seriously interfered with, so great is the importance and extent of the mistletoe trade. Even the smallest ports wear a different aspect during this period, traces of their leading commodity being visible everywhere. Yet, as in every other industry connected with agriculture, years of plenty are interspersed with harvests slender in yield, and the risks of the business are thus not inconsiderable.

Over-abundance, too, has its drawbacks, as was experienced on one occasion when the glutted market produced prices so low that the companies involved in the transport suffered somewhat heavily in consequence of the freight charge being higher than the receipts. Now the shipping and railway companies insist on the cost of carriage being guaranteed before they will accept the freight. Competition, too, has become keener, and has frightened off many speculators not satisfied with small profits, for naturally the increase in the number of mistletoe-farmers and merchants has considerably reduced the gains of all connected with the trade.

Among the French it is not at Christmas that the decking of the houses with mistletoe takes place, but at the New Year, when all Paris is occupied with offering and receiving floral tokens of friendship. By that time the mistletoe farmers of Normandy and Brittany are casting sorrowful glances at their apple-trees shorn of their wealth-producing winter burden, and Paris has to seek elsewhere for the mistletoe bough so much in request. Not many miles distant from the great gay city, a peaceful hamlet, nesting snugly at the foot of a picturesque hillside slumbers in tranquil solitude. It is a place on which the Parisian scarcely deigns to cast a thought except towards the close of the year.

CANADIAN WOMEN AND THEIR WORK

By Marjory MacMurchy

(Copyright by Publishers Press Limited, Montreal.)

CANADIAN WOMEN AS TEACHERS

Canadian women have taught successfully in such large numbers that the story of the Canadian woman teacher has become a commonplace. No one apparently has recognized what an interesting part has been taken in the development of Canada by the Canadian woman who has taught. Many interesting types of women teachers have been evolved in the short history of the teaching profession in Canada. There is the type of woman teacher of long ago in the Canadian towns; and the woman teacher of long ago in the country.

MISS MARJORY MACMURCHY

There is the private school mistress and the public school teacher, both of yesterday and to-day. There is the college graduate who becomes a teacher. The native born school mistress and the school mistress from Great Britain are two distinct types. There are all the traditions of the ladies' colleges from Halifax to Vancouver, such schools as the Halifax Ladies' College; Edgehill in Windsor, Nova Scotia; the Ottawa Ladies' College; private schools in Montreal such as that kept by Miss Edgar and Miss Cramp, a school of the new type; Havergal College for Girls in Toronto and Winnipeg; Miss Gordon's school for girls in Vancouver; and scores of others which might readily be named. Toronto's population is considerably increased about the middle of September every year by the incoming of hundreds of girls from all over Canada to attend one of ten or fifteen successful schools for girls. New ladies' colleges are being established all over Canada. One of the most recent is a ladies' college at Regina. Miss Bollert, a native of Guelph, until her appointment a member of the staff of Columbia University, has been chosen as head mistress of this new ladies' college. The sole occupation of the public school mistress used to be training little Canadian boys and girls. Now in the cities one of her chief duties is to teach foreign boys and girls what it is to be a loyal Canadian. The history of Canada would be a different story if it were not for the Canadian woman teacher.

Many Canadians can remember the days when any lady who was under the necessity of earning a living could begin a school for children if she so desired. In the last twenty years all this has been changed. The admonition to pass examinations has partially superseded the admonition to be good children; and the woman school teacher must have passed every possible examination herself before she can begin teaching. One would like to write a few words in praise of the school mistress of long ago before she is forgotten. She was a lady of dignity and consequence. She could be severe, and she was majestic when she was offended. She valued manners highly and goodness above all. We have undoubtedly advanced in many ways in Canada. But we lost a great deal when we lessened the consequence of the school mistress. Children should have a good measure of admiration and respect for their instructors. In Canada, it is not as easy as it used to be for children to penetrate their teachers. They may learn more out of books, but they do not cultivate as readily the wholesome respect for the knowledge of the individual who teaches them. There are hundreds of Canadian women who remember with respect which comes near to awe such women as Miss Harmon of Ottawa and Miss Haight of Toronto, naming two of the number of women who were once heads of girls' schools in Canada. Numbers of other names will readily come to the recollection of any Canadian. One may be mistaken in thinking so, but surely the old system of education used to allow of the growth of stronger individualities. A strong individuality is a fine quality in an instructor. There are two such individualities which can be taken as types of the Canadian women teacher at her best. Miss Janet Carnochan of Niagara, now retired from teaching and greatly interested in the collecting of historical material, is a native of the Niagara peninsula. She is as keenly interested in life to-day as she was when she began teaching. Her teaching brought out the individuality of her pupils. In the same way Miss How, Principal of the Elizabeth Street School in Toronto, which is now known officially and popularily as The Hessie How School, is an admirable example of the strong individuality of a teacher. Miss How has accomplished more practical work for social reforms than, perhaps, any other Canadian. Her chief aim is to make the best of every boy and girl who passes through her hands. She does not merely mean to make the best of them. She makes the best. The biographies of these two women are examples of the splendid story of the Canadian woman teacher.

MISS CARRIE DERICK,
Professor of Botany

There are a number of Canadian women who have achieved a national

Miss HURLBATT,
Late Principal
Royal Victoria College, Montreal

reputation as teachers. Miss Harriet Johnston on the staff of the Toronto public schools has been elected more than once at the head of the poll as a member of the Advisory Council to the Minister of Education for Ontario. Mrs. James L. Hughes, wife of Mr. Inspector Hughes of the Toronto public schools, who came from the United States to be head of the public school Kindergartens in Toronto, was elected President of the Dominion Teachers' Association as representative of the Kindergarten section. Miss Eliza Ritchie of Halifax was instructor in philosophy, Wesley College, Massachusetts, and then Associate Professor of philosophy in the same institution, until her resignation in 1900 when she returned to Canada. Many Canadian women teachers hold responsible positions in the schools and colleges of the United States. Dr. Annie Marion Maclean is professor of sociology in Adelphi College, Brooklyn. Miss Florence Keys is at Bregn Macor and Miss Cummings on the staff of Vassar. Miss Laird is at Mount Holyoke. In Montreal Miss Carrie Derick was made assistant professor of botany at McGill University in 1906. Miss Hurlbatt is Warden of the Royal Victoria College for women in connection with McGill. Miss Cartwright is the Dean of St. Hilda's the women's college in connection with Trinity College, Toronto. Miss Addison is the Dean of Annesley Hall, the residence for women in connection with Victoria College, Toronto. Miss Annie Lair is the head of the Domestic Science department of the University of Toronto. In every instance named, as well as in the case of names still to be mentioned, the Canadian teachers who hold these positions are women of character, ability and high attainments. Standards have advanced rapidly and are still advancing. To be at the head of a girls' college, or in charge of a residence for women in connection with a Canadian university, means that the woman who holds the position stands high in her profession, not merely in scholarship, but in character.

Three women teachers were elected to the Senate of the University of Toronto within the last year. These three, Miss Balmer and Miss Lawler of the Harbord Collegiate Institute, Toronto, and Miss Charlotte Ross of the Margaret Eaton School of Expression are representative graduates of the University of Toronto. They are native Canadians and received their early training in the Toronto schools. Miss Curlette, head of Westborne School, Toronto, and Miss Edgar, who with Miss Cramp has charge of a girls' school in Montreal, are also typical instances of the Canadian woman teacher who has been trained in Canada. Miss Knox, head of Havergal College, Toronto and Miss Jones, head of Havergal College in Winnipeg; Miss Hurlbatt of the Royal Victoria College, Montreal, and Miss Smith, Lady Principal of the Church School for Girls, Edgehill, Windsor, Nova Scotia, are instances of the woman teacher in Canada who has been trained in England. Girls' schools and colleges all over Canada are engaged in fitting Canadian girls for domestic and social life. Some of these schools are introducing the ideals of social service to their students. Canada has always been potentially a wealthy country. But in a few years the graduates of these schools will have opportunities given to them whether they will or no of filling arduous social positions. The girls' college has been planned to train girls who will be able to fill such positions. On the other hand, the public schools, high schools and collegiate institutes are more or less designed to train girls who will become teachers or who will fill business positions. The training of the public secondary schools is for use in the business world. It is impossible naturally to draw a hard and fast line. The graduate of a girls' college may become a teacher, and the girl who is trained in a collegiate institute in a few years may be one of the leaders among the women of a new prairie town. But generally speaking, the public school training is more rigorous and the private school training more decorative. It would be impossible to name one out of every ten private schools and colleges for girls in Canada and it would be more impossible to call the roll of women teachers who are engaged as teachers in the primary and secondary public schools of Canada.

The average woman teacher in Canada is conscientious, devoted, able, helpful and optimistic. She could hardly be a Canadian if she were not optimistic. But it is of the nature of the teaching profession to make its followers a trifle over-anxious, perhaps, than the woman teacher in some other countries. She is, possibly, less precise than she used to be. It is no longer so necessary for a teacher to impress her class with the idea that she keeps all the knowledge of the world in her mind. A teacher in the twentieth century is allowed to forget a few facts occasionally without losing her authority as a teacher. Canada owes a great deal to her women teachers. Sarah Maxwell, the heroine of the teaching profession in Canada, said that she could not leave her little children and so she died with them. Many of the women teachers of Canada would be able to do this willingly if the necessity arose for the sacrifice. The great majority of these women teachers do spend their lives for the children who attend their daily classes.

CANADIAN WOMEN ARTISTS

By Marjory MacMurchy

The Canadian women who is born with a gift for expressing beauty and truth by means of the art of painting has several conditions to face which must inevitably be met by her. As she grows up she will long above all things to go away to the old countries of the world where she may study great art and learn how to express for others what she sees herself. If she returns to Canada, she will miss the atmosphere of art and love of art in which she has been at work while studying abroad and which is of indescribable assistance in her work.

Among the Canadian women who paint pictures there are twenty at least, and possibly quite a few more, whose work is very interesting and characteristic of the country in which it is produced. There is nothing markedly feministic nor extreme about the work of Canadian women painters. It is just such work as shows that in ability and comradeship the men and women artists of Canada are growing equally and harmoniously towards the development of a native school of art.

Two names will occur at once to everyone as possibly the most representative among Canadian women painters. Miss Florence Carlyle is a grand-niece of the famous Sage of Chelsea, Thomas Carlyle. Doubtless she has walked along the Thames Embankment and has studied the aspects of the river as Whistler did and has stopped to look at the statue of her great-uncle. Many artists visit the Thames, but this Canadian artist is the only one to posses such an interesting association with old Chelsea. Miss Carlyle is a native Canadian. Her father was Public School Inspector of Woodstock, Ontario, and it is in Woodstock that Miss Carlyle now lives after some years spent abroad and a lengthy sojourn in New York where many of her artistic successes have been achieved. The Princess Louise when in Canada was attracted by the promise of the young artist. She was later sent to Paris in company with Paul Peel and studied in the Julien Atelier. Miss Carlyle first exhibited at the Paris Salon, 1893. She afterwards entered the studio of L'Hermété. She was elected an Associate of the Royal Canadian Academy in 1897. The statement might be made at this point as well as anywhere else that women artists in Canada are permitted only to be Associates of the Royal Canadian Academy. A change might readily be made in the constitution of the Academy which would admit women to full membership. The clever brilliance of Miss Carlyle's work is full of sunshine and color. She delights in striking, often exquisite, poses. A portrait of her father and "A Lily of Florence" are two of Miss Carlyles' most recent canvases. Her work shows great strength of character and a keen joy in the beauty of life.

Miss Laura Muntz is also an Associate of the Royal Canadian Academy. Of English ancestry like many Canadian artists, Miss Muntz was brought up on a Muskoka farm. She was over twenty before she began the study of art in Toronto. Her education was continued in Holland, Paris and Italy. She studied in the Colarossi studio, and her work was admitted to the Salon five times. On her return to Canada Miss Muntz took a studio in Toronto and painted and taught for several years. Her relatives live in Toronto, but Miss Muntz as far as her art was concerned found conditions in that city unsatisfactory and moved to Montreal where she has found more nearly the response which her art deserves. She is busy with many commissions, and, possibly as a consequence her work does not often appear at art exhibitions. Her child portraits are delightful and are much valued both by artists and public. The artist's pictures of motherhood show her strongest qualities. Her work is human, strong, and brilliant. Miss Muntz as an artist is individual, and wonderfully clever. She is engrossed in her work and has great capacity for industry.

Mrs. Mary Hiester Reid, wife of Mr. George A. Reid, more than once President of the Royal Canadian Academy and the Ontario Society of Artists, is also an Associate of the Academy. She was born in Reading, Pensylvania, and studied at the Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia. After her marriage to Mr. Reid, both artists studied abroad for some years. They have lived in Toronto since 1886, except during the summer months which are spent in Onteora, New York State, or travelling abroad. Mrs. Reid was first known as a painter of flowers. To-day her work is almost wholly in landscape, studies of twilight, autumn, and moonrise, poetical and full of soft repose. It is evident that the painter waits upon the moods of nature. It is in landscape work, if one may make a prediction, that the Canadian painter is most likely to form an influential school of native art. Miss Mary Wrinch is also a landscapist. Among the younger women artists, she shows strong individual qualities, seeing vividly and painting as she sees. Her studies are often from the woodland aspect of the Muskoka country. But she not infrequently paints some panoramic view of fields and woods with water. One would judge that she delighted both to experiment and to follow up painting problems with greater persistence than is found in the average painter. Miss Wrinch was born at Kirby-le-Soken, Essex, England, studied with Mr. G. A. Reid at the Toronto Art School and Mr. Walter J. Donne at the Grosvenor Life School, London, England. She is a member of the Ontario Society of Artists and several of her pictures have been purchased for the Dominion Art Gallery and the Ontario Provincial Gallery.

Miss Harriet Ford was born at Cobourg, Ontario. She gave much time to study and work abroad and returned to Canada recently, taking a studio in Toronto two or three years ago. A good part of her year, however, is spent in work on the Continent and in England. Her paintings secure attention, particularly from artists. Last winter at an exhibition in Toronto she shewed some fifty studies in water colors, mainly of subjects taken from European cities in which the interpretation of architecture and the decorative treatment were particularly delightful. Mrs. J. S. Dignam of Toronto studied at The Art Students' League, New York, and in France, Italy and Holland. She has exhibited at American and European exhibitions and is a member of the New York Art Club and the International Art Club Association of Canada and has given a great deal of time to furthering the work of this society, the aim of which is to foster interest among Canadian women in art, more especially native art. Mrs. McGillivray Knowles has begun to paint only within the last few years. She is a musician, but her intimate association with her husband in all his work has led to her becoming a painter as well. Mr. Knowles has been her only instructor. Her work is chiefly in landscape and shows remarkable accomplishment in a short time. Mrs. Ivan Wright (Miss Edith Stevenson) was born in Ohio, attended school in Toronto and received a few months' instruction from Mr. J. W. L. Forster. A New York art dealer was so favorably impressed with the promise and originality of Miss Stevenson's portraits that he gave an exhibition of her work. Within the last two years she has settled at Thornhill, a few miles north of Toronto, and is at present executing an order for a number of portraits for a Hall of Fame in connection with a law library in the court house of Youngstown. Mrs. Wright paints rapidly. Her work is impressionistic and delicate and she has decided gifts as a colorist.

A number of the women artists of Canada display unusual ability in painting portraits of children. Several of these already named have painted delightful child-portraits. Among other women painters who have this gift should be named Miss C. S. Hagarty, whose work shows a fine appreciation of her subjects, Miss Henrietta Shore, a clever young painter, and Miss Beatrice Hagarty who studied with Miss Muntz and when abroad with Castelucho, a well-known Spanish painter. Mrs. W. R. Johnston of Toronto is a clever painter of unusual gifts. Miss Estelle Kerr is an illustrator of ability. She writes for several Toronto weeklies and illustrates her own work with success. Miss Kerr studied in New York, Paris, Italy and Holland. She is the author of "Little Sam in Volendam", and recently has completed the illustrations for a book of kindergarten stories. The work of Miss Helen McNicholl of Montreal is remarkably successful. She is a native of Toronto, studied with Mr. William Brymner of Montreal and at the Slade Art School, England. As an exhibitor both in Canada and Great Britain her pictures invariably attract attention. Miss Mattice of Hamilton is industrious and her work shows improvement.

Miss Sidney Strickland Tully, an Associate of the Royal Canadian Academy and daughter of Kivas Tully, Government consulting architect and engineer, whose mother was a niece of the gifted Strickland sisters, will be greatly missed by the artists of Toronto. Her death occurred only a few months ago. Her training was begun in Toronto, and for more than twenty-five years she exhibited pictures in Canada, London and Paris. She studied at different times with Constant and at the Julien studios. For long periods she lived abroad and had a studio at Chelsea. Her home however, was in Toronto, where an exhibition will be held of her paintings in November. She was a member of the Ninety-One Club, a society of women artists in London. Her work included landscape and portraits. One of the best known of her pictures, "The Twilight of Life" will be presented, by the artist's wish, to the Art Museum of Toronto.

Two women painters from England have lately come to continue their work in Canada. Miss Josephine Streatfield took a studio in Toronto in 1909. Her pictures of children are very charming. Her work is at once strong, simple, full of character, and very attractive. This last quality arises possibly in the main from the fact that the artist possesses great clarity of vision. She sees her picture clearly and is not bewildered by facts extraneous to her conception of the subject. Miss Ida Lovering took a studio in Toronto last year and within the last few months has removed to Ottawa. She is a native of London,

MISS ELIZABETH A. McGILLIVRAY KNOWLES, O.R.C.A.

England, and was trained in the schools of the Royal Academy of Arts. One of her studies which had gained a medal presented by Queen Victoria was also purchased by the Queen. Miss Lovering has exhibited subject pictures frequently at the Royal Academy, and in Paris, New Zealand, Boston, Ottawa and Toronto. Her chief work, however, has been in portrait painting. She has painted portraits of a number of well-known Canadians since becoming a resident of Canada.

There are several distinguished Canadian women painters whose permanent residence is in England. Among these are Mrs. Stanhope Forbes whose work is greatly admired and often appears at Canadian exhibitions and Mrs. Pemberton Beaulands, a native of British Columbia who has painted a number of beautiful studies of the scenery near Victoria. Mrs. Gertrude Spurr Cutts and her husband, also a painter, are at present spending two years at work in Cornwall, England, where there is a large art colony. Mrs. Cutts was trained in Scarboro, her native town, and at the Lambeth School of Art. She came to Toronto in 1890, and was made a member of the Ontario Society of Artists and later an Associate of the Royal Canadian Academy. Many of her pictures are owned by private collectors in Montreal and Toronto. The work of a young Winnipeg artist, Mrs. Mary R. Hamilton, is attracting favorable notice in Paris. Mr. E. A. Taylor in "The American Colony of Artists in Paris", which was published in The International Studio for August of this year writes thus of Mrs. Hamilton's work: "The work, too, by Mary R. Hamilton, is personal and distinct. The assertion that women cannot do the work of men has lost much of its too long recognized truth, as every day finds them fulfilling spheres with greater ability, making our little arrogance less evincive and in art today we find when women painters realize their own God-given gifts that man's greatness outsteps them only in space and in muscular equipment. I do not say Mrs. Hamilton sides with me; her work is my only proof, and with her retiring disposition I doubt if I should have seen [illegible] had I not first been attracted by a Venetian study bearing her name in Scotland and afterwards by a group of water colors and oils in the Salon of the 'Independents' and another in the Salon des Beaux-Arts. She had a few private lessons in Canada and a more prolonged study under Skarbina in Berlin, with occasional application in Paris, Venice and Holland; there is little else to say save the old story of the earnest seeking to find one's self in one's own thought and belief and the varied experience that expresses itself ultimately. Her work in oils is strong and sincere, but to me her water colors make a special appeal with their quiet charm.

WHO'S WHO IN CANADA

SIR HENRY M. PELLATT

Imperialism has been the key to all Sir Henry M. Pellatt's public activities. He is an ardent believer in the connection of Canada and the Mother Country being as close as possible. It was an act of splendid patriotism for him to take over his regiment the Queen's Own Rifles from Toronto to England. Nothing could have created a more friendly feeling. The regiment was a means of fostering better relations between the great mass of the people of Great Britain and those of Canada. An appeal to these is much stronger than to the cold minds of lawyers and parliamentarians. It is from the middle and lower classes in England, that Canada draws her best class of settlers. The way to get them into the Dominion is to interest them in Canadians and Canadian Institutions. There is no stronger means of attracting notice than by means of soldiery. Sir Henry Pellatt realized this. He has aided Canada more than if he had personally brought over a thousand of the most desirable of British settlers. To-day he is Commandant of his regiment after having successively passed through each of the commissioned ranks. There is no stronger supporter of the militia in Canada than Sir Henry Pellatt. He has always shown a keen interest in all their activities. In 1897 he went over to England as Major of the Queen Victoria's Jubilee Contingent and acted as Commander of the Canadian Contingent at the Coronation of the late King. At this period he took over with him to the Old Country the Bugle Band of the Queen's Own at his own expense.

SIR HENRY M. PELLATT

It is stated that Sir Henry will be the next Canadian High Commissioner in London, — a post for which he is highly fitted.

Col. Sir Henry Pellatt was born in Toronto in 1860. He attended Upper Canada College in that city. A professional life did not appeal to him. Therefore at fifteen years of age he entered the employment of his father. Later he formed a partnership with him, the firm name being Pellatt & Pellatt. Sir Henry has always interested himself largely in financial and industrial corporations. At present he is the executive of many large companies including the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company the Dominion Iron & Steel Co., Toronto Electric Light Co., etc.

SIR SANFORD FLEMING

Sir Sanford Fleming, K.C.M.G., LL. D., M.I.C.E., and Chancellor of Queen's University, has achieved fame as an engineer. He constructed the Intercolonial Railway through the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Quebec, and was for some years Engineer-in-Chief of the C. P. R. He has taken a special interest in the movement for establishing the Pacific Cable, and a Pan-Britanic Telegraph Service. He has published several articles on The New Time Reckoning.

Dr. Grenfell's Appointment.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell has been appointed medical adviser to the Hudson Bay Company. This is taken to mean that in future the Northern fishermen are to be treated more fairly in their trade relations. Dr. Grenfell has now brought his co-operative stores into touch with English business houses, so that goods for his people in Labrador will be brought at a saving of middleman's profits, and English fish merchants are to take their supplies direct.

HIGHER CRITICISM.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—When one accepts the Darwinian hypothesis of evolution and his theory of monkey born men, he must at once reject God's record of the creation of man, in His own image, as found in that seed plot of revelation, the Book of Genesis. Mr. Editor, allow me to give your many readers a confession and personal testimony of a scholar in reference to his experience with higher criticism. Prof. J. J. Reeves, of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, Texas, writing in "The Fundamentals," says: "The purpose of this article is to state in a very brief way the influences which led me to accept certain views of the higher criticism, and after further consideration to reject them. . . I saw that the whole movement with its conclusions was the result of the adoption of the hypothesis of evolution. My professors had accepted this view and were thoroughly convinced of its correctness as a working hypothesis . . . But more consideration convinced me that the little truth in it served to sugarcoat and give plausibility to some deadly errors that lurked within. That this theory of evolution underlies and is the inspiration of the higher criticism goes without saying. . . As it is transparently clear that the Bible, on the face of it, does not correspond to it. To do this they must deny point blank the claims and statements of most of the Bible writers. . . A preacher who has thoroughly imbibed these beliefs has no proper place in an evangelical Christian pulpit. If these views should ultimately prevail, Christianity will be set aside for what is called the New Religion, which is no religion, but a philosophy.

Mr Editor, the above testimony of a scholar against the pernicious teaching of so-called higher criticism is well worth passing on to your many thousand intelligent readers.

Thank heaven, the critics have not got that monopoly of scholarships which they so loudly boast of.

Yours, etc.,

JOHN CARLISLE.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

There will be something doing in Peterboro for the next couple of weeks. First there is the membership campaign to be carried on by the Y.M.C.A. and secondly there is the provincial election. At least Mr. Peck and Mr. Hall will be here and there and everywhere looking for votes, but the boys, well, they intend to scare up every male over 12 years old in the city of Peterboro. Just think over 100 boys, surely they can make things more fast.

The Y.M.C.A. must have 189 new members, before November 29, 1911, and intend to get them and as many more as possible. Competition is the life of trade. It's the life an election we all know. It is also going to be the life of this membership campaign. The senior members under that old and experienced leader, Doug. Loomis have sworn to do battle royal with the intermediate members, led by W. Hastie, for new members. Of course the seniors do not want the "Kids" to beat them and the "Kids" would like awfully well to get a fall on their elders, the seniors. Anyway there is going to be something doing now, just watch the Y.M.C.A. membership grow for the next couple of weeks.

NEWS FROM THE MISSIONARIES

Rev. R. Burns of Omemee Receives Letter From Daughter

The anxiety of friends of Canadian missionaries in West China may be allayed by the news received in a letter which has just come to Rev. R. Burns, of Omemee, from his daughter, one of the Methodist missionaries in Chengtu. The letter is dated September 21, and states that they could not get out telegrams from that city except by messengers to Chungking, and until recently it was impossible to get messengers who would risk the undertaking as they might be intercepted and robbed or killed.

The writer says that the missionaries were ordered down the river but could not get away before the gates were shut. They are all safe and well, living within fine missionary compound, most of them in the new hospital building, a hundred and twenty-six of them in all.

With the Methodist missionaries there were in the compound the missionaries of the China Island, both from inside and outside the city, the Methodist Episcopal, and the Baptist missions, four men who sell tobacco in the city, and men teaching in the science and English departments of the Chinese University, all English-speaking foreigners.

The telegraph wires were cut, the writer said, for 771 li from the city. Bands of robbers and bandits were running wild, but no foreigners had suffered, though Mr. Manley, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, had been attacked by a mob in the chapel, but escaped by knocking out part of the wall.

Do you know of a nastier noise than a mule makes when he is lonesome and calls to his friends?

15 PARTRIDGE AND ONE DEER

Mr. Harry Hayes Had Good Luck at Haliburton

After a ten day sojourn in the wilds of Haliburton in quest of deer and game Mr. Harry Hayes, returned to the city on Saturday evening, pleased with his experiences and with the satisfaction of having bagged one deer and fifteen partridge. Harry went out to join his father, who is in charge of a camp of thirty men, at present engaged in the construction of a dam between White Lake and Devils Lake, and it was while driving from Kinmount, the nearest station to the camp, that he was fortunate to secure his monarch of the woods.

One of the men from the camp drove to the Kinmount station to meet Mr. Hayes and it was while the two were covering the intervening ten miles about five o'clock in the evening, that two fawns were discovered standing by the side of the road. Hastily jumping from the rig and feeling exerted to a considerable degree, Harry dropped upon one knee, and drew a hasty bead on the yet, unalarmed animal. His aim was good, and the fawn fell dead, shot through the flank. Feeling greatly elated with his early success, Harry and his companion threw the piece of venison into the rig, and drove on to the camp, where their arrival and the deer were warmly welcome. Divided among thirty men the meat on that fawn according to Harry's statement did not last very long.

Shortly after they were located in camp, Hayes and another man were out on the lake, in a canoe. Hearing a shout from the shore, they noticed one of the camp hands gesticulating excitedly and shouting something which they were unable to make out. They were soon enlightened and rather disagreeably so, by hearing a shot ring out a few minutes later, and another man in a canoe paddled up and began pulling a deer out of the water. The man on the shore had been endeavoring to direct their attention to the animal which was swimming along in the wake of their canoe, about twenty-feet in the rear, and scarcely discernible, except by the nose of the beast protruding above the water. Their chagrin was deeply felt needless to state.

The grub supplied to the boys in the camp was wholesome and plentiful.

Everything was dished out in generous quantities, and nothing was to good for the camp.

Harry was not favorably impressed by Haliburton from a sociable standpoint and to use his own words, "you scarcely see a farm-house or a shack less than five miles apart."

FOUR EMPTIES LEFT THE TRACK

New Cars Could Not Make the Curve Properly

A slight delay in traffic was caused on the G.T.R. about half a mile east of Havelock station at 7.30 last night. While a double header freight was making the curve, four empty cars were derailed, caused by several new cars, which did not have enough friction, and could not make the curve properly. A couple of the cars were somewhat damaged, and it was necessary for the auxiliary to go down and clear up the track.

POWERS MAY INTERVENE IN CHINESE REVOLUTION

Probability of Action Being Taken Discussed at Legations – Great Suffering in Store for Chinese During the Coming Winter.

Pekin, Nov. 14.—Yuan Shi Kai, the last prop of the throne, has reached Pekin at last. He came yesterday accompanied by 2,000 troops, and was warmly greeted by the administration. In honor of his arrival an edict was issued appointing him commander of all the troops in the vicinity of the capital. Great efforts are being made to induce him to accept the Premiership, but he has given no definite answer as yet.

The opinion is held at the legations that there are serious complications in store for China, and greater sufferings than she has yet endured. The prospects of foreign intervention by other powers than Russia and Japan are beginning to be discussed. Winter is expected to terminate the massed movements of troops, but there will be greater death roll through famine. The people in the central section are already supplementing their food with the bark of trees.

The Government continues gathering Manchu recruits at Pekin, but soon will be unable to meet the payments. It is not believed here that the Chinese can mobilize a large enough army about Pekin to venture an attack, but the Government's inability to collect revenues from a single provincial capital is almost certain sooner or later to bring about capitulation.

A report reached here yesterday that 2,000 Imperialists at Hankow have joined the rebel ranks, and that the remaining Imperial gunboats at that port have gone over to the rebels. According to a consular report the Hankow consuls, with one exception, at a meeting recently held there, agreed that it is impossible for the Imperialists to capture Hanyang or Wu Chang. They therefore discussed the question of asking the Government to withdraw the Imperial troops to the north because when the commissariat is empty they are likely to commit depredations and endanger the foreign concessions.

Certain military attaches at Pekin consider that the Imperial troops at Hankow will be lost to the Government unless brought back immediately, but the Government may prefer to leave all but the Manchus there, not undertaking the cost of the risk of transporting them back to the capital.

The November Boxer indemnity has not been paid and the December indemnity will likewise be defaulted. Even should the Government be able to recover the five provinces immediately surrounding the capital, the financial administration cannot be reorganized before defaults of other debts besides the indemnities occur, and it is feared that intervention for the collection of pledged revenues cannot be averted.

Gen. Shao Erh Hsun, the viceroy of Manchuria, who has been elected president of the province under the declaration of autonomy, has sent a message to the Government that he was unable to oppose the Mukden assembly's declarations, which are: 1. That the revenues shall be retained by the province, which will have no connection with the Pekin Government, old or new; 2, that the province will assist neither the Chinese nor the Manchu soldiers; 3 that the Government will afford the fullest protection to foreigners.

The rebels took over Che Foo quietly yesterday. Gen. Shang Shao Tsen, the commander of the Lanchau troops, has arrived at Tien Tsin with a body guard of thirty men. He is lodging in the foreign concessions.

Demands Regent's Abdication.

Shanghai, Nov. 14.—Wu Ting Fang, who recently received the appointment of secretary of foreign affairs, under the proposed reform administration, has telegraphed a long address to Pekin urging the regent, Prince Chun, to abdicate. He points out that since the Emperor's edict admitting responsibility for present conditions and promising reforms, there has been an atrocious massacre, and ten provinces have severed themselves from the throne without a struggle.

Wu Ting Fang adds that nothing but the adoption of Republicanism can secure peace and stop the shedding of blood.

Rumors are current that Admiral Sah's fleet at Hankow has either surrendered or been overcome by the revolutionaries.

Warships Desert.

Shanghai, Nov. 14.—(10 a.m.)—Thirteen vessels of the Imperial fleet went over to the revolutionists this morning, hoisting the white flag between 9 and 10 o'clock. One of the largest cruisers steamed up the river past the settlement and dipped the white ensign in salute to the foreign warships, to which none of them responded.

Steamer Ashore.

Kingston, Nov. 14.—The steamer Keystorm ran ashore near Coteau loaded with grain from Port Colborne to Montreal. The terrible gale put her out of her course. Tugs were sent to the scene. Three o' the Montreal transportation Co.'s barges broke away from the tug Bronson and ran ashore near Howe Island.

An Old Church.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 14.—The one hundred and seventeenth anniversary of Lundy's Lane Methodist Church was celebrated last night by an old-fashioned tea meeting. The church was one of the first in the Niagara district.

Governor of Mining School.

Kingston, Nov. 14.—The Ontario Government has appointed Colin MacPherson governor of the School of Mining to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. R. V. Rogers.

Not Sure It Was Whisky.

St. Catharines, Nov. 14.—Police Magistrate Campbell yesterday refused to convict Patrick Donnelly, proprietor of the Geneva House, of selling liquor without a license, because the evidence offered by the crown was that of Robert Brown, a colored man, who could not swear positively that he had been supplied with whisky, though he claimed it smelled and tasted like it. The case was not dismissed, as the magistrate wished to consider it.

In addition the crown offered the evidence of Chief Green and Sergt. McCarthy, who claimed to have searched Donnelly's house, finding a hiding place beneath the dining-room floor, containing six bottles of whisky, and supplying evidence of having contained a much larger quantity. John D. Neelon, a local wholesaler, was also forced to reveal that during the past month Donnelly had purchased three gallons of whisky, besides three dozen bottles in case.

It is possible that the crown will reduce the charge to that of keeping an unlawful quantity of whisky on the premises.

Fell From Scaffold.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—William Presser, a laborer employed by A. Gardner Contracting Co., fell from a scaffold at the Reinhardt Brewery, on Mark street, at 3.35 p.m. Saturday, receiving serious injuries.

Presser was working on the construction of a new elevator shaft. He fell 38 feet, breaking two ribs, one of which pieced his lung. He was taken to the General Hospital in the police ambulance. He lieves on Gowan avenue, and is married.

By Passive Resistance.

London, Nov. 14.—Ulster Unionists are forming a net work of organisations for strenuous resistance to home rule. They have no idea of taking up arms, but are determined not to submit to a Dublin Parliament.

Thousands of them are already enrolled for the purpose of withholding taxes and defeating home rule by a campaign of passive resistance.

GOMPERS SAYS NO SURRENDER

Labor Men Ready to go to Jail if Necessary.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 14.—The most significant of the opening day's utterance, at the A. F. and L. convention, was that of Mr. Gompers in responding to the address of welcome of Governor Smith, Mayor Winn and others, when he declared that he, Secretary Morrison and Vice-President John Mitchell were ready to go to jail in defence of labor's rights in event the contempt sentence of Justice Wright of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia was sustained.

"Justice Wright either intended to crush the federation or break our spirit," said Mr. Gompers. "He has done neither. The federation will continue to grow and aid in the uplift of humanity."

Keep Off the Car Bumpers.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—As the death of Charles Williams, 45 Howland avenue, last Wednesday night was due to having ridden on the bumper of a Parliament street car, Coroner George W. Graham's jury expressed the opinion that conductors should see that passengers are not allowed to ride there. The jury5 verdict was accidental death. Joh nN. Bongard, the conductor, admitted that he had the authority to keep passengers off after he considered his car crowded. The car on which Williams climbed was crowded.

IS GLAD HE SLEW WIFE ?

Edward Wilkie's Queer Statement on Hearing the Verdict.

Woman Died After Drunken Quarrel at the Home.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—"Well, your honor, I am sorry to say that it was not my fault that she died."

This statement of Edward A. Wilkie, on trial for his life, charged with the murder of his wife, Ellen Wilkie, during a drunken quarrel at their home on Aug. 14 last, on hearing the foreman of the jury deliver a verdict of "guilty of manslaughter," caused quite a sensation in the court room.

"I am sorry to hear you say so," declared Justice Riddell, who was sitting in the case. "If you have not yet come to the sense of your tremendous crime, I must consider this statement in judging what is to be your punishment. It is well for you that you did not make those remarks before the jury brought in the verdict of manslaughter."

Many diverse opinions were expressed as to what the prisoner meant by this statement. Crown Prosecutor Creswicke declared that he thought Wilkie did not know what he was saying—that he meant to say that he was sorry he had caused his wife's death. Others, and Justice Riddell among them, took up the words as they are quoted.

W. A. Henderson, acting for Wilkie, entered a plea of not guilty.

Lily Reynolds, daughter of the dead woman by a previous marriage, told the story of the quarrel. Coming home from work, and not finding her mother in the house, she went out into the lane, back of the house. She declared that Wilkie had hold of her by the wrists, but she did not think that he was hurting her. She went back into the house, and shortly after her father and mother came in. Wilkie was cursing because he wanted to take out his bicycle and Mrs. Wilkie did not want him to. He had been drinking.

Wilkie grabbed his wife by the hands and forced her back against the wall. Then he grabbed her by the throat, and threw her on the floor, and she fainted.

Mrs. Bryant, a woman who lived upstairs, threw water on her, and revived her.

Wilkie went out and came back later. Mrs. Wilkie, with her sister and the witness, was sitting on the doorstep. He caught her by the hair and dragged her into the hall. Then he hit her in the face, causing her nose to bleed, and kicked her four times in the side.

Mrs. Bertha Crawford, sister of the dead woman, declared that the fight resulted because Wilkie's supper was not ready, and the two women were sitting talking and drinking beer.

Coroners Singer and Graham, who performed the autopsy, declared, however, that the woman could not have been drinking, as there was no sign of liquor in the stomach.

Mrs. Bryant, Frank Perrigini, Walter McManus and five police constables also gave evidence.

"This is one more of that series of dreadful afflictions that may be laid to the charge of King Alcohol," declared Justice Riddell, summing up the evidence. "It is one more of those afflictions which from time to time shock our hearts and feelings. It is something which may perhaps induce some of those who indulge in moderate drinking, and who see no harm in it, to consider if they should not deny themselves, and do without liquor entirely. He spent almost an hour explaining the criminal side, as bearing on the case to the jury.

Miners Reach Agreement.

Lethbridge, Alta., Nov. 14.—A satisfactory agreement was concluded at Blairmore Sunday night by the scale committee representing the Coal Mine Operators' Association and the striking miners, and it will be submitted to a referendum vote of the miners' local unions at once. If approved, and no difficulty is anticipated in this respect, the mines should be in operation before the end of the present week.

Strike Practically Broken.

New York, Nov. 14.—The backbone of the street cleaners' strike appeared to be broken yesterday when 1,800 strikebreakers under heavy police guard made substantial progress in ridding the streets of a five days' accumulation of health endangering refuse.

There were more strikebreakers working than the normal number of drivers regularly employed by the street cleaning department, and these were only prevented from doing the normal amount of work by the necessity of "doubling up" on the wagons. As it was nearly 1,600 more loads were removed than the day before.

Waterways Commission.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—It is stated that the Borden Government is arranging to replace the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission, headed by Sir George Gibbons of London. They will recommend to the Imperial authorities the appointment of C. A. Magrath of Lethbridge, H. A. Powell of St. John, N.B., and T. Chase Casgrain of Montreal, all former Conservative members of Parliament.

Given Up For Lost.

Hamburg, Nov. 14.—The German steamer Carrara of the Sloman line, from Barcelona, has been given up for lost. A boat and other wreckage washed ashore on the Dutch Island of Texel, the most southwesterly of the Frisian Islands, indicated that the Cerrara was wrecked in one of the recent North Sea storms. It is feared that the crew of 26 have perished.

U.S. SETTLERS COMING THIS WAY

Number Will Make Record of 375,000 for Year.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—W. D. Scott, Canadian superintendent of immigration, predicted yesterday that the immigration figures for this year will break all records, totalling 375,000. J. G. White, the Canadian Government official in charge of immigration from the United States, visited Ottawa yesterday and declared that since the adverse verdict on reciprocity in this country the northward trek of United States settlers had increased, and the total this year would likely reach 140,000, as against 121,000 last year.

Less Unwieldy Committees.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—A. S. Goodeve of Kootenay, B.C., will be appointed assistant chief Government whip.

Hon. George Perley is working on a plan for reducing the size of the standing committees. The railway committee may be cut down from 200 to something like 60, and the others proportionally reduced. It is also reported that two committees be the limit for each member.

NOTABLE CANADIANS HAVE DINNER AT HOTEL ASTOR

Nothing Unfriendly in Defeat of Reciprocity, Says W. F. Cockshutt, M.P.—Carnegie Present.

New York, Nov. 14.—Three hundred Canadian men and women, residents of New York, with a number of guests, sat down to the annual banquet of the Canadian Club at the Hotel Astor last night.

Sharon Graham, president of the club, presided, having on his right Andrew Carnegie, Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, was indisposed, but came to the guest table later in the evening.

Other distinguished guests were Principal Peterson of McGill University, President Falconer of Toronto University, Sir William F. Smith, governor of Cyprus; W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., of Brantford, Ont.; Arthur S. Goodeve, M.P., of British Columbia; Kenneth J. Dunstan, president of the Canadian Club, Toronto, and Dean John Galbraith, engineering department, University of Toronto.

Hon. R. L. Borden, in his letter of regret, gracefully invited himself to attend some future function of the club.

W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., in a short address, dwelt on the recent election in Canada. The country, he said, had for 30 years progressed under a moderate protective policy. Agriculture and industry had benefited immensely, and immense sums had been expended on the waterways and canals as well as on the railroads. There was also a feeling in the country that Canada should contribute directly to the defence of the Empire.

"It was a fear on the part of our people," he said, "that the acceptance of reciprocity as proposed would disturb, if not destroy, these great underlying principles of our national being what led to the emphatic verdict that our electors gave on Sept. 21 when they turned down the proposed pact."

After assuring his hearers that no unfriendly spirit towards the United States had dictated the acts of the Canadian people, and assuring them that the Borden Government and their supporters wanted friendly trade relations with this country, Mr. Cockshutt said: "During the last few years, under Sir Wilfrid Laurier's regime, the word 'autonomy' has been worked to death. In season and out of season, in certain parts of Canada. Under new auspices, I trust that we shall hear more about the responsibilities of Empire and less regarding our own autonomy; considerably less about our rights and much more about our duty. A little thought with regard to this side of the question will be for the best interests of all our people.

"The feeling of security that has come over Canada since the election is most marked. An optimistic spirit pervades all material and national interests throughout our Dominion."

Andrew Carnegie dwelt on his favorite topic, "Peace." "People in the future would look back to navies as aberrations," he said, "just as people nowadays look back on ancient instruments of torture."

He recalled that Canada had sent 40,000 of her young men over to aid the American Union, and added that should Canada ever be invaded 400,000 fellow-English-speaking brothers would cross the border to repel the invaders from her shores.

"We, in the United States," he added, "could afford to follow Canada's example in regard to control and management of labor. We could well adopt her system of mounted police in the far west."

Hon. George E. Foster, who was suffering from a severe cold, spoke briefly.

"We did not reject reciprocity," he said, "because we did not want to trade with you. We have for the United States two distinct feelings, admiration for your great progress and anxiety to avoid your mistakes.

"We in Canada are British, and we intended to remain British to the last crack of doom, and we couldn't remain so under a reciprocity pact. We could not break down our barriers of protection. We want the United States to remain our friend, and some day we will reach a solution of all questions, between us."

SUICIDE OF BANK CLERK

Found Dead Beside Telltale Revolver in Room.

Halifax, Nov. 14.—With a bullet wound in his right temple from which blood flowed freely, G. W. Toombs, ledger-keeper in the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Lunenburg, was found dead at 6 o'clock last evening in the teller's box. A revolver lay just out of reach of his right hand. The dead body was discovered by H. W. Foban, accountant, who was upstairs when the shot was fired. Hearing the report he ran below and found Toombs dead. It seems certain that Toombs committed suicide. He left an unfinished note which said: "Farewell. I have tried to make good and failed. I do not lay the blame for my misdeed on so—"

It is said that the unfortunate boy, who was about 19 years of age, was not in good health, and had suffered lately from insomnia, and it is believed that he took his life in a fit of insanity.

People are always saying; "It is awfully quiet," as though they are entitled to rushing business every day. Whereas every sensible man should know that, except Saturdays, and circus days, it is always quiet.

TROUBLES TO BE STOPPED

British and Russian Troops Have Entered Persia.

London, Nov. 14.—(via New York.)—Affairs in Persia have reached a stage which promises further encroachments upon that kingdom's independence by Russia and Great Britain. Since their agreement dividing the country into sphere of influence, these two nations appear to have worked in harmony in the direction of gradual absorption.

If Russia enforces her ultimatum by occupying a part of the north, Great Britain is likely to take a corresponding step in the south. Russia's ultimatum, which was presented to the Persian Government, more than a week ago, declared that unless apologies were made for the alleged insult to M. Petroff, the Russian vice-consul, on the occasion of the seizure of the property of Shua-es-Sultaneh, and Persia made other reparation, Russia would occupy two of the provinces in the north.

Last week the Russian troops in the north, it is reported, were augmented by strong reinforcements. At the same time two regiments of Indian troops were landed at Bushire, a seaport city of Persia on the Persian Gulf, nominally for the purpose of guarding the British consulates in the south, although there is no apparent need for such forces.

The Times, replying to a long communication from W. Morgan Shuster, the American treasurer-general of Persia, complaining that Russia and Great Britain are endeavoring to destroy the independence of Persia, denies that Persia is independent. It says that Russia and Great Britain exercise control over Persia akin to that by guardians over minors.

Awaiting New Cabinet.

Teheran, Nov. 14.—The head of the Russian section of the Persian Foreign Office yesterday informed the Russian Minister that as the new Cabinet had not been formed, it was impossible for the Government to reply immediately to Russia's new demands for an apology in connection with the Petroff affair.

Coughs, Colds

Bronchitis

If there is an ailment in the throat or chest, it is surely essential that the remedy be conveyed direct to the affected part. It's because the healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed into the sore, irritated throat and bronchial tubes, because its balsamic fumes kill the germs and destroy the cause of the trouble. These are the reasons why Catarrhozone never yet failed to cure a genuine case of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Throat Trouble.

The wonderfully soothing vapor of Catarrhozone instantly reaches the furthest recesses of the lungs, produces a healing, curative effect that is impossible with a tablet or liquid, which goes merely to the stomach, and falls entirely to help the throat or lungs.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c and $1, at all dealers. 10

THE POWER BUSINESS

Mr Hall's handling of the power question is one that cannily steps clear of the sharp corners and the ragged edges, but it cannot conceal the true aspect of the power situation as it affects Peterborough, though Mr. Hall would like it to be so. From Mr Hall's remarks on power at the Liberal meeting, it will be noticed that he does not attempt to deny that there is a good prospect of the hydro-electric power scheme being brought to Peterborough.

He does not deny that Hon. Frank Cochrane is taking a sympathetic attitude toward Peterborough's needs of a power site for possible civic development, sooner or later. He does not deny that with Cochrane and Beck working together, there is a splendid possibility that Peterborough will be given the opportunity to be independent of the big power corporations.

Mr. Hall, instead of this, takes on himself the task of defending the Otonabee Power company. There is nothing against this course, except that Mr. Hall withdrew the semi offer made to Commissioner Duggan to sell to the Otonabee plant and rights to the city, and that the Otonabee company is supposed to have been acquired by that parent of all power companies in this district, the Electric Power company, or the Seymour company—it amounts to much the same thing. It will be a battle in the Trent district between the government hydro-electric power system and the power corporations, possibly, the latter under one head.

The fact that so many people in Peterborough find electric lighting of their homes necessary is only a tribute to the spirit of progressiveness animating Peterborough people in equipping their homes. The fact that there is no natural gas at 25 cents a thousand feet to use in Peterborough—only artificial gas at a comparatively high cost—means that unless Peterborough people wish to use lamps, they must use electric light. It is not the great cheapness of electric lighting in Peterborough which causes this condition, as Mr. Hall would like people to think. Lighting prices in Peterborough are not exorbitant as compared with other places. Neither do we think that for the average city of 20,000 are the power prices very much out of the way. This is due to the fact that the companies have such a surplus to dispose of, that they keep down the price, in order to create customers.

If Mr. Hall were to point out these facts, he would be taking a stronger position, than in trying to create the impression that it is the private power companies which are doing the guardian angel "stunt" for Peterborough's sake. They are guardian angels for No. 1, and if it pays them to behave decently, well and good, and if it doesn't—then all the worse for Peterborough.

Mr. Hall refers to the offer of the Otonabee power company to the city, to get the good will of the city in acquiring all the rights to No. 4 dam, now developed. He would use the city as a tool to tighten the grip of the corporations on the water powers of the district in exchange for a little sop of power at the company's cost. The fact remains undenied and undisputed that it will be a first class thing for Peterborough to have the Whitney hydro-electric scheme carried to the Trent district, as Sir James has said that he will do, and with the assistance of the Dominion government, to put Peterborough into the position of having a site of its own, as a check on possible misbehavior by the big corporations, when the time comes that the demand for power equals the supply. If Peterborough is interested in the project of getting cheaper power than is afforded by the companies now—and we believe that it is—there is only one thing to do. Mr. Peck must be returned, as the Whitney government will be returned, so that all can work in harmony to carry through this boon for the city. Mr. Hall would be out of place in the movement, being a defender of the private corporations. He would be an obstructionist, not a supporter. The movement would have to be carried on without his knowledge or consent, and perhaps in face of his opposition. Can Peterborough, it wants to secure itself in power matters, and get its right as the centre of a power district, afford to be in that position? Can it?

TAG DAY

The success of the Tag-Day effort in aid of the Children's Aid Society is very gratifying, especially the fact that the contributions were increased from $1257 to $1468. There is need for support of charitable institutions such as the Aid Society—many calls for assistance for such worthy objects—and while many citizens did nobly in their contributions, there were some who were very hard to separate from some of their money.

It is only by educative movements like these, however, that the people learn that there are more matters in which they have duties than merely their personal welfare. Some of these days, if the broadening work goes on, we shall learn that a certain part of our income should be devoted to the work of assisting those who are unfortunate. We shall return to the tithe system, with a good will, knowing that we shall then have done our share toward the lifting of the fallen brother, and the rescue of the orphan. In the meantime, all congratulations to the ladies, who so energetically supervised the work of making collections, and to the charming girls, who so ably worked to carry the project through to a successful conclusion.

LIQUOR ADMINISTRATION

In view of the remarks made regarding licenses and the administration of hotel-affairs, it might not be out of the way to say something about the Whitney record generally and in Peterborough.

In Ontario, in 1904, there were 2814 liquor licenses; in 1910 there were only 1847, or a reduction in number of 36 per cent. Surely no better illustration of the solidity of the progress of temperance and prohibition could be given than this, and of the effect of the Whitney government's determination to make hotel-men, keep hotel, and not merely bar rooms.

The Pioneer, the organ of the Dominion Alliance says—

> "Canadians ought to be thankful for the special privileges that they have enjoyed in the matter of thorough law-enforcement, as compared with some other communities. In the province of Ontario, the liquor laws are carried out in a manner that reflects credit upon the government in general and in particular on the gentleman who is at the head of the license department."

The Whitney government has made many reforms in the liquor administration, but the principal of these has been in the determination that hotel men must keep hotel. In the old Ross days, there were many so-called hotels that did not keep accomodation for travelers, did not furnish meals, and depended only on the sale of liquor for their living. Right here in Peterborough the license commissioners have wiped out licenses for places of this sort. They have insisted on much money being spent on hotels needing it to bring them up to a standard, and where a man has been caught violating the law, he has got a warning, and if he repeated, it was not long before he found it convenient to sell. The result of this determination by the commissioners, and their insistence that the law shall be observed, is apparent. Peterborough licenses are much reduced in number but the quality of the hotel accomodation is much improved. In fact, so rigid have the commissioners been in this regard that complaints have been frequently entered that there are not enough licenses in the city—that the city lacks accomodation.

Everyone here who knows what the free and easy conditions were in the days when the Ross government tried to play with the temperance element and let the liquor men get away with fancy tricks, realises that the Whitney method of conducting affairs is a vast improvement. The improvement cannot be gainsaid. Not even Mr. Hall could attempt to deny the great improvement.

EDITORIAL NOTES

This cold spell penetrated as far south as Alabama. Here is hoping that it cooled off Champ Clark some.

Mr. Hall handles the power question very gingerly. His remarks are more notable for what they do not contain, than for what they say.

It will take someone with more than Mr. Hall's fiery eloquence, and gift for drawing the wool over the voters' eyes—if he can do it—to induce them to believe that Whitney is not still the man for Ontario

Perhaps if the Liberals of Peterborough will gather two or three war drums together, and a few horns and cymbals, they might be able to raise some election noise.

The election of Bonar Law, a New Brunswick lawyer, to the leadership of the Unionist party, is quite a compliment to Canada. But cannot the inference be drawn from this, that the people of Britain take their politicians much more seriously than Canadians do?

The Toronto Star says that it would be very unfair and tyrannical for the Borden government to refuse aid to the province under a Liberal government which it would give if the Whitney government remained in power—Ontario ought to get the same treatment in either case. It might be worth remarking that Laurier always did that—especially to Manitoba and the Roblin government, and to British Columbia also.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 850 to 1000 lbs., sold from $4 to $4.70, and one lot of 25 short-keeps, 1157 lbs., at $5.40; stockers, from $3.25 to $4.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a fair supply of milkers and springers that sold from $40 to $80 each, and one choice cow at $90. See sales quoted by the different commission men.

Veal Calves.

About 50 calves sold from $4 to $7.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Lambs sold at $5.25 to $5.50, and one lot of 25 select ewes and wethers weighing 95 lbs. each, sold by Dunn & Levack, at $5.65. Sheep sold at $3 to $3.75.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered, of which there were 81 weighing 179 lbs., were bought by E. Puddy at $6.25.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 11, were 3100 cattle, 1475 sheep and lambs, 4600 hogs and 650 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 1300 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 400 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger undertone to the market for cattle and prices since this day week ago show an advance of 25c per cwt., which is attributed to the higher prices ruling thruout the country, the somewhat scarcity of choice stock and the colder weather.

There was a good attendance of local buyers and as they all wanted some beef the demand was good and a more active trade was done, a large number being bought by packers and several carloads were also picked up for shipment to Quebec.

A few full loads of steers and heifers were sold at from $5.75 to $6 per cwt., and some small lots of picked steers brought as high as $6.00, but the bulk of the trading in choice stock was done at $5.25; good, at $5.00 to $5.10; fairly good, at $4.75 to $5.05; fair, at $4.25 to $4.50, and the common stock at $4.25 to $5 per cwt.

There was a good demand for canning stock, of which the supply was large and prices for such show no change as compared with a week ago, sales of bulls being made at $3 to $3.25, and cows, at $1.75 to $2.50 per cwt. Good bulls sold at $4.50 to $5.

There was a good supply of hogs on the market, but, notwithstanding this fact, the tone of the market was much stronger and prices since this day week show an advance of 25c to 35c per cwt., which was due to the higher prices being paid in the country and the keener demand from packers here for supplies, consequently an active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $6.75 to $6.85 per cwt., weighed off cars, and in one or two instances as high as $7 was paid for stock, which had long runs. Heavy hogs and sows sold for $1 per cwt. less than the above prices.

There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep or lambs, prices being firm under a good demand from butchers and sales of full carloads of lambs were made freely at $5.25 to $5.50, and sheep, at $3.50 to $3.75 per cwt.

Good to choice calves were scarce, for which there was considerable enquiry and sales of such were made at from $12 to $15 each, and the commoner ones went at from $3 to $10 each.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

—BY—

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"You haven't got that pair of glasses with you, have you, Anstruther?"

"Yes, here they are."

Jim fumbled with them for some time. Like many outdoor men in the West he was not very familiar with the use of binoculars.

"They ain't no good to me. Guess I don't savvy them properly. You take a look through them for me. Ain't that smoke there to the west?"

Anstruther looked and Jim watched him.

"No, not there," he said irritably. "Lord! a man could count the rings on a rattler that far. Away beyond on the next big bench towards the river, near those clumps of pine."

Anstruther could not see the pines. He saw a dark line, but that it meant pines was not obvious to him as it seemed to Jim's naked eye.

Mrs. Rolt took the glasses from him. "Let me try," she said. "I know what to look for. That is half the battle," and then, after a short scrutiny, she said:—

"Yes, I believe that there is a column of smoke or mist just to the right of the pines."

"It ain't mist. There's no swamp up there. I'll bet my socks that's the camp. Tell you what, Mrs. Rolt, if you've a mind to come along, I've almost a mind to take you. They might not suspicion anything if they saw ladies along and so give me a show to see more'n I would if I went by my lonely."

Kitty clasped her hands and let her horse go.

"Hold on," cried Jim. "You'll want some blankets, won't you? We shan't make it back to the ranche to-night. I mean to camp alongside those fellows."

He turned, calling Anstruther to follow him, and rode after Pretty Dick's wagon, from which they returned with all the blankets they could carry.

"You and me will have to rough it to-night, but it won't hurt us any, if we keep up a good fire."

The other made no objection. In the warm sunlight the prospect of a cold, sleepless night does not seem very terrible. It is when the slow hours give you time to think of your discomfort that the pinch comes.

Then you vow that you will for the future leave your grub, rather than your blankets, behind.

CHAPTER IV.

It was a glorious and memorable ride for all of them. Four perfect horsemen in a horseman's country. Such a taste of paradise as, in this weary old world, generally precedes trouble.

"How much of this belongs to the Risky Ranch, Mrs. Rolt?" asked Anstruther.

"All of it as far as you can see."

"None of it," corrected Jim, "except a few meadows and some water front on the Fraser as you can't see."

"How annoying you are, Jim. You know what I mean perfectly well."

"Only you don't say it, and he doesn't know."

"Well, if it isn't yours," persisted the puzzled Anstruther, looking from one to the other, "why should not anyone run their cattle over it?"

"They might if they did not need water or hay. These two Harrison boys are trying it now."

"What Jim means, Mr. Anstruther, is that we have corralled, oh, I beg your pardon, Kitty, secured the exclusive right to all the water and all the hay meadows in the district, and without these the run would not be worth anything. Stock must have water, and in winter must sometimes have hay."

"I see, but how do you keep your cattle. I don't see any fences."

"We don't keep them, they keep themselves, in summer, and in winter—" she broke off abruptly, and pointed to where a number of slow-moving beasts were strung out in line of march towards the river.

"Do you see that band? Those are the first of our beasts coming in. For the next fortnight you will see them wandering in by hundreds. They know the seasons as well or better than we do."

"Do you mean that they have been out all the summer and are coming in now of their own accord?"

"Just that. In all sorts of beautiful little parks islanded in that black timber; in groves shady and deep, by little streams we have hardly seen, they have dreamed away their summer undisturbed and now they are coming home with their calves behind them our income."

"It seems easy. Where does the work come in?"

Mrs. Rolt turned laughingly in her saddle to Jim.

"Isn't any work, is there, Jim?"

Jim, who was riding in his shirt-sleeves, with his coat in a roll at the back of his saddle, looked meditatively at his own bare corded arms.

"Might be some in the meadows in 'skeeter time,'" he suggested. "Rounding up the strays keeps a man in the saddle quite a while, and there's some don't hanker after too much branding and such like, but it's all in a lifetime. If it is work it is better than any play I ever heard tell of. Guess if I was the boss of the Risky, I wouldn't change places with anyone."

"That is pretty of you, Jim."

He looked at her smiling, no ways abashed.

"I guess the boss agrees with me, and he knows England as well as he knows B.C., and has sampled the best there is to be had pretty nigh all over."

"Yes, but he had his fill of England first, Jim, and he is older."

Her eyes followed the laughing couple which preceded them, as her thoughts followed Combe's, and the pain in his honest grey eyes was reflected in hers. She was sorry for her old friend, and knew that it was useless to explain. The old world had called its own, and both knew that Kitty had listened to its call.

Meanwhile the others had ridden ahead, and were now holding up their hands to keep the stragglers back. They left their horses, and stole quietly on to some tall trees which fringed a small lake, a blue turquoise set in the red gold of the reeds, and islanded amongst the grey green of the sage brush.

For the last fifty yards the boy and girl, they were little more, crept on their hands and knees, and when they raised their heads above the reeds there was a sudden splashing and scurry as a bunch of mallards sprang quacking from the water. In quick succession four reports followed one another, and two of the ducks tumbled back headlong into the lake. For a moment the rest of the birds looked as if they were going straight away, but some foolish prompting of curiosity brought them back, swinging in a circle high overhead.

"Stand still, Miss Clifford," they heard the Englishman say, "now let them have it," and again there were four flashes, but even to the onlookers it was almost impossible to distinguish more than two reports.

Again two birds came down, not all aslant on struggling wings, but with their heads under them, dead in mid air, killed instantly, as if by lightning.

"That's a fine performance, Miss Clifford. Very few girls at home could beat that," they heard Anstruther say. "You were too quick for me."

"What! didn't you shoot?"

"No," he lied gallantly. "See, my gun is loaded still, and he threw open the breach, showing the two cartridges which he had slipped in with the rapidity of an old hand almost as he spoke.

"Then I killed those two myself."

"Unless they died for love of you."

"And who killed the others?"

"I suppose that you did."

"Oh, nonsense; I'm not going to believe that."

"Well, we'll take one each then if I can get them. Give me your hand, please, for a moment," and under the transparent pretext of wanting support whilst he balanced himself upon a partially submerged pine pole, Anstruther managed to retrieve his game.

Perhaps he held the little warm hand a trifle longer and pressed it a trifle harder than the circumstances warranted, but the girl's rosy face registered no serious protest.

"He's a very fluent liar," muttered Mrs. Rolt half to herself as they rode up.

"Bags his game very neatly," answered Jim.

"And she's a little fool," said the lady viciously, but Anstruther neither heard the criticism nor the praise any more than did Kitty.

In their veins the young blood was beating so that their ears were deafened to everything except the measure of one old song, which once truly learned becomes the music of a lifetime.

For them the scent of the sage brush, the hurry and roar of rising wings, and the blue of lonely upland lakes, would be as the keys of paradise as long as they both should live, bringing back dreams with which duck-shooting should have little enough to do.

Unfortunately that song is a duet, and gives pleasure to two only, so that though the pools seemed innumerable, and the glory of the day unstinted, an end came to Jim's loquacity. He was all eyes, but his tongue had failed him.

Suddenly as Jim and the boss's wife followed soberly behind the younger couple, an owl called from the timber which they were now skirting.

The two in front had pulled up, and were waiting for Mrs. Rolt to join them. When they came alongside Anstruther asked:

"Did you hear that owl, Combe? Isn't it early in the day for him to be calling? There do you hear him? He must be quite close to us."

"That ain't no owl."

"What is it, then?"

"A Chilcoten telling his pals that there are white men coming. You'll see the smoke of their camp as soon as this timber opens up again. I guess I'll ride on ahead," and so saying he put his horse into a gallop.

"Why is he in such a hurry?"

"I expect he wants to get a glimpse of their camp before they have had time to cache anything," replied Mrs. Rolt. "Jim is looking for things not mentioned in the game list.

But when the three reached the Indian camp they found Jim Combe sitting loosely in his saddle, the bridle thrown carelessly on his horse's neck, talking with the utmost good temper to a grey-haired old mummy, as if he were enjoying a gossip in his native tongue.

"Says that the tribe is hungry, that the wolves have grown numerous, and the deer all gone back away off," said he as the others came up, mimicking the old woman's manner. "Seems like it, doesn't it?" and he pointed to a great square stack of fresh hides. "There's another stack just back of that, under those trees. They must have killed forty or fifty deer. How many suns have you been hunting?" he asked, turning again to the squaw.

"Ten suns," showing the number on her bent claws.

"And how many men stop here?"

"My son, his fader, and two more."

"Who is your son? What you call him?"

"Kinee-sx," whined the old hag in a curious sing-song.

"Oh! Cultus Jack, eh?"

"Nawitka, white man's name Cultus Jack."

"Then his father is Khelowna. You Khelowna's wife, Emma?"

"Nawitka, me Emma."

"You don't mean to say that awful old woman is the chief's wife," whispered Mrs. Rolt.

"Yes. She's the princess. Nice princess, isn't she? Well, we're going to camp here, Emma."

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

ELECTRICITY AND PLANT-LIFE

An Electrician Has Built a Machine by Which Two Crops Can Be Secured.

The study of economic biology is gaining a good deal of attention at the present time, and those engaged in research work have been able to secure results which suggest that there are enormous possibilities in the application of electricity to agriculture and horticulture. The investigators claim that the growth of almost all cereals, fruit, and vegetables can be increased and stimulated by the application of electricity, and, what is equally important, that the products can be gathered earlier. Their statistics go to show that the increase in quantity in certain cases is very high — strawberries 36 per cent., tomatoes 20 per cent., beets 30 per cent., cucumbers 17 per cent., wheat 29 per cent., and barley 9 per cent. more grain and 12 per cent. more straw. In the case of barley, the germinating process which is used by brewers occupies about 27 days; but this period is reduced to 13 days with the assistance of electricity, while it is also claimed that the percentage of germination is greater. These results have been obtained as the result of most carefully conducted experiments, and the question naturally arises as to the possibility of a general cooperation between science and agriculture on these lines. In other words, is it possible to secure apparatus in such a simple form, and at such a reasonable figure, that ordinary nurserymen and farmers will feel tempted to call the great power to their aid? That is a question to which a Bristol electrician, Mr. Thomas Clark, claims to have an affirmative answer. He has built and patented, a machine which is really an influence machine, and by the application of high-tension electricity a continuous current from insulated overhead wires can be discharged. The machine which Mr. Clark has just built, is shortly to be put to a practical test in one of the largest nurseries in the South. The purchasers have evidently realised that there is a chance of obtaining early crops, and in order to secure the best results they have erected a greenhouse on the lines desired by the patentee.

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

AERONAUTIC INVENTIONS

Many Patents Have Been Granted for Aerial Improvements.

Aerial and marine navigation, while in most respects totally unlike, are yet in certain particulars closely analogous, and this is perhaps most clearly observed in considering the smaller auxiliary devices relating to these arts. Although aerial navigation, so far as heavier than air machines is concerned, has only recently been accomplished, the art in a broad sense has been, nevertheless, the subject of patent applications for many years, and a consideration of these patents indicates that not only has inventive genius been active along broad lines of development, but that it has been busily engaged in the perfection of details of construction which now that so great interest has been aroused in the practical side of the art, may be found of great value.

While the first marine anchors were probably crude affairs, consisting of a rock or crooked branch, the art of aerial navigation did not arise until long after marine anchors had reached a fairly high state of development, and aeronautical inventors were thus able to confine their attention largely to the adaptation of these marine anchors to aerial use. Among the first patents granted in America for an aeronautical device is that to Mr. Bell, dated March 26th, 1850, which among other details shows a water anchor or drag, clearly adapted from marine use, and which consists of an umbrella-like structure supported upon a rod, the rod being provided with ropes at its opposite ends. It is evident from the construction that, if the device be immersed in water and attached to the flying machine by the rope being slack, the umbrella structure will remain closed and offer little resistance to travel through the water, while if one rope be pulled taut and rope be slackened, the pressure of the water will open out the umbrella device, thus presenting a large surface to the water and acting as a very effective drag or water anchor. Similar in type, but adapted for land use, is the device shown in the British patent to Alexander of 1893, in which a supporting rod similar to that of Bell's device is provided, but instead of the umbrella structure of the latter, the rod carries a series of backwardly projecting prongs or claws, which, when the rod is towed by one or the other of its ropes, respectively, slide easily over the surface of the ground, or engage with the same and act as a positive anchoring means.

LEARNING TO USE LIGHT

The color of the light plays an important part in tiring people out. Fatigue occurs far more quickly with orange and yellow rays at high intensities than from green and bluish green light like that from the mercury vapor lamp. Nothing equals the bluish white of diffused daylight. Shadows also have an important part to play. In fact, one of the principal aids in distinguishing objects is the difference in brightness. If there were no shadows but only a perfectly diffused illumination of high intensity it would be hard to see clearly. In order to have shadows there must be directed light from one or a number of sources and not merely diffused light coming from all directions. There must be enough directed light to mark edges of objects by shadows and also enough diffused light to enable one to see clearly in the shadows. To light the home with comfort and economy requires a combination of concentrated illumination of fairly high intensity at the dining or reading table with a general illumination of low intensity. The lighter the wall and ceiling are the more light they reflect to give the required diffused general illumination and so less direct light will be needed. As artificial light is deficient in blue and green rays, walls and ceilings of a bluish or greenish shade give them greater reflecting power for daylight than for artificial light, which is generally desirable.

Natural Soap.

There is a natural soap well in Dakota. The soap is skimmed from a boiling spring, and hardens by exposure to the air. It is like soft clay, and can be gathered with a shovel, and is supposed to be a mixture of alkali, borax, and the lubricating oil found in many parts of Wyoming. A sample has been tested by a prominent soap manufacturer, and he says that this natural soap is worth the full weight of the manufactured article. It has been used as axle grease by adding a little of the oil discovered near the spring, and it is pronounced the finest material ever used for that purpose. The soap will wash in the hardest of water, and leave the hands much softer than the ordinary article will. The supply is supposed to be inexhaustible.

How to Sleep.

Dr. Fischer, a physician practising in Paris, after a series of experiments has come to the conclusion that the orthodox way of sleeping is wrong and advocates a complete reversal of the existing order of things. You must have your head on a level with, or lower than, your feet. If pillows are to be used they must be under the feet instead of the head. The result, he claims, will be amazing, being a sure cure for insomnia, as well as a preventive for the nightmare. To prevent any inconvenience by too sudden a change, it is suggested that the pillows should be gradually reduced and finally placed under the feet.

Protecting from Electrolysis

Albert B. Herrick describes a method of preventing an earth conductor adjacent a grounded return by alternately connecting the earth conductor to the grounded return and to a source of negative electromotive force.

A Result Worthy of Consideration

Endowment Policy No. 34022 was issued to a local citizen twenty years ago for which he paid in ten annual instalments to the Company in all premiums, amounting to $688.50. He now receives a single cash payment of $1273.65 which as an investment is over 4% compound interest, or he may accept $750.60 in cash, which is $62.10 more than he paid in, together with a paid up policy for $1000, payable at death which earns profits every year during the balance of his life.

BIFOCALS

OR –

DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

312 SUCCESSFUL ANNEX SALES

TO-MORROW WE CELEBRATE THE SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BARGAIN ANNEX. The Cressman "Bargain Annex" is the most unique BARGAIN DEPT. in the province—inaugurated by us 6 years ago this month—covered by Government Patent—always, every Wednesday, crowded with eager shoppers. It is a business pride with us that we have a BARGAIN DEPT. second to none in the province, and the only one of its kind in the Dominion.

They all said "We Couldn't," but "WE DID." Everyone said a purely Bargain Dept. on 4th Floor, open one day a week only would be a failure. It had no predecessor to show it could be made a success. It's not necessary to tell you THIS Bargain Dept. HAS NOT been a failure. SUCCESSFUL does not begin to spell its SUCCESS. Always, all the time busy in the Bargain Annex.

For this Sixth Anniversary we have planned big. We will wait on MORE PEOPLE and sell MORE GOODS on Wednesday, Nov. 15th, than has ever been sold in the "Annex" in any one day. We look for BIG BUSINESS from the opening hour 8.15, to the closing hour 5.30.

Some of the prices quoted will appear ridiculously low. So they are: but buying for this event started several months ago, and now we are ready with a REGULAR FEAST OF GOOD THINGS in the shape of Bargains. Plan to spend one hour in the Annex both forenoon and afternoon—IT WILL PAY.

Cruel Treatment of Woman by Incensed Italian

Prisoner Admitted Having Ill-Treated Her on Another Occassion

On Sunday afternoon P.C. Kidd went up to the house of an Italian names Antonio Mascarrow, on London and arrested him on a charge of cruelly beating and ill-treating his wife.

The Italian resisted arrest at first, but the officer handled the man, as he would a child and Tony was rapidly marshed to the police station and locked up.

This morning he was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble. Not being able to speak English intelligibly, Mr. Tom Miniscolo acted as interpreter.

WHY HE WAS ANGRY

When charged with the brutal act he pleaded guilty. His only excuse was that his wife had left his house for a couple of hours, leaving the children alone, and this trivial action, had so incensed him that on her return, he had literally pounded and battered her with his fists and the bruised and swollen condition of her face eloquently testified to the severity and brutality of the attack.

"Did you ever beat her before," sternly asked His Worship.

"Yes about seven years ago," he replied through the interpreter.

NO MORE UNLESS NECESSARY

He added that he would not do it any more unless it was necessary

This last remark aroused the righteous indignation of His Worship, who expressed his determination to make an example of the case.

"I'm not going to have any of my neighbors beaten," said His Worship.

It would appear that the man had been in the habit of beating his wife previously.

The case was enlarged until Friday and the prisoner will be kept confined unless he can come forward with two sureties of $250 each as bonds and his own personal surety for the same amount.

AS WE WERE FIFTY YEARS AGO

A friend of the Review has been looking over an old Canadian publication and makes from its pages some extract and comment. What is written in the book seems to be a fairly candid and free view of the locality in the days referred to:

In the year 1851 Mr. W. H. Smith, author of the Canadian Gazette, published a work entitled "Canada, Past, Present and Future," which, even now is interesting reading. Peterborough is referred to as follows:

"The situation of Peterborough is pleasant and the scenery picturesque. The town has a daily post. During the season steamboats run daily from the town to Rice Lake, from which passengers were conveyed to Port Hope and Cobourg by stages. Including the Scotch Village (afterwards called Ashburnham) there are 2,200 inhabitants." It is further stated that the town had increased considerably within the last few years, the stumps had been cleared from the streets, and a much better class of buildings erected, a new Town Hall and Market House had been built, and a cemetery containing 4 acres provided to the north end of the town. The directory shows 27 merchants, 5 lawyers, 5 doctors, 5 hotels, 4 druggists, 7 tailors, 6 saddlers, 5 carders and fullers, 4 ironfounders, 3 shinglemakers, 2 axe makers, 2 tinsmiths, 2 distillers, 2 tanners, 3 surveyors, 1 printer, besides 1 each in the following business: Potash maker, wagon and coach maker and woollen manufacturer. The trades of carders and fullers, shingle makers, axe makers, potash makers and distillers are not now represented in the city directory.

APPOINTMENT BY BOARD OF WORKS

Fire Engineer Jamieson to Look After Pumping Station

Mr. Wm Trout applied for the position of engineer at the pumping station, at a meeting of the Board of Works last evening. He asked a salary of $600.

His demand was considered, however, by the Board to be too high, when compared with Engineer Jamieson's figures of $100 a year less.

The chairman, since the last meeting, had interviewed Jamieson, who expressed the desire to take the position. The latter's request for a telephone to be installed in his house in case of sudden alarms, was not thought by the Board to be necessary, and was therefore thrown out.

Mr. Jamieson is engineer at the fire station. His duties will be to inspect the pumping station machinery daily.

ILLNESS OF THE REV. DR. SYMONDS

Was Unable to Take Cathedral Services on Sunday

The many friends of Rev. Dr. Symonds of Christ Church Cathedral, at Montreal and formerly rector of St. Luke's church, will regret to learn that he is unable to attend to his duties on account of illness.

The services at the Cathedral were taken on Sunday by Bishop Farthing and Rev. Alan P. Shatford, each making sympathetic reference to the absence of the rector.

Rev Dr. Symonds was to have given the first of a series of sermons to the students on Sunday.

BRIG. HARGRAVE GOES TO TORONTO

Will be Secretary of the Young People's Work

Among the changes made in Salvation Army circles is the transferrence of Brigadier and Mrs. Hargrave in command of the Province of Quebec and Eastern Ontario to Toronto.

They assume there the secretaryship for Young People's Work, candidates for officership in the Army and advanced training of field officers. The new training position is regarded in Salvation Army circles as a distinct promotion for the brigader and Mrs Hargrave. They succeeded Lieut.-Col. Turner.

Brigadier John Rawlings and Mrs. Rawlings, now Property Commissioner of the Army and located in Toronto, are promoted to the command of Quebec and Eastern Ontario, with headquarters at Montreal, where the brigadier served as assistant to Brigadier Hargrave when he was stationed in that city over twelve years ago.

Brigadier and Mrs. Hargrave were visitors at the local temple on Sunday, the occasion being a farewell.

Most men are pretty deliberate when about their work, much as we say about Americans being overworked.

GOOD PROGRAM

Lecture and Music at Knox church Lecture Hall

Ensign Merritt of the Salvation Army, the Songsters' Brigade and Mr. Robert Dickson, contributed to an enjoyable evening at Knox church lecture hall last night. The ensign gave a most interesting account of the life and work of General Booth; the Songsters' Brigade gave the musical program, with the exception of a solo by Mr. Dickson. The attendance was large, and the visit of the Army workers was much appreciated.

HIS WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Magistrate Edmison Was Married Fifty Two Years Ago

Mr. George Edmison, K. C., County Police Magistrate is to-day quietly celebrating an event, worthy of note, namely the fifty-second anniversary of his wedding. During his long sojourn in the city, in the capacity of barrister and later as County Police Magistrate, his present office, Mr. Edmison has occupied a sphere of activity and faithfully discharged his duties both in public and home life. The last forty eight years of his life have been spent in the house which he now occupies, and his memory of events and notable incidents of years gone by makes a most interesting story.

Mr. Edmison was married in 1859.

QUICK WORK

The engineer engaged in installing machinery in the new pumping station unexpectedly gave an alarm to-day to the fire station calling Engineer Jamieson. One of the firemen hitched up the chief's buggy and drove Engineer Jamieson to the pump station. The run was made in four minutes from the time the alarm was sent in, and two minutes later the engineer had all the machinery running with a pressure of about thirty pounds.

McEWEN GETS THEM ALL GOING

Clever Work by the Great Entertainer at the Grand

It was only those before the footlights at the Grand Opera House last night who grew tired and slept.

The big audience didn't get a chance to become weary at any time during the two hours, McEwen held the boards. His visit to Peterboro was preceded with advance notices that McEwen could produce the goods. In his initial appearance, last-night, the reputation gained on both sides of the Atlantic was ably sustained. McEwen is great and it looks like packed houses for the remainder of the week's engagement.

As a hypnotist, McEwen gets the complete control of his subjects, and is obeyed with the quickness of a flash of lightning from the blue. There was no faking last night. While the majority of his subjects were assistants, the local candidates did their turns like professionals. They laughed sang and danced, were treated to strawberries so they thought and had other numerous spasms of joy, in which the audience shared.

Feats of slight of hand work and magic make up the first part of the program and McEwen scores heavily. Florance Hartley has a good voice, and her contributions are splendidly given.

Altogether, the entertainment is refined and exceedingly interesting and laughable. It was announced that the hypnotist would put one of his assistants to sleep in Turnbull's window, at noon to-day and after bringing him to the Opera House to-night, would there awake him.

COMMERCE AND CIVILIZATION

Interesting Debate at George St. Lecture Hall

An unusually interesting evening was provided at the meeting of George street Epworth League last night brought about by the presence of St. James' church leaguers and a debate which took place between representatives of the two leagues.

Miss Edna Armstrong, the president of the George street league, acted as chairman.

A recitation by Miss Gladys Pentland was most acceptably given.

The debate was, "Resolved that commerce has done more for civilisation than missions." The negative side was taken by Miss Ada Payne and Fred Brown, of George street church, and the affirmative by Miss Drake and W. McLaren, the affirmatives being awarded the decision after a keen and clever contest.

The evening was under the direction of the missionary department.

SOME WORKS LEFT UNDONE

Brought to Notice of Board of Works Again

Several matters of more or less importance, which have been left undone or neglected by the Board of Works, were brought to their attention last evening at the close of the main business of the evening.

Ald. Bradburn wanted to know the reason the storm drain on George street, ordered some time ago, had not been constructed. In view of the approach of frost, Ald. Bradburn thought the work should have been undertaken earlier.

Scarcity of men and pipe was the city engineer's explanation for the delay.

Ald Morgan called the attention of the Board to the unsatisfactory and unsafe condition of the railroad crossings at the Quaker Oats.

The East City aldermen asked why the catch basin had not been installed at the corner of Mark and Hunter streets. Engineer Hay admitted his unfamiliarity with the exact requirements of this spot.

Ald. Edgar inquired about the drain on Hunter street, where water accumulates. A proposal by Ald. Metheral that gravel be used to fill in the sunken spot did not suggest itself as suitable to Ald. Edgar as a remedy, who insisted that a catch-basin was what was required.

Some trouble about water entering the cellar of the house of Mr. Clancy in East City from a watering trough was called to the attention of the Board, and Mr. Hay was instructed to investigate.

CHANCE TO GET YOUR PICTURE

The Rayner picture and portrait company of Ottawa, has been taken over by the Dominion Portrait and Picture company, and a large number of unclaimed photographs which were in the possession of the former company are now on their hands. A list of these has been forwarded to the police department of the city, which is open for inspection, so that any local people who had photographs taken by the Rayner company, may look at the list and discover if their names are included in the list.

Agents of the company took orders in this city.

And at last it's hockey. The annual ecting of the Peterborough Hockey ub is called for the National Hotel, ursday night at eight o'clock, and ery hockey enthusiast is asked to on hand.

Peterborough will be represented in e intermediate series by a good ift seven, or six, if the amendment the local club goes through at the nual O.H.A. meeting.

"Muggie" McMillan, who has been ggling express junk during the mmer, will be around these parts ain shortly.

Nothing further has been heard from J. Derocher, but Leonidas will in all obability be on hand, when Jack irnbeck shoots out the nets for the itial warmup.

Charley Ray will be missing: also n Dobson. "Len's" friends will be eased to learn that he is "coming back" nicely and may take another turn at the puck at some future date.

Bud Kelly and Park, those two nifty forwards, are stalled here, so the report from Trenton that the natives down there are going to support junior and intermediate hockey, needn't cause any alarm around this burg.

Denison and a side partner, Bearss, are also anchored and Pete Weatherstone looks fit to roam any ice space.

The juniors too, are still with us—at least some of them—and there's no need to worry.

F. D. Craig, secretary of the City Hockey League, received word from Lakefield last night that the town could be represented in a junior city league here on an age limit of eighteen. Drytown also claims to have a senior city league outfit. Now what do you think of that?

From present indications it looks like the church hockey league only and why not? With the amended constitution, this league can serve up a choice bill-of-fare.

GIRLS AND MARRIAGE

The Evolution of Woman During Last Decade Has Changed Views on Matrimony.

The inclination of the girls of today towards matrimony is acknowledged to be very different indeed from that of their compeers ten years ago. The evolution of woman during this important period of progression has been every bit as rapid as the development of the motor, wider and further reaching in its results than the birth of the aeroplane.

Elderly women can remember the days when not to be married, or at least engaged, at five-and-twenty, was to be considered hopelessly on the shelf, when spinsterhood was akin to disgrace and "old maid" a term of derision. To so great an extent were women imbued with the idea of "marry—or to be written down a failure" that almost any man who offered an escape from this reproach was regarded as acceptable, and even if ideal happiness might not thus have been attained, the woman had justified her existence — she was a wife!

Although no one denies that the ordained destiny of woman is to wed, the married state is now allowed to be one of individual choice, not of enforced convention. With higher education, a wider sphere of influence, enlarged opportunities for entering both business and professional life, and the acknowledgement of equal mental and physical ability to that of the average man, many women of the twentieth century have come to regard the married state with distaste, as being, perhaps an obstacle to the pursuit of some special career, some dearly cherished ambition, whereas not so long ago it was looked upon as the sole end and aim of feminine existence.

HAIR DRESSING MODES

While Some Still Affect the Fringe the Tendency Is Towards a Plainer Style.

Although the "American" fringe is being exploited by a few Society women, the tendency is to dress the hair without so much as the little curls worn until recently to soften the forehead outline. Not that this fashionable style favours the high bold forehead. On the contrary, the hair waves back from a centre parting in two deep "draperies" nearly reaching the eyebrows, and then carried up sharply to leave the temples uncovered, the hair growing from the temples being arranged in two puffs or "draperies," one on each side of the face. The rest of the hair is caught up at a point some two inches below the crown of the head, and from there is arranged in curl-like puffs, which may, if liked, cover the whole of the back of the head, or may be piled in sets of three on each side of the centre parting in front.

The side-parting is again seen, the hair being then required to form large waves over the top of the head, and to stand out in a thick soft wave at the "parting" side. The ends are caught together at the back of the head, and are formed into curl-puffs. The back hair is plaited into a four or five strand plait and turned up, pinned to the back of the head, and the ends used to form more curl-puffs. This is a style which suits girls with an ample supply of pretty tresses.

During the hot weather the favourite style for school girls showed the hair plaited down the back, and made into two plaits, one at each side, tied with ribbons. If the plaits are short, it is convenient — and still cooler — to turn them up and tie the bows at the tops instead of at the ends of the plaits.

FALL MUFFS ARE BIG

Muffs for this winter wear are larger even than last season. This means that they are big, big. While those who have muffs constructed upon the lines of rugs and saddles will undoubtedly carry them when the cold comes. They are made flat and square, closed at the bottom.

Huge tails are employed as a finish to the latest muffs, while others have heads or paws for garniture.

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

HUNDREDS CURED BY TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ont. July 27th.
"Last spring, I had a severe attack of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints when the physician attending me had given me up." JAMES DINGWALL.

The cause of Kidney Congestion and Pain in the Back, is that the bowels are badly constipated and the skin is inactive. Thus, the kidneys are forced to do double work in ridding the system of impurities,—and become strained.

"Fruit-a-tives" — the great fruit medicine — acts on bowels, liver and skin, as well as on the kidneys,—rids the system of all impurities, and completely cures all kidney congestion and pain in the back.

Any other matters of interest will also be discussed. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

HIS CHILD IS DEAD

Italian in Jail is Told of Child's Death

The Italian wife-beater, who was charged with ill-using his wife at police court to-day, has not yet secured bonds sufficient to give him his liberty. This afternoon his youngest child died, leaving only one child living now out of a family of six. The prisoner, who is at present in the county jail, was notified late this afternoon of the little one's death.

N. F. DAVIDSON K. C. CHAIRMAN AGAIN

Mr. N. F. Davidson, K.C., of Toronto, acted as chairman at the banquet in connection with the Laymen's Missionary convention held last evening in Toronto, at which all Protestant communions were represented. The election of officers took place at the conclusion of the banquet and Mr. Davidson, who is a brother of Canon Davidson, of this city, was reelected chairman for Toronto for the coming year.

Asleep at Turnbull's

The spectacle of a youth lying on a couch, deep in sleep, attracted the attention of passersby to Turnbull's display window to-day. The youth was placed in the sleeping state by McEwen, the hypnotist, this morning and he will be awakened at the Grand Opera House to-night. His slumbers appear to be natural and his breathing is regular and easy.

Method of Finding an Aeronaut's Position.

When terrestrial objects are invisible, an aeronaut is compelled to employ indirect methods of finding his position. Several such methods have been invented during recent years. Berlingmaier and Marcuse have employed magnetic measurements for this purpose and successful methods of informing an aeronaut of his position by means of wireless telegraphy have been devised. Finally, astronomical methods have been proposed, in which the tedious reduction of the observations is effected by means of special apparatus.

Persistence of Instinct.

Memory handed down through thirty generations is one of the perplexing facts of science. The beaver flourished along the French rivers until killed off for its fur, but is now known only in about a dozen of the villages of the Rhone near Avignon. For three centuries these villages have had no trees to cut down for dams. The animals were compelled to adopt a new mode of life, and have burrowed in the banks, shaping mud with their tails as usual. Recently some of them were taken by a Spanish Count to forests on his estate. Very strangely, they resumed the habit dropped three centuries before they were born, and at once began cutting down trees and building dams.

IN THE WORLD OF SCIENCE

TESTING SUBMARINES

A New Invention by an Italian, Said to Solve the Problem of Testing Submersibles.

Through the inventive genius of an Italian marine engineer, a long forward stride seems to have been made recently in the construction of submarine boats. He has made it possible to do away with a large part of the hazard incident to the submergence of these under-water war vessels, hitherto one of the greatest stumbling blocks to submarine constructors. This inventor is Maj. C. Laurenti, formerly of the Royal Navy, and designer of the famous Laurenti submersibles. His latest invention is a type of testing dock for submarine boats which will overcome most of the perils and vexations attendant upon the deep-sea submergence trials necessary for all such craft. Maj. Laurenti's testing dock is a modified floating device of steel, which can be hermetically sealed after a submarine has entered it at one end. The dock is brought to the right floating condition, the end gate or door is swung out of the way, and the submarine under trial placed within in the proper way. The gate is then closed, and the entire space in the dock and around the vessel flooded.

Telephone Communication.

Before this submergence, however, the examining officers enter the submarine and remain until the test is completed and the proper observations taken. By means of a telephonic arrangement they are kept in constant communication with the engineer in charge of the dock. Gauges are placed at fixed points inside of the craft which record pressures and the slightest change of form due to external stresses. When all is ready the water in the testing dock is subjected to pressure generally until the hydrostatic force acting upon the hull of the submarine at every external point is an exact equivalent of the pressure that would be exerted by the sea if the boat were down 200 ft., or more, as the case may be. The beauty of this whole arrangement is that the submarine does not have to be taken off shore to be tested and does not have to depend upon favourable weather conditions. There is no risk involved, and those inside the vessel can observe the conditions at every stage of pressure, the exact counterpart of submergence in the open sea.

Watching the Pressure

By being in vocal communication with those in charge of the pressure pumps of the dock, the inspectors within the submarine can work with certainty and security. They can also see leaks, and trace them to their proper sources while incidentally watching the guages marking the elastic yielding of the hull structure, if any take place, and the degree thereof. Up to the present the strength of these boats had been calculated by methematical formulae, which are largely theoretical. The Laurenti testing-dock will show how far these formulae may be correct, and will, undoubtedly, indicate directions in which structural charges can be made to advantage.

Mechanical Equivalent of Heat.

The mechanical theory of heat regards heat as a mode of motion, and investigation has shown that there exists a definite relation between those two forms of energy, which is known as the mechanical equivalent of heat, or Joule's equivalent. That is, if, as in the experiments of Joule, a certain known amount of mechanical energy be expended, as, for instance, by the falling of a weight to operate paddles in a vessel of water, the increase in temperature of the water, due to agitation by the paddles will always be found proportional to the work done. This relation or proportion is expressed by the amount of work necessary to raise the temperature of one pound of water at 62 degrees Fahrenheit through one degree at atmospheric pressure, or, in other words, impart one British Thermal Unit to the water. The heat necessary to raise the temperature of one pound of water from 62 degrees to 63 degrees temperature was found by Joule to be able to perform work equal to the raising of 772 pounds one foot in height. The latest experimental determination of Rowland shows that the exact value is somewhat higher than 772, and 778 is the value now usually accepted as the correct mechanical equivalent.

Scientific Bottle Breaking.

The method of breaking small bottles or vessels at the place wanted with a kerosene-soaked string is well known, but this method does not work so well with the larger vessels. Following is a method given by a writer, by which any sized glass vessels can be broken — as, for example, a glass tub to be made out of a carboy. Fill the vessel with cold water up to the place at which it is to be broken. Pour enough boiling oil over the water to make a good coat on the surface, and before the oil has time to cool dash cold water on the outside of the vessel. A clean break at the contact-point of oil and water will be the result.

What Radium Will Do.

Sir William Ramsay pointed out at the recent Parliament of Science in Portsmouth, England, that if radium could be turned to mechanical use a ton of the marvellous substance would suffice to propel a ship of 15,000 tons, with engines of 15,000 horse-power, at the rate of fifteen knots for thirty years. He added by comparison that such a ship would require 1,500,000 tons of coal to get the same results. The Mauretania and the Lusitania consume about 7,000 tons of coal each for every voyage of five and one-half days.

HON. BENJAMIN F. PEARSON

After spending some years as alderman on the Halifax City Council with some share of benefit to the ratepayers if at the cutting away of many valuable hours from the prosecution of his own private interests, Mr. Pearson decided to fly at higher game and in 1901 an effort to book a seat in the Provincial Legislature of Nova Scotia proved successful. Again returned in 1906, he was on 22 December of that year appointed to the Cabinet as Minister without portfolio, and is recognised by men of both political parties as a politician of merit and of promise.

The hon. gentleman was born at Masstown, Colchester Co., Nova Scotia, in 1855, and was educated at Pictou Academy, and Dalhousie College, Halifax. Early in life his inclinations led him to the ranks of journalism and today he is president of the "Chronicle Publishing Co", Halifax, and of the "Sun" Publishing Co. of St. John. Mr. Pearson resides at Halifax, where he is a member of the Halifax and City clubs, and in addition figures on the membership roll of the St. James Club, Montreal.

MISS CARRIE DERICK

There has been a remarkable change in the women's teaching profession in Canada during the past score of years. Many will yet remember that at a time not so very remote, almost anybody who was so circumstanced as to be compelled to earn a livelihood was apt to promptly go into the teaching profession, and open a day school. And many good and clever men and women have come to us from the old-fashioned "Dame's School". But this system is of the past, and today the woman school teacher must have passed every possible examination herself before setting up as an imparter of knowledge. Many Canadian women have climbed much higher in the profession than that of the School Ma'am and of these both at home and in the United States, Miss Carrie Derick, who holds down the important position of Professor of Botany at McGill University, Montreal, is accounted a bright particular star.

HON. DR. SPROULE

New Speaker of House of Commons

The appointment of Dr. Sproule to the Speakership seems to have given wide satisfaction, the Hon. gentleman being generally recognised as an all round fair minded man. Next to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Honorable John Haggart Dr. Sproule is the veteran of the Dominion House of Commons, having been first elected in 1878. He has sat continuously for East Grey since that time and he has been such a worthy representative that in his home constituency he enjoys the esteem and confidence of all classes of citizens, no matter what their political beliefs may be.

Dr. Sproule was born in the county of York, of Irish parentage and graduated in medicine from Toronto University in 1868. He has had a somewhat varied business career having variously conducted drug and stationery businesses, flour and saw mill enterprises and for the past twenty-three years having been a successful farmer. He was however during all this time continuing his profession as a practising physician. He is a Methodist and grand master of the Orange Association of British America.

ARTIFICIAL RUBBER.

Said to be Quite as Good as the Grown Article.

About forty years ago two young chemists announced that they had succeeded in manufacturing indigo. The method used by them was entirely independent of the indigo plants. The yield was extremely small, and there seemed to be no promise in the method of future commercial success. A quarter of a century later or thereabout the manufacturer was supplying the world with artificial indigo, and the occupation of the indigo planter, if not gone, was going. And now the chemical world is all agog about rubber. This substance obtained mainly from South and Centre America, though, of late years, owing to a great increase in the demand for it, plantations have been started, especially in Ceylon and the Malay Peninsula and Archipelago, and these are now contributing to the world's supply. Deep incisions are made near the base of the tree. The liquid flowing from these incisions is heated to drive off most of the water, and the residue is the impure rubber of the market. The valuable constituent is caoutchouc, a colourless, elastic, amorphous substance. This has long been known, but little has been learned in regard to its chemical nature until erecently. Last year a specimen of artificial rubber was exhibited at Berlin identical in all its properties with the natural substance. At present there appears, to be sure, to be little prospect of early commercial success along the line suggested, but the results already reached are of such interest as to incite to many efforts to solve the problem.

Sterilising Earth Around Posts.

Patent post holes have long been humorously referred to in connection with machines for grinding smoke, left-hand wheel barrows, and other imaginary inventions. It has remained, however, for a Budapest inventor to make what is probably an important improvement relating particularly to post holes, seeking to thus preserve the wood of the posts. Instead of applying preservatives to the wooden posts, railroad ties, sleepers or other wood exposed to the action of the earth, he treats the earth which surrounds the wooden post in such manner as to destroy all insect, germ and fungus life by soaking the earth with a suitable sterilizing liquid. The process is termed "Peristerilization," and is claimed to be especially useful in rural and other remote districts in which it is inconvenient to obtain wood which has been treated with creosote or similar preservative.

The Work of the Human Heart.

The average human heart is a suction and force pump of remarkable capacity and durability. Each of its two chambers contains, on an average, 75 cubic centimeters or 4.575 cubic inches; the total contents of 150 cubic centimeters or 9.15 cubic inches being discharged 81 times a minute, corresponding to a delivery of 12.150 cubic centimeters (12.15 liters) or 741 cubic inches per minute, 729 liters or 25.73 cubic feet per hour. Expressed in U. S. gallons, the average human heart pumps through it each hour 192.6 gallons; each day, 4,622.4 gallons; each year 1,687,176 gallons; and in the adult life time of a man living to the age sung by the Psalmist 8,435,880 gallons. The pressure against which this fluid is pumped is equivalent to that of a water-column 2½ meters or say 8 feet 2.42 inches high; otherwise expressed, about 0.242 atmospheres or 3.55 pounds avoirdupois per square inch.

THE FUNNIEST THING I EVER SAW.

By Chas. Thomas

(Copyright by Publishers Press, Ltd.)

The funniest thing I ever saw would not make you laugh because you never saw it, and if I had the skill to make you see it probably you would not think it funny. Then again, the older you grow the fewer funny things you see. What a lot of laughter there was thirty or forty years ago! Only at Christmas do we have laughter these days. Whither has it fled? In childhood, nearly every discomfort or disaster to others is food for laughter, whilst your own little troubles are tragedies fit for tears. It is a curious thing that the funny things you see always involve a certain amount of cruelty, pain, or at least discomfort, to others, and I suppose as one grows older the painful side of the matter oppresses you more than the funny side inspires to laughter.

There are some human attributes that are always laughable. Of these the chief is fatness. The troubles of a fat man or woman are always comic. Littleness, if it amounts to weeness, is comic in a somewhat less degree; and thinness may move folk to laughter, but scarcely unless it be added to some amusing eccentricity. Height and tallness are not funny. One never heard of a king employing a giant as a jester or a butt. The dwarf, on the other hand, has been cast for such parts from time immemorial.

I believe quite small babies see a lot of funny things; certainly they laugh to themselves without end, and seem to find their surroundings full of amusement. I have no doubt the funniest thing one ever saw is cinematographed on some ancient film at the back of one's brain so far out of reach that the memory cannot get at it.

Children undoubtedly see most of the fun. I remember many years ago a well-known actor, was staying with me in my little home. The house had a small verandah doorway with two narrow doors, one of which was usually bolted, as it was a windy place, and the outlet by the half-door was, to say the least of it, meagre.

It was a summer afternoon, and I was lolling in a deck-chair beneath our only tree, and the children, four of them, from five years old to twelve were sitting on the lawn in front of the doorway basking in the sun. Suddenly Calvert appeared at the doorway, and accidentally stuck in it as he was coming through.

The children caught sight of this, and on the moment were off in fits of laughter, which good manners required them to stifle as he came among us. But if laughter challenges manners the latter generally get the worst of it, and the mere memory of the incident sent one or another off into small explosions of laughter.

Calvert, who always wanted to be in at any fun, sought explanations which only made them laugh the more and reprove each other for doing it. Whilst their attention was so engaged I told Calvert what the joke was.

A few minutes later he went back into the house, making an elaborate side-way entrance which started young audience on the laugh ag[illegible] and all eyes were fastened on the d[illegible] watching for his return.

And he did return, and gave us on[illegible] of the finest pantomines I have eve[illegible] seen. He came along loading a pipe and not looking at the doorway at all and stuck fairly fast in it before he was aware that he was up to it, and opened his eyes in annoyance and amazement. Four shouts of laughter greeted him. Fingers of delighted mockery were pointed at him, and he made a face as if he was on the brink of tears which drew echoing tears of uncontrollable laughter from the youngsters. Then his pipe dropped on to the shingle path in front of the door, and he dived to get it and failed and grabbed and kicked in the air until the children threw themselves on the ground and sobbed, and begged him to leave off for he was hurting them. Then Calvert gave them a moment's respite, pulled himself together and, still fast in the doorway rested his head on the doorpost and thought dismally, whilst the audience sobbed and sniffed and slowly recovered breath enough to laugh again. By a mighty effort he now backed out of the doorway, and approached it, as Uncle Remus would say, "behime' first. This was a signal for yells of delight, the more so as the manoeuvre resulted in the most undignified and comic failure.

This business having nearly reduced the audience to exhaustion, there was further pantomime of deep and expressive thought, followed by a solemn retirement within doors, and a laboured and careful pulling at the bolts of the other half of the door and a ceremonial entrance through the whole double space of it with a smile and sigh of supreme content at the glorious triumph over difficulties undergone and vanquished.

I can see in my mind's eye a middle-aged gentleman, with tears rolling down his cheeks, and four absolutely limp children lying on the grass still gasping with laughter—dying with laughter as the phrase is—and begging Calvert in the intervals of their spasms to "Do it aain!"

One of the funniest things I ever saw, since I was grown up, was a baby struggling to find its way to its mouth with a rusk. Why don't they have a baby doing that at a music-hall, to slow music, or at least show one on a cinematograph? I could laugh at such a thing "sans intermission an hour by the dial." How it jabs itself in the eye with the soft end of the biscuit, and bedaubs its cheeks and clothes with the debris and kicks and fights in disgust and loses the biscuit in a temper, and, if not assisted by an over-indulgent mother, finds the biscuit after infinite search, and goes at it again with renewed energy, and at length is rewarded by success.

The average man thinks that while he doesn't personally know President Taft, and other distinguished men, they "know him."

Will Deal With Spain.

Paris, Nov. 14.—Mohammed Sidi-el-Mokhri, the Moroccan ambassador to France, was appointed Grand Vizier yesterday by Mulai Abd-el-Hafid, the Sultan of Morocco. This appointment is the first act in affirming the the French protectorate in Morocco, and it will signalise the active opening of negotiations between France and Spain to determine the status of Spain in Morocco.

Notwithstanding the existence of secret treaties, France will contend that Spain should compensate her by abandoning a part of her sphere of influence because of the concessions in French Congo which France made to Germany in return for the right to establish a protectorate in Morocco. In other words, France contends that she has paid part of Spain's bill to Germany.

How to Stain Wood in Your Growing Trees

The interesting experiment of dyeing the wood in living trees, says a writer, has been successfully carried out by making a fine groove around the trunk deep enough to expose the wood just inside the bark

A string having a diameter slightly greater than the groove is wound around the trunk completely filling the groove and thus protecting the wood from the action of the air. If now the ends of the string dip into a solution of coloring matter, the latter is absorbed by the tree. The solution is renewed until the wood is dyed to the desired intensity. Observations are made from time to time by boring small holes into the tree.

The length of time necessary to dye the wood depends upon the species of tree, the temperature and the season of the year. The best results are obtained just before the leaves fall in the Autumn. The absorption of the coloring matter is selective; that is to say, all coloring matter is not absorbed by every tree, and in general decided preference is shown for the colored extracts of other trees.

The wood is not stained uniformly, and the mottled effects are very beautiful. The color in the heart of the tree is not perceptibly changed.

Strength of Human Bone.

Fortunately the human skull, although composed of bones is elastic — much more so than one would think. The average male adult skull, in fact, is so elastic that it may be compressed laterally in diameter by a blow or by pressure, applied at the center of area, at right angles to the surface at that point, by 1½ centimeter or about six-tenths of an inch; recovering its original diameter and form, without breakage. The material of which our bones are made is so highly resistant that a cylindrical piece thereof only one square millimeter or 0.00155 square inch in area (i. e. only 1,128 millimeter or 0.044 inch in diameter) has a tensile strength of 15 kilograms or 33 pounds avoirdupois, figuring out at about 21,300 pounds per square inch. A similar sample of hard wood tested in the same manner held only 10 kilograms — that is, bone has 50 per cent more tensile strength than wood.

Electrified Pupils the Cutest

Electrified and ozonised houses are likely to be an improvement of the near future. On the recommendation of Prof. Svante Arrhenius, 25 children in a Stockholm school are placed in a class room that is kept charged with electricity, and 25 other children of the same health, height, weight, etc., are placed in another room of identical size and conditions. Although complete results have not yet been reached, it has been already affirmed that physical and mental development have been greater among the electrified pupils than among the others.

A Narcotic Cartridge

Karl Burgsmuller, of Kreiensen, Germany, has devised a means for temporarily narcotising animals, i.e. rendering them insensible. He fills a cartridge with a mixture composed of substances containing capsicine in an immediately gasifiable form, and of easily inflammable substances to accelerate the gasification. This is combined with a small quantity of an explosive agent between the mixture and an explosive cap with which the cartridge is provided. Possibly this is the explosive of the pistols sold for rendering burglars insensible.

Dogs have no constitution, and no courts of justice; yet they have more rights and liberties than most people.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

TRAIN STALLED BY SNOW STORM

Fall of Beautiful Was Heavy In North Country

The heavy downpour of rain Sunday morning which was followed by a fierce windstorm and blizzard of snow and continued cold weather today is the topic of conversation in town to-day, but back north the fierce snow storm is the talk of the country.

The Haliburton train was just one hour and a half behind time reaching Lindsay this morning, owing to a snow blockade, the first this season in the vicinity of Kinmount. At Haliburton snow fell to the depth of two inches or more, but between Gelert and Kinmount the snow was packed two feet deep on the Grand Trunk tracks, and the passenger train was stalled good and tight. In order to get through the drifts the engine was uncoupled from the train and after several boisterous snorts and much exhaust of steam managed to plow her way through the drifts. The engine then returned for the balance of the train, but was forced to leave several cars behind at Gelert.

At Fenelon Falls only a slight sprinkling fell—Lindsay Warder,

ABOUT REGISTERING

To the Editor of the Review.

To my fellow countrymen. Gentlemen—I want you all to remember that in order to be able to record your vote in the coming Ontario election on December 11th, you will have to register again. The Ontario registration covers the Dominion election but the Dominion election came first and it does not cover the Ontario election. Hence it is necessary for you all to register again. All who have been in Canada for 12 months and residents of Peterboro for 3 months, will be able to register a vote in this next election for the Onatrio Legislature Some of you who were not able to vote of the Dominion election will be able to vote this time. I am anxious that all of you who are entitled to vote, shall do so. Will you do your best to make it known amongst all from the Old Land, the conditions I have stated so that they may register and record their vote. Now boys it seems to me, that the great question in this coming election is that the English language shall be predominant. There are at present, no less than 300 bi-lingual schools in Ontario alone, where English and French is taught. Settlers come to Canada from all parts of the Globe and it is in my opinion, absolutely necessary, if Canada is to remain a British colony that the English language. Bi-lingual schools are against this. We must return members pledged to vote aginst bi-lingual schools, who will vote in parliament in favor of the English language only being taught.

HOPEFUL LIBERALS CROWD MASSEY HALL TO HEAR THEIR NEWLY CHOSEN LEADER

Hon. Mackenzie King Occupies Chair at Big Meeting, But all Ears Were for Rowell—No Definite Stand Taken on the Bi-lingual Question.

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Young Liberalism turned out last night in honor of the new leader, who has been so cordially hailed by the party in all quarters of Ontario. Old Liberalism sat on the Massey Hall platform, also, and Dr. Albert Carman and Senator Cox represented the progress of fifty years ago. The applause at the close of Mr. Rowell's speech indicated thorough satisfaction on the part of all classes of Liberals.

Those who crowded the big hall were warmly enthusiastic and broke into applause whenever there was any warrant.

The best Liberalism of the city was in evidence, and there was a really large contingent from outside points, interested in the inauguration of the new leadership of N. W. Rowell, K.C.

W. L. M. King was suave in the chair and his speech pleased his auditors, but Mr. Rowell's address was the objective point as the thinning out of the house showed when he concluded.

As N. W. Rowell and Hon. Mackenzie King came on the platform the band played "The Maple Leaf," and the big audience rose en masse and cheered and cheered again. The crowds of students up in the top gallery gave the Varsity yell.

Among those on the platform, in addition to N. W. Rowell and Hon. Mackenzie King, were: Ex-Mayor Jos. Oliver, E. Fielding, Dr. A. Carman, J. E. Atkinson, Senator Jaffray, Senator Kerr, Dr. J. A. Macdonald, G. W. Verral, Wallace Cruickshank, A. E. Dyment, Gideon Grant, James Ryrie, J. W. Curry, R. J. McCormick and many others.

Hon. Mackenzie King introduced N. W. Rowell as the honored leader of the Ontario Liberal party and the future Premier of this province.

Mr. Rowell received on ovation.

"I have read with very great interest the comments of the Conservative press upon our platform," said Mr. Rowell, "Some have suggested it is a milk and water platform; others that it is unprogressive, but all join in a chorus that it is very like Sir James Whitney's. I am quite willing to admit that they are right when inferentially they state that the policy of Sir James is a milk and water one and that it is unprogressive, but I am not prepared to admit that our policy is the counterpart of that of Sir James.

"Under our system of party government, the best interests of the country require a strong and vigorous opposition, and so long as any Government has a sufficient working majority, the stronger the Opposition, the better in the interests of the country. I have never met on Conservative who has not frankly stated that it would be both in the interest of the Government and the country if the Liberal Opposition were very much stronger than it is to-day.

"I appeal to all electors, irrespective of party, to unite with us in securing the election to the Legislature of such a strong body of Liberals as will guarantee, u we do not control the Government, that the Opposition will be able to perform to the full the true functions of an Opposition and fully and fearlessly investigate and criticise all actions of the Government that appear to call for investigation, or criticism, and to force upon the consideration of the Government and the country progressive legislation in the public interests.

"It is not my intention this evening to attempt to discuss with you all the planks in our platform. I shall only attempt to touch briefly upon three or four. I shall have the opportunity of discussing the others at subsequent meetings.

"We propose that immigration agencies shall be established in co-operation with the Dominion Government, or independent of it if need be, which shall bring to the attention of intending immigrants the character and resources of this province. We propose, and it is indispensable to the settlement of that new country, that roads shall be built by the Government.

"We propose to secure loans to a limited extent, secured upon his clearing, repayable over a number of years, to enable him to get a start, a policy pursued by New Zealand with great success, and we will grant special assistance in the establishment and carrying on of public schools, believing these to be indispensable to secure the best developments of these new communities.

"The question of bilingual schools has aroused great public interest throughout this province. The problem in its working out is largely one of teachers and administration and it is in this view that we have adopted the following policy on which we stand.

"To provide through adequate training schools a sufficient supply of competent teachers and thus insure their proper regulations that the pupils in every school in the province shall receive a thorough English education.

"We submit for the judgment of the electors two very important specific proposals with regard to the liquor question. The first is the abolition of the three-fifths vote in local option contests.

"This three-fifths requirement we propose to abolish at once with reject to all future contests, so that all municipalities hereafter adopting local option may carry it by a simple majority and repeal it by a like majority. Those which have passed local option by a three-fifths vote will still require a three-fifths vote to repeal it.

"Another plank in our platform is that during the continuance of the license system we will secure the removal of its administration from political influence.

"Let our ambition be to maintain Ontario's premier place among the provinces of our Dominion, and as an essential and integral part of our great confederation, let us seek to make Canada the most progressive, influential and loyal factor in the Empire, which Mr. Balfour has so aptly described as a coalition of free nations."

"STRONG MAN" OF CHINA CAN GET POSITION OF PRESIDENT

The "Strong Man" Will Only Accept Premiership With a Fixed Term of Office — Rebel Leader Says He Would Accept Yuan as Leader of Republic Which Most Persons Desire—Another Government Set Up.

Pekin, Nov. 15.—While the Imperial Government is endeavoring to force the Premiership on Yuan Shi Kai, China's "strong man," in his various conferences yesterday with the Prince Regent, the acting Premier, Prince Ching, and other members of the nominal Cabinet, took occasion to point out the insecurity of that office, the retention of which depended upon the caprice of the National Assembly. Yuan Shi Kai, if he accepts the Premiership at all, desires a fixed term of office, and he so stated to the Regent. But he must obtain this through the National Assembly, as an edict would be likely to arouse suspicion.

It is not considered probable that Yuan Shi Kai will undertake the gigantic task set for him unless he considers the chances favorable to carrying it to a successful issue. There is still another possibility—he may be considering the alternative of a republic and may himself recommend the abdication of the Emperor.

He reports that the rebel leader, Gen. Li Yuen Heng, said he would obey his orders if Yuan would consent to become president, but would not recognize him as a Manchu Premier. In his opinion, it would not be difficult to reconcile the provinces, the most of which were giving the strongest evidences of a desire for peace. The complete constitution already pledged would satisfy the revolutionaries, except for the fear that Manchu intrigue would begin immediately arms were laid down.

One of the prominent members of the National Assembly yesterday informed a foreign legation attache that, although the Assembly had committed itself to a constitution under the Manchu dynasty, a majority of the Assembly would prefer to reorganize the Government on the lines of a republic.

The president of the Ta Ching Government Bank has deserted his post and fled from the city. The vice-president, Chang Chin Tao, who was recently in Europe in connection with a currency loan, is endeavoring to conduct the wrecked institution. As the provinces secede the various branches of this Government bank is confiscated. At only one or two treaty ports were the deposits saved by hasty transfer to foreign banks.

Financial stress is being felt by the administration. The board of finance has only about $300,000, the palace, it is said, having contributed largely to famine funds and other charities, as well as for the Hankow and other campaigns.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Another independent republic was set up in China, according to Consul Fowler at Che Foo, who reported yesterday at the State Department that the former governor of Shan Tung Province, Sun Hao Chi, had been selected as head of the republic of Shan Tung, which yield to the revolutionists without a struggle.

AERONAUT TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

His Jump From Channel Steamer Was Premediated.

Paris, Nov. 15.—The U. S. consul here has been notified from Calais that it is believed that Edgar W. Mix, the well known sportsman, committed suicide by jumping from a channel steamer which left Dover for Calais Sunday night.

Mix, who was formerly of Columbus, Ohio, has been engaged in business in Paris for many years, and being a member of both the Aero Club of France and the Aero Club of America, has represented both countries in international contests. He was a noted aeronaut, and won the international balloon race at Zurich, Switzerland, on Oct. 5, 1909.

Delloma said that he killed his sister when she refused him money, and then slew his mother when she attacked him. Fearing that the cries of the little girl would bring help the shoemaker blew the child's brains out.

TURNED SHIP TO AID OPERATION

Operation for Appendicitis Performed During Heavy Gale.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—The three latest arrivals in port, the Ausonia, the Corsican and the Lake Manitoba, all report unusually light passages, without a single day of moderate weather, which explains the fact that all were late in reaching Montreal.

On board the Ausonia a young Swede was taken suddenly ill and an operation for appendicitis was immediately necessary. The captain turned the ship to face the gale that was blowing and the operation was successfully performed by the ship's surgeon. The patient was doing well on arrival here and was taken to one of the hospitals.

EVIDENCE IS DAMAGING

Sinister Letter Received by Pole Facing Murder

Montreal, Nov. 15.—"Dear Friend.—We inform you we have done what you wanted; we have looked for him and succeeded in catching him. He will live no longer to lick you or anybody else. Only bones and dirt will remain of him. We have done it so no one will know about it. We wanted to come to your house, but we have decided not to go as it would perhaps look bad for us to be seen together. I write you this note, and soon as you receive it you will come to us, and you shall not boast of it, so that it shall come out something bad for us three. Now that you know that which you have wished has been done, hide this note and come to us and we will tell you what became of him."

The above unsigned letter, received by the young Pole, John Senuck, charged with instigating the attempted murder of Michael Schulin, 59 Manufacturers street, was the principal part of the evidence heard in the enquete court yesterday in this attempted murder case, where four unknown men bound Schulin to the axle of a freight car a few weeks ago. Senuck was arrested as being back of this plot on account of the above letter, which he admits receiving, but says he knows nothing about.

ON VERGE OF BATTLE

Critical Situation Passed by Britain and Germany

Special to the Review.

London, Nov. 15.—Arthur Ponsonby, M.P., who was private secretary to the late Campbell Bannerman, when Premier, speaking at the new Reform Club last night he said: "Only to-day I was assured, and I believe the statement to be true, that last September Britain was on the very verge of war, and that the North Sea fleet cleared for action and had torpedo nets out in expectation of attack from the German torpedo boats."

No Feudalism Intended.

London, Nov. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Duke of Sutherland emphasizes the fact that he has bought land in Canada not for forming a large estate, but he is anxious to have settlers, not tenants. His insistance on this point is perhaps forthcoming, because a prominent Liberal paper expressed fears that the duke's action if copied by others might lead to the establishment of a Canadian feudal system.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Nov. 15.—The twelfth parliament of Canada was formally opened this afternoon practically every member being in his seat. At noon the members were sworn in, the veteran, David Henderson, being the first to sign the roll. Prominent men with their wives and daughters and military officers filled the lobbies all day. At three o'clock the house assembled and were summoned to the senate chamber when it was found that the election of the speaker had been overlooked. They trooped back again and remedied this by choosing Dr. Sproule, Sir Wilfrid Laurier seconding the Premier's motion. It is understood the speech from the throne to-morrow will be of a formal character.

KAISER'S POWER IS THREATENED

Reichstag Should Have Voice in Moroccan Agreement.

Berlin, Nov. 15.—The general criticism in connection with the Moroccan agreement with France that the Reichstag should have a voice in the conclusion of such momentous treaties has made a breach in the constitutional position of the Emperor as a treaty-making power.

Vice-Chancellor Delbrucke yesterday announced to the committee of the Reichstag to whom the Franco-German treaty had been referred, that the Government had concluded that Parliament should be consulted in any treaty involving the acquisition or cession of colonial territory. Therefore, they accepted the proposed statute requiring the assent of the Reichstag and the Bundesrath to any change in the boundary of a colony, but the Moroccan-Congo treaty was excluded under the existing law.

IS GUILTY OF MURDER

Decision Against Joseph Jessiman to be Appealed

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Joseph R. Jessiman, charged with killing James Lougheed on Hayter street, on May 29 last, was found guilty of murder yesterday in the criminal assizes.

His counsel will appeal the decision on the plea of insanity. Justice Riddell intimated that he would defer punishment until further investigation.

The evidence brought out in the case pointed to insanity, caused by brooding over fancied wrongs.

"I made an examination of Jessiman under a standing order I have from the Government to enquire into the mental condition of every person committed to jail, who is charged with a capital offence, and whom the plea is insanity," said Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons and public charities. He declared that Jessiman is a paranoic. He is suffering from a progressive disease of the brain, and is curable. He had been in such a condition two or three years, and was undoubtedly insane on May 29, when he shot Lougheed.

NEW MOVE IN HEBERT CASE

Plaintiff's Counsel Presents Peti tion for Invalidation.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—A new inciden to the Hebert marriage case sprang up in the Superior Court yesterday when Mr L. J. Lefebvre, attorney for plaintiff, presented a petition for invalidation of decision of the family council which had appointed Mrs. Hebert (Emma Clouatre) tutrix to the child born from the contested marriage.

It was alleged that the child had been declared illegitimate by the court on petition of the defendant, and that the present petition had been made to procure possession of the baby.

Mr. G. V. Cousins, attorney for Mrs Hebert, and who was appointed subrogate tutor to the child, appeared on behalf of the mother, and opposed the petition. Mr. Justice Charbonneau ruled that the case would be argued on its merits and the enquete was postponed until next week.

RUSSIA RESENTS METHODS OF UNITED STATES IN PERSIA

Great Btitain is Also Irritated by Attempts at Construc tive Financing Made by Republic's Ambassador.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The crisis in Persia involves the peace of all countries in which Mohammedans have found a footing, and not alone the future of W. Morgan Shuster or the American financial structure which he has endeavored to raise in the eastern country, according to information reaching official circles in Washington from various parts of the east.

The ultimatum from Russia to Persia, that apology must be made for the seizure of the property of the deposed Shah's brother, is the culmination, apparently, of developments that have been steady since American financial experts were selected by the new Nationalist Government to attempt the regeneration of the finances and commerce of the country.

It is claimed here that the grant to Mr. Shuster, as treasurer-general of complete executive power, did much to irritate Russia. The vigorous assertion by Mr. Shuster and the Persian Assembly of the complete independence of the country and its freedom from any obligation to Russia or Great Britain, has been a source of irritation to the former, and of criticism from leading sources in Great Britain.

There now is a disposition amongst leading figures in Mohammedanism to construe as a concerted assault on the Mohammedan people the continued attack upon Persia, and the situations in Tripoli, Morocco and in parts of India. How far this unrest of the Mohammedans will develop if Persia becomes, more seriously involved with Russia, officials here are not ready to say.

Persia is regarded as the brains of the Mohammedan faith. Although the country has only 15,000,000 inhabitants, its history and influence are regarded with veneration by the 300,000,000 Mohammedans of Europe, Asia and Africa. While a holy war is not considered imminent, the situation is complicated.

Grey Fears Complications.

London, Nov. 15.—In the House of Commons yesterday John Dillon called the attention of the Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, to published statements by W. Morgan Shuster the American treasurer-general of Persia, charging that Great Britain and Russia were obstructing his work and interfering with the independence of Persia.

The Secretary promised that he would deal with the matter in a statement to the House as soon as opportunity offered. Meantime, he said, Shuster had been informed that his suggested employment of Britishers in North Persia was bound to antagonize Russia, because it would create the impression that Russian influence was being displaced by British; and it was to the interest of Persia that neither Britishers nor Russians be appointed to administrative posts on the Persian frontiers of India and Russia.

Chest Inflammation

Suffered From a Heavy Cold, Pleuritic Pains in Side — Constant Coughing.

"Anyone that goes through all that suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden the well-known violinist of Middleton. "My work kept me out late at night, and singing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh racking cough and severe pains darting through my side and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniment but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy and enjoy perfect health."

Nerviline CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing essences and medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large bottles, 50c, trial size 25c. Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

SMITH BANK NEWS

Special Correspondence

Smith Bank, Nov. 15.—Having seen in your valuable paper utterances from the villages of Beaufort and Lorena, and Tannerville, regarding sulkey plows, I think it not improbable that I should voice the sentiments of our community on the question. I believe were a personal canvass made, that without exception, the sentiments of the Beaufort writer would be endorsed. There are several of these plows in use around here, and all are used by the farmers themselves, or their employes. We cannot imagine this recreation being helpful to even a member of the fairier sex, as the necessary talking to horses would be disastrous to even the strongest of them.

Mr. John Blakely has completed his new stable and will soon have finished his season's threshing.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

The British Blue-Jacket

The British Navy is essentially a service which keeps very much to itself, the consequence being that the public know very little of what goes on inside of the mystic circle of reticence. It is, however, a profession in which the most loyal co-operation between officers and men has to be the rule if good results are to be forthcoming. That they are forthcoming is only too evident when we read in the newspapers of ships doing well at target practice, etc.

A naval life is perforce a very hard one, for sailors all the world over and unlike their comrades in the Army, are always living under active service conditions. They always have the elements, the most powerful and merciless of foes, to contend with and when folk ashore are listening to the wind howling in their chimneys, our sailors are at sea preparing themselves for the day when our right to the title "Mistress of the Seas" will be disputed.

That they take it cheerfully may be deduced from the remark of one old salt of a bygone era, who, in a southwesterly gale in the English Channel and the foretopmast of his ship having just broken off close to the cap, remarked to his chum, "Lor' bless me Bill, but I'm werry glad I ain't ashore. Just think as 'ow the chimbley pots u'd be flyin' about in this 'ere breeze!"

That remark sums up the spirit of the present day man-of-war's man very succinctly, for above all things he is a person who takes the rough with the smooth in a philosophical way, having been bred to danger since the day of his entry into the service.

Science for Its Own Sake.

Sir James Dewar recently pointed out that the whole cost of a century's research of experiments at the British Royal Institution has been only about £120,000. What an insignificant sum to pay for the benefits mankind had received from the splendid investigations of Young, Davy, Faraday, Tyndall, Dewar himself, and others. Yet most of the labours of these men were carried out honoris causa, and not for immediate material benefit.

It must be very impressive to see such a large sea monster crying."

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The basis for raising estimates on the Argentine wheat output to-day was a belief that the acreage had been calculated too low, although figured at an increase of nearly one-sixth over 1907. News of this sort from South America seemed to act as a wet blanket on prospects for a material advance in quotations. Besides, the world's available supply of wheat was shown to have climbed to the colossal total of a year ago.

Nevertheless, scattered commission sources absorbed all pit offerings, resisted every raid and brought the market back from each decline. The reason was that winter wheat receipts southwest were sensationally small, presumably owing to recent rough weather and low prices combined. Moreover, the leading cash interests here reported sales large, tho naming no specific quantity. In the end the opposing influences appeared to be evenly balanced, and the closing tone was steady. During the session December fluctuated between 92 3-4c and 92 7-8c and 93 3-4c, with the last sales 92 1-2c and 93 5-8c, a net gain of a shade.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ½d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¼-1 higher on corn. Berlin closed ¼c lower. Buda Pest ⅛c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—There was considerable enquiry from foreign buyers for No. 1 and No. 2 northern Manitoba spring wheat, but as the prices bid for such were 1c to 1½c per bushel out of line with prices here, no business could be done. The demand for low grades and sample wheat was much quieter, and sales of only a few loads were made.

Business in oats on spot was quiet, as buyers are now fairly well supplied for the present. Demand for car lots of American corn is fair. The trade in flour continues fair, and some business was done for export. Mill feed is fairly active with a good enquiry from foreign buyers for supplies. Demand for cheese is fair. Butter is active and eggs are moving freely.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 81½c to 82c.

Oats—Canadian western No. 2, 47½c to 48c; Canadian western No. 3, 47c to 47½c; extra, No. 1 feed, 46½c to 47c; No. 2 local white, 46c to 46½c; No. 3 local white, 45½c to 46c; No. 4 local white, 45c to 45½c.

Barley Manitoba fed, 82c; malting, $1 to $1.01; buckwheat No. 2, 65c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, first, $5.60; seconds, $5.10; strong bakers, $4.90; winter patents, choice, $4.75 to $5; straight rollers, $4.25 to $4.40, in bags, $1.95 to $2.05.

Rolled oats—Per barrel, $5.25; bag of 90 lbs., $2.50.

Bran—$23; shorts, $25; middlings, $27 to $28; mouillie, $27 to $34.

Hay—No. 2 per ton car lots, $13.50 to $14.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 14½c to 14⅝c; finest easterns, 14c to 14¼c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 27½c to 27¾c; seconds, 26c to 27c.

Eggs—Fresh, 40c; selected, 30c; No. 1 stock, 24½c.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

— BY —

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

Anstruther smiled a[illegible] seemed a somewhat informal manner of addressing a princess.

"Not much wood," grumbled the crone.

"Oh, the wood's all right. It's a warm night and we shan't want much."

"Water very bad, makes men sick."

"That is why you have camped by it. All right, old Loveliness. I'm on to your curves. Doesn't seem to hanker much after our society, does she, Mrs. Rolt?" he said laughingly, as he took the horses, and led them away.

Returning in a little while, his axe chopped out the roots at which Anstruther had been vainly tugging, cut down a dozen trees and stripped them whilst he whistled, so that the beds were heaped high with sweet-smelling hemlock; the fly was tightened and set firmly between its guy, and the fire made to leap and glow like a merry heart in the gloom.

It is not a bad thing for other people to have one man amongst them who knows how to help himself.

And now as the afternoon waned, an Indian appeared dragging the first deer into camp.

In the course of the next hour he and four others returned at one time, bringing with them seven deer in all, enough meat to last them with ordinary care for a month or six weeks.

"I wonder if it is too dark to take a photograph," asked Anstruther, who had grown tired of doing nothing. "Just think what a ripping picture all those solemn-looking beggars would make, squatting by the fire, with the princess grubbing in the ashes.

"It's much too dark, and, besides, I don't think that they would like it," replied Mrs. Rolt.

"Like it. It can't hurt them. They ought to feel flattered that any one cares to preserve their awful faces," and so saying, he strolled nonchalantly over to the neighboring camp.

"I wish he would not do it," muttered Mrs. Rolt, undecidedly.

"Oh, what nonsense, Mary," replied the girl, "you really are too absurd about those Indians. I've photographed them before and they did not mind a bit, but he will come back if you call him."

Unfortunately, Mrs. Rolt wavered and neglected her opportunity.

With perfect assurance Anstruther strolled up to the four sullen figures who glowered at him as he came, but did not move a muscle.

"Nice evening," he said, "isn't it. I don't happen to speak your lingo but hope I see you well. Ever had your pictures taken?"

Still the four remained motionless.

"Not in a conversational mood, eh? Well, perhaps that is better. Mustn't talk whilst the operation is being performed. Put your head a little on one side, sir. No savvy, eh! Well, think of 'er, old chappie," and he pointed to Emma with a grin, and kneeling down adjusted his camera, aiming it right into the faces of the silent group.

"As he did so Emma disappeared into the tent.

"Whoop! Gone to ground," he shouted with a laugh, and the four, rising with a growl, turned their backs upon him.

For a moment he was nonplussed, but the devil of island insolence had possession of him, and he knew that Kitty was watching him. Still on his knees he reached for a long stick from the fire, and bending forward, tossed it so the hot end of it fell upon the nearest Indian's bare foot.

Quick as thought the Chilcoten turned, and for a moment the women drew their breath and feared for what was to come, but the camera clicked and the fire still divided the aggressor from his victim.

"Got you, my beauty," said the unconscious artist," with quite your most engaging smile on," and utterly careless of the dumb wrath in the man's eyes, he put his camera into its case, and walked back, laughing, to his friends.

Mrs. Rolt and Jim, who had returned too late to interfere, did not join in his laugh, but the sullen faces of the outraged four, and the sight of Emma, the beautiful, peeping out to see if all was safe again, were too much for Kitty, who laughed till the tears ran down her cheeks.

"Oh, surely, Mrs. Rolt," protested Anstruther, between his peals of laughter, "there is nothing to look so serious about. One would think that you had been photographed. I didn't hurt the sulky brutes, and if they didn't like being photographed, what matter. You aren't afraid of Indians in this country, are you?"

"No, but we don't want enemies. At any rate, for goodness' sake, stop laughing. You can see how they hate it."

It is a curious trait of the Indians, at any rate of the Far West, that they themselves seldom or never laugh, whilst the merest hint that you are laughing even in the mildest way at them, puts their backs up immediately.

Like the vast plains and dumb forests through which they roam, they are by nature sombre, and a laugh is as much of an outrage to them as a thrush's song would be to the forest silence.

CHAPTER V.

If Anstruther had not been young and reckless, and the ladies accustomed for years to look upon all Indians as inoffensive, there would have been but little sleep in the white people's camp that night.

Th Indians did not sleep.

Through all that long night the hunters of the Chilcotens sat round their fire, smoking and muttering among themselves, casting now and again evil glances toward the spot where the white people lay.

Constant contact with men, armed with weapons of precision, has taken the courage out of the grizzly; it has had the same effect upon a tribe which is naturally one of the boldest and fiercest in Western Canada, but the instincts of the savage remain, and anyone with half an eye would have recognized that dull glow in the forest gloom as a storm centre.

An hour or two passed by, the night deepened, the drone of growling voices went on and then a figure detached itself from the gloom and slipped without a sound into the firelit circle.

Just then Jim Combe stirred in his sleep, and throwing one arm restlessly from his blankets, turning over on his side towards the Indian's fire, muttering in his sleep.

As he did so, the figure glided back into the shadows.

The bushes which seemed to have crept nearer to the fire listening, until their black leaves were tipped with red light, swallowed him up and for a full minute the droning ceased.

The silence which followed was more ominous even than that incessant muttering. The intent scrutiny of those watching eyes made itself felt. At last the chief spoke.

"The white dog dreams in his sleep," he said, "but his eyes are shut," and at once the figure returned and took its place in the muttering circle. Good hunter as Khelowna was, he made a mistake. His forest training should have taught him that the hunted feign often. If he had remembered that, Jim Combe might not have recognized in the fifth figure Davies' murderer, an Indian who had been wanted by the police for the last three years. As it was, Jim Combe knew what kind of a gang was travelling the Risky run that fall, and the hand which was beneath the blankets closed quietly round the lock of his Winchester.

But he did not stir in his place. He wanted that man's life as every cowboy in the district did, who had ever heard of poor old "Lofty" Hart, shot through his cabin window as he read his home letters by lamplight, but he was not prepared to risk the safety of the women for the chance of taking a murderer.

So he lay still and watched, his whole body crying out for sleep and his half closed lids heavy as lead.

Just before the grey of dawn came into the sky, he saw Khelowna hand something to his visitor, who put it into his shirt front and rising stole away.

One of the dogs, which had lain all night just inside the edge of the firelight, rose and attempted to follow him. It was his own dog probably, for though it cowered at the chief's low growl, it took no other notice of his command. Stealthily one of the younger bucks, reached for a billet of wood, and hurled it with so sure an aim, that the beast rolled over screaming with pain.

With a well-feigned start Jim Combe sat up in his blankets, but he was too late. Davies' murderer had vanished.

"Cultus dog," said the Indian who had thrown the billet, and rising went after the beast, which was crawling away on its belly, dragging its hind leg after it and howling at every movement.

The dumb beast is not allowed to complain in an Indian camp, and as this one would not cease howling, the bigger brute clubbed it over the head with a great tent peg; clubbed it until it lay very still.

That is the Indian method of making a sleigh dog obedient and one reason perhaps why no Indian dog ever shows any sign of affection for its master. When the beast lay still the Indian passed a rope round its neck and tied it up to a tree. The dog was not dead yet, and as it might possibly be made to work again, he did not want to lose it, but it was too nearly dead to bite, so he took one of its hind legs and moved it sideways. The leg moved easily from the thigh in a ghastly unnatural fashion, and the Indian laughed.

"Leg broke," he said. His shot with the pine billet had been a good one. Under that grey blanket by the white man's fire a lover of dogs felt his flesh creep and his hands clench, but Jim Combe, having been trained in a hard school, had learned when to interfere and when to bide his time. He could not help the poor beast now, and his first duty was to look after his boss's wife and that dear curly little head under the blue robe. After this the grey dawn began to come, a sad weird light, sifting through the pine trees, whilst the fires died down, and the tiny chick-a-dees began to call among the boughs, warning their woodmates that those silent footed things who use the "fire stick" were moving again in their lairs, and would soon be creeping up towards the high places whither the full-fed stags were already sauntering for a day's siesta after a long night's feed.

With the first hint of light, a busy stir began in the Indians' camp, even before that the women must have been moving in their lean-to, for Emma, bent and old, began to put out strangely compounded packs, blankets rolled and corded, and bloody parcels of meat.

Then the lean-tos came down, and they too were dissolved into packs, and before the dawn had come, the Indian camp was completely dismantled, the pack-horses loaded with hides and meat, and everything ready for a start.

The Indians were apparently not going to stay to cook breakfast.

It had been a successful hunt even for the Chilcotens, and every living thing in camp, except the braves, carried packs. Of course the braves would neither pack anything nor allow their saddle horses to be packed so long as there was a tottering old woman, a child, or a dog in camp, which could possibly be made to stagger under another pound.

When the procession had wound away into the woods, the toothless old princess leading, bending under a mountain of rugs, followed by bundles under which tiny bare legs tottered, and dogs upon whose backs clattered pots and pails, by the fire there still lay one bale of cedar matting.

The young buck who had thrown the pine billet came round, kicking the charred sticks and peering amongst the young pines stripped of their feathery frondage, and growing giants, brutally gashed and wounded so that their life blood would ooze slowly away from them, leaving them dry and fit for the camp fire, but though he turned over the brush bedding and looked at every extemporized peg on which anything could have been left hanging he found nothing.

The camp was empty, nothing had been left behind. Then his eye fell upon the bundle of cedar matting. It weighed nothing, so that he might have tied it on behind his saddle; it was worth nothing, so that he might have left it where it was, but his eye wandering around to find some one on whom to lay the worthless burden fell upon his victim of the night before, crouching where it had been tied, its head stretched out along the ground, not dead, but cowering to escape notice.

That was just what the Indian was looking for. Seizing the dog's rope, he untied it from the tree and dragged the unhappy beast towards the pack.

At the first jerk the dog howled with anguish, and Mrs. Rolt, whose ears were always open to a beast's cry of pain, turned sharply on her heel. The howl was of course rewarded with a curse and a kick, and then, screaming at every movement, the poor brute was jerked along the ground, its broken bones grinding together as it went.

In its agony it tried to bite its tormentor, and in a moment a club was in his hand again.

"Oh, my God, won't someone stop the brute," cried Kitty, almost in tears, but the elder woman, white with rage, said nothing. With her riding crop in her hand, and her fine nostrils wide and twitching, she was almost within striking distance of the Chilcoten, when a strong hand caught her and swung her unceremoniously out of the way.

MORRISCY'S LINIMENT UNEQUALLED

Says Physical Director Chatham Y. M. C. A.

CHATHAM, N. B., July 3 1910.

"Having used Father Morriscy's Liniment in my capacity as Physical Director of the Chatham Y. M. C. CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Careful Housewives Will Note that if Properly Cooked These Are Not to be Despised.

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water either with or without vegetables for seasoning is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat if too high a temperature is used it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for two or three cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife.

Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the meat.

All light meats are best stewed and browned just before serving. Mutton or beef is best browned first and then stewed. Cheaper cuts are best cooked in the fireless cooker. When roasting meat it should be quickly seared over to retain the juices and then cooked slowly until done. Usually fifteen minutes to the pound is required.

A KIMONA STYLE

The kimona form has been adapted by furriers to coats. The fur looks charming over drooping shoulders when it has no seam at the shoulder. Many of the new jackets are made upon this model.

Fancy Work for Spare Time

The girl who likes to keep a bit of work on hand for passing time hot summer mornings on the porch or in the woods will find an embroidered photograph frame useful.

A pretty frame can be made by cutting an opening in the centre of a stamped wreath such as come on many of the new dress fabrics. The opening should conform to the shape of the wreath, and the flowers and foliage can be raised by various stitches in embroidery silks or by a couched gilt outline.

Darned designs in huck are enjoying a revival. One handsome oval frame has a conventionalized wreath of penny leaves across the bottom of the frame and coming up each side where it ends in two large flowers in torch effect; a third flower comes from the top of the opening, at a lower level than the outside ones.

Such a design has the surface darned and the edges outlined. It can be worked in several tones of one colour, the darkest shade being the outline, or the foliage can be darned in green and the peonies in pinks. The leaves are veined in the same tone as the outlines.

Neatly Put!

Men wears clothes as a defence; woman for the purpose of attack.

A girl must be very, very intellectual if she can't tell you what another girl had on.

Man proposes; woman makes him stick to it.

A man who can joke with his wife about her dressmaker's bill must have a keen sense of humour.

The law has no penalty for stealing a heart. The punishment of having it left on your hands is enough.

A beautiful woman is the paradise of the eyes, the hell of the soul, and the purgatory of the purse.

Listening, with most of us, is waiting till the other person has finished.

The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

You are safe in rejecting the article offered as "just as good."

A Result Worthy of Consideration

Endowment Policy No. 34022 was issued to a local citizen twenty years ago for which he paid in ten annual instalments to the Company in all premiums, amounting to $688.50. He now receives a single cash payment of $1273.65 which as an investment is over 4% compound interest, or he may accept $750.60 in cash, which is $62.10 more than he paid in, together with a paid up policy for $1000, payable at death which earns profits every year during the balance of his life.

Where can a young man or woman find a better way of saving money as well as providing a protection for those dependent upon them.

The above is the result of a matured policy in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA, payable on December 1st., 1911.

BIFOCALS
OR
DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments.

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

AUDIENCE HAD BIG NIGHT'S FUN

Bumper House at Sale of Red Headed Monkeys

McEwen is certainly worthy of the handle named "great" which goes before his name. A packed house at the Grand last night voted him to be a king of entertainers and as a master dispenser of mesmerism and hypnotism he is undoubtedly without a rival. The performance which extended over a period of two hours was crammed full of downright merriment and laughter. McEwen can certainly place an audience in whatever mood he pleases.

He opened his bill with a lucid explanation of the operations of mesmerism and hypnotism, after awakening the youth whom he had placed in a sleep during the day in Turnbull's millinery store window.

A clever collection of slight-of hand tricks followed in which he revealed clearly his superiority over others in the same line of work.

His hypnotic performance came next and with about eight subjects on the stage, the fun began in earnest. Sane, sober men, in a miraculously short period were dancing their favorite jigs, trying to unlock their hands, etc. Others went through the audience selling imaginary red-headed monkeys, two for a quarter. Again they were spielers at a circus, or executing their favorite song, or laughing uproariously at imaginery funny stories.

Florance Hartly pleased the crowd also by three excellently sung numbers.

McEwen promises something exceptionally wonderful at his performance to-night and judging from the two shows already given, his promises will be redeemed.

RATIFICATION GIVEN BY THE BOARD OF TRADE

To Arrange for Payment of Deficits in Industrial Commissioners Office.

Mr. D. O'Connell brought in a report to the Board of Trade last night, in which he reviewed the operations of the Industrial Commissioner's department from the initial arrangement, and the two following resolutions moved by Mr. O'Connell, were passed;

That the arrangements with the Manufacturers' Committee in connection with the debts of the Industrial Commissioner's office be ratified by this Board.

That the Board of Trade appoint three of its members to act with a committee of the city council in regard to the office of Industrial Commissioner.

Messrs. D. O'Connell, W. H. Denham and V. Eastwood, president of the Board were constituted the committee, on motion of Mr. W. R. Morris.

Mr O'Connell reported that the total subscriptions including the grant from the City Council for the industrial office amounted to $4,000.91. Of this amount $3,900 went to Mr. Duggan as salary, office furnishings and other expenses, and at the expiration of his term, a balance of $73.33 remained. The accounts, however, were $182.52 and this left a deficit of $109.

It was learned by the Board of Trade Committee, through the Manufacturers Committee and Mr. Armstrong, that some twenty years ago an appropriation had been set aside for the investigation of mineral resources of the County of Peterborough and that a balance of $189.70 remained in the bank.

It was agreed that this money be used in wiping out the Industrial departments debts in consideration of all assets of the office being turned over to the city council. These would amount to between $150 and $200. Ratification of this arrangement, by the Board of Trade Mr. O'Connell suggested and the meeting give its approval.

Speaking of the necessity of the office being operated again, Mr. O'Connel held that something should be done at once if the city's industrial growth and progress was to be maintained. The Council had voted $3,000 for the office and had treated the Board with a great deal of consideration. A committee of three from the Board of Works with the Council's committee had been asked for.

A GIFT WITH A THOUGHT IN IT

What other Christmas present costs so little and means so much as a subscription to the Youth's Companion —52 weeks to any Canadian subscriber for $2.00? It is a gift which benefits, not only the one who receives it but every member of the same household.

With many Christmas presents the sense of novelty wears off by the week's end. But the Youth's Companion is as new and sought after the fifty-second week of the year as the first. It is elastic in its adaptability too; for it does not matter whether the present is for a boy or a girl, young married people, sedate couples grand-parents—there never was one yet who did not set store by the Youth's Companion. You cannot make a mistake if you give The Companion—and it is only $2.00 a year now to Canadian subscribers. On January 1, 1912, the price will be advanced to $2.25.

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, too as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Calendar.

CHURCH THAT IS PAID FOR

The new Methodist church at Fenelon Falls is entirely free of debt. The cost of the new edifice is $12,000, which sum was raised by subscriptions, collections and a fowl supper. The proceeds of the fowl supper, which was held last night was $250. The new church is a fine building and one of which the congregation may well be proud. Special services were held on Sunday in the church.—Lindsay Post.

MR. H. P. KENNEDY HAS GOOD THING

Realty Investments Could be Turned to Good Profits

Mr. H. P. Kennedy returned to Peterborough from the west yesterday in company with Mr. W. J. Magrath, the mayoralty candidate for Edmonton, Alta. Mr. Kennedy is thoroughly enthused with the west, and is prominently identified with several live propositions in Edmonton realty. This is Mr Kennedy's second trip west inside of a month. He has already been offered inducements to sell at big profits, which, however, he has refused to yield to just yet. He is very enthusiastic over the future of Edmonton, feeling positive that it will be yet the greatest city of the west. The city has twenty-three miles of street railway and greater Edmonton has a population of between thirty-eight and forty thousand.

Lt.-Gov. Gibson will address London Canadian Club Dec. 5.

LIVE DISCUSSION BY THE BOARD OF TRADE MEMBERS

Institution is in the Throes of Rejuvenation — Some Remarks by Practical Business Men Which Are Worthy of Consideration.

The Peterborough Board of Trade is to all indications due for rejuvenation. A part answer to the question of what will the harvest be, should be given in the near future. At the meeting last night there were present Mr. Vincent Eastwood, the president, and Messrs. Dan O'Connell, W. H. Moore, T. F. Matthews, G. E. Wainwright, C. H. Pennefather, Wm. Langford, sr., Jos. Picard, sr. W. R. Morris, W. A Austin, Wm. Might, Jas. R. Bell, G. W. Hatton, W. H. Denham, and Ald Buller and Bradburn and the secretary, Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine.

Mr. G. W. Hatton as solicitor for the concern, which it is hoped will come to Peterborough, was heard in regard to the proposition, but it is advisable at this stage not to make any further reference.

TIME FOR CHANGE.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, vice-president of the Board, paved the way for an interesting discussion by some 'live wire' remarks. He characterized the local Board of Trade as "an institution dying of dry rot" and did not know what had got into Peterborough or its citizens to engender so apparent a lack of interest in the Board of Trade. I, as vice-president—and your president, I am sure—do not desire to hold office in a dying organization. Mr. O'Connell then went on to say that this city must wake up to the importance of the Board of Trade. Every city and town in Canada to-day making any substantial progress owes its prosperity to some extent to its Board of Trade. The time has come when real live trade and industrial problems must be submitted to Peterborough's Board of Trade for discussion and action; and if its members will but give their attention to the solution of the various industrial schemes that should from time to time be introduced the Board of Trade may yet be a live institution. Peterborough is better situated than 90 per cent. of all other towns in Ontario, for industrial expansion, and yet Brantford, Berlin, Galt and such places are acquiring new industries while no progress in such a direction is being made in this city. "I think, Mr. President," the speaker concluded, "it's up to you to some extent to awaken life in this Board by seeing that subjects of live interest to citizens are furnished its members for discussion. Members should be canvassed, either personally or by letter and an effort made to infuse some life into this dying concern."

The president offered that no one dislikes to be linked with a failure more than he, and agreed that a big awakening must be attempted.

ADVANCE HAS BEEN MADE.

Mr. Langford objected to Mr. O'Connell's contention that this city was making no progress. Peterborough, he offered, has made more substantial advance than any other town not on the lake-board. "Perhaps a lack of interest in this board," he said, "is due to the fact that the efficiency of the city council, leaves but little work for the Board of Trade to undertake. Again, there has been too much talking and not enough work at the Board's meetings."

Mr. O'Connell replied that it is a lamentable fact that no big effort has been or is being made by the Board to build up our industrial interests.

RAISE THE PRICE.

Mr Austin thought the Board had started out wrong in putting the membership fee at $2, thus qualifying it as a cheap concern not worthy of interest. "I was," he said, "connected with a town half Peterborough's size where we secured a Board of Trade membership of 120 at a fee of $5, and accomplished big work in carrying industrial by-laws. Raise the fee to $5 and you get a better machine in which life will rapidly be infused. In Edmonton, the Board of Trade got together one night, and they raised $25,000 for the purpose of promoting industrial expansion."

Mr. Pennefather manager of the Union Bank, remarked that in Hamilton the Board of Trade was at one time stagnant; its few local members sent out a stimulating circular letter headed, "Boost Hamilton," and in quick time secured a membership of 500.

TALK ON POWER.

Mr. W. H. Denham, of the Quaker Oats, here diverted the attention of the members to the question of industrial expansion. Peterborough citizens have got the idea, he contended, that it is of no use looking for new industries unless we have $13 or $15 horse power to offer. The question of power, he said, is not of so much importance as people think. How many industries are using more than two, three or four hundred horse power. If this city has the advantages of transportation, labor, desirable residential conditions, etc., it should get industries apart from the question of present power facilities. What matters $1,000 more or less in power to an industry if they find the geographical, labor, residential and transportation facilities desired? What Peterborough needs is that its citizens subscribe to industrial stock. His home town, he contended, has assured substantial industrial progress by subscribing dollar for dollar in every promising concern seeking location (no watered stock, however, allowed.) It is passing strange, he concluded, that one broker can secure in this city in one week $7,000 subscribed stock to a silver mine—an uncertainty—when no stock can be sold for legitimate industrial enterprises.

Ald Buller agreed with Mr. Denham, excepting in regard to power, which he concluded to be of considerable importance. Confidence must be restored here, he said, and citizens subscribe generously to industrial stock before industrial growth is assured.

Ald Bradburn, one of the City's Power Committee, assured the Board that the question of power had been before the Council the last two years or more. Much detailed work had been done, involving considerable time and had the committee received that support it should have had from certain parties Peterborough would to-day have municipal owned power assured. "I assure you that we have every reason to hope that the deputation at Ottawa next Friday, will bring back positive assurance of an early solving of this problem."

EDUCATE THE PEOPLE

Mr. Denham here stated that he did not wish the Board to adjourn with a wrong impression of his opinion. "The point I want to make," he said, "is that it would be a good thing for the city to acquire a block of power. But the people should be educated up to the fact that power is not the whole question in locating industries. Galt, Brantford, Berlin, Guelph are acquiring new industries with power at $23, $24, $25, and $23 whereas we are making no progress with power at $20.

Mr T. F. Matthews—"In Brantford the interests of the industries are interwoven in the way of stock, which one takes in the other, and citizens also subscribe generously. I agree with Mr. Langford that Peterborough with its natural advantages is the best town in Canada and has gone ahead rapidly. Still we have not grown as much as we should have done industrially and must not lose sight of the fact that Oshawa can sell power developed on the Trent Waterway as Trenton as cheap as it is sold here. Something must be done to hold our position to say nothing of advancing.

Mr. Eastwood and Mr. Moore have both pointed out that Peterborough citizens had subscribed to certain industries pretty generously and lost heavily.

Mr. O'Connell at this juncture enquired of secretary Quartermaine in any committee had been appointed to actively engage industrial or other questions.

The secretary read from the minutes of the annual meeting that the only committee yet appointed was one to strike the Standing Committees, of which Mr. O'Connell was the chairman, but that committee had not yet reported.

Mr O'Connell admitted his delinquency was sorry, took a leaf out of his chapter of advice early in the evening that the members awaken up and do something, and promised to get busy.

IS CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR OF GREATER EDMONTON

Mr. W. J. Magrath in the the City as Guest of Mr. H. P. Kennedy.

A Review representative had the pleasure of interviewing to-day a notable visitor to the city in the person of W. J. Magrath, of Edmonton, Alt., who is to contest the mayoralty seat of Greater Edmonton in the approaching election, the precise date of which has not yet been decided.

Mr Magrath chatted most interestingly concerning the prevailing optimistic and promising conditions of Edmonton, and will undoubtedly if placed at the head of the city's municipal management, be an earnest advocate of its advantages. He is a formerly resident of Belleville, Ont., but has lived in Edmonton for the past six years, carrying on a flourishing real estate and insurance business and while in this city will be the guest of H. P. Kennedy, with whom he came east.

His purpose in coming east is to interest manufacturers and wholesale men about Edmonton and to attract their attention to the possibilities which the city holds out for them to locate.

His efforts are being rewarded with a highly encouraging measure of success. Prominent manufacturers in Canada and United States being favorably impressed, and several have promised to send representatives to Edmonton to discover conditions personally.

Describing Edmonton, Mr. Magrath remarked upon its ideal railway location, the city being on the main line of three transcontinental railroads, the new C.P.R. line running a through train from Winnipeg to Edmonton, which line they intend extending to the coast. The splendid position of the city for a centre of industries and wholesalers, and in addition the fact of the cheap coal that can be secured, can be easily recognized as being a source of immense value to all who locate there. Coal is being shipped from Edmonton all the way east to Winnipeg, and cheap fuel naturally means cheap power for industries. Edmonton practically controls all the vast country to the west of it, three thousand miles in extent, and has a waterway connection through to the Arctic coast.

As an agriculture centre the city of Edmonton is also well known, and it was in the Peace river district, just north of it, that the prize winning wheat exhibited at the St. Louis exposition, was grown.

"The date of the municipal elections have not been set," said Mr. Magrath, owing to the Legislature not having met since the amalgamation of Edmonton and Strathcona. The amalgamation agreement between the two cities will have to be ratified by the Legislature.

Mr. Magrath, if elected to the municipal chair, will be the first mayor of greater Edmonton. His opponents will be G. S. Armstrong, the present mayor, and Major Saunders. He leaves for Toronto in the morning.

No "White Hope" in Sight!

"The white hope thing is richly funny," says Johnny Eckhardt, once a famous referee, "and it gets funnier every day. Right after Johnson trimmed Jeffries the promoters began to polish up such awful lemons and utter dead ones as Sandy Ferguson, Jim Barry, Al Kubiak and Tony Ross. Every time one of these lumbering mutts put on a glove in the gymnasium it was announced that he was in great shape, fit to fight anybody in the world and destined to take the crown away from Jack Johnson. Then one by one, these elephantine marks fell down, and no more was heard of them.

"Al Kaufman did seem to have a little merit, and a faint, very faint chance of some day making good. Then Jim Flynn, half his size and once a pudding for Johnson, knocked out Mr. Kaufman and he joined the colony of busted hopes. One Carl Morris was dug up out in Oklahoma—a 250 pound mammoth—and was boosted by being allowed to fight and beat helpless oldtimers whom a good featherweight could have stopped just as easily. HISTORIC GOLF COURSE

The course of the St George's Club at Sandwich, the scene of the forthcoming Open Championship, is not yet twenty-five years old, yet it is rich in golfing history. No course has sprung into the front rank and been admitted into the charmed circle of Championship courses so soon after its birth. The Club was instituted in 1887, mainly by the efforts of that famous old golfer, Dr. Laidlaw Purves, but so great were the merits of the links that it was added to the rota of the Amateur Championship so early as 1891 and to that of the Open Championship in 1893, the Amateur Championship being played there in 1892 and the Open Championship in 1894. It may be said, therefore, that the famous Sandwich course was born under a lucky star, and that its parents and god-parents took care that the silver spoon, if not in its mouth at birth, should be placed there with the least possible delay.

GOOD MAN HILTON

After Steady Play All Through the Competition Hilton of England Took U. S. Championship.

The British amateur golf champion's splendid playing in the national amateur championship, at Rye, N. Y., won him the American title and the Havemeyer cup. Hilton led the field in the qualifying round and among others, disposed of Jerome F. Travers in match play.

A convenient tree gave Hilton the championship after he had tied 36 holes with Frederick Herreshoff of New York. Herreshoff squared the match on the 36th hole, but topped his second shot on the 37th. Hilton's ball hit a tree and bounded onto the green.

Hilton is often referred to as a veteran and again as another's "younger opponent." As Hilton has been playing first class golf for 24 years, admits 42 years and has a son who is a six-footer, he can scarcely be a juvenile. Hilton says his success in golf is due to confidence in his ability to place a ball where he desires, arising from constant practice.

CANADIAN-TURKISH ADMIRAL

Bucknam Pasha of Ottaman Fleet is Nova Scotian and Started Live on a Lake Boat.

There is a proportion of Canadian brains behind whatever portion of a fleet it is that flies the Turkish flag, for Rasford D. Bucknam, a Canadian, better known as Bucknam Pasha, is vice-admiral and naval adviser to the sultan. Bucknam's aide and friend is an American, W. H. Ledbetter, who has the rank of commander. It was about eight years ago that Bucknam went to Turkey as commander of the new cruiser Medjidia, built for the sultan by the Cramps.

Bucknam's adventures began young. He was born in Nova Scotia, and his father died at sea. When his grandfather gave him the choice between farming and seafaring, he chose the sea. He had an instinctive love for the sea, a love that helped him to pick up the knowledge of a ship with hardly an effort. His first venture was made on the Great Lakes. At the age of 14 he became a cabin-boy on a schooner of which the captain was also the owner. The captain's wife took a fancy to the youngster and ultimately they adopted him. Today the schooner's captain is a wealthy shipowner in one of the lake towns and the lonely cabin-boy is a Turkish noble of the highest rank.

When he was 16 years old, Bucknam sailed from New York as quartermaster of a schooner bound for the Pacific. At Manila the captain and mates died of cholera, and Bucknam went before a special board to be examined for a master's certificate, he being the only man aboard the vessel who had studied navigation. He passed the test without any difficulty and was made captain at 17. To prove his efficiency, he brought his ship home.

Shortly before the world's fair at Chicago, in 1893, Bucknam went to that city and built the whaleboat Columbus, of which he was captain while she was on exhibition at the fair. Later he went to the Pacific Steamship Company's service, and two years later was made captain of the Island of Naos at Panama. It was there he met Ledbetter, who has been his aide in Constantinople for the last four years.

At all events, the Sultan sent for Bucknam and asked him if he would take the post of naval adviser to the Porte. Bucknam considered the matter and finally told Abdul Hamid that he would. Bucknam was practical, and the salary offered him nothing short of princely. But he stipulated that he was to have a preliminary leave of absence in order that he could go home and marry a girl in San Francisco. The Sultan assented, and Bucknam married the young woman, a school teacher. She went with him to Constantinople.

Provoking an Appetite

Shakespeare's wish that good digestion may wait on appetite expresses a distinct physiological truth. There is no doubt that food-taking, considered all round, should be, and is in the healthy person, a pleasant duty. If hunger be regarded in proverbial language as being the best sauce for food, it is clear that an appetite for food must constitute the first and primary condition for the enjoyment of our diet. The question of appetite is not such a simple one as many persons might be inclined to suppose. Popularly regarded, appetite, of course, implies and means a desire for food. Hunger is different from appetite. Hunger may be regarded as the condition which indicates that the body demands a food supply; appetite, on the other hand, indicates an additional something which contributes to the enjoyment of the food, and causes an agreeable anticipation of the advent of a meal. Scientific research has shown us that appetite may be excited in various and, in some degree, complicated ways. For instance, it is known that if the nerves of the stomach be duly stimulated so that gastric juice be poured out at the beginning of a meal, appetite for food is thereby developed. In this connection it is extremely interesting to note that certain substances appear to possess a definite power of effecting this action, and so of stimulating appetite. Amongst such substances, extracts of meat or the stimulating bodies contained in meat are known to cause stomach stimulation, and in all probability the taking of some light meat soup as a first course at dinner is justified from a scientific point of view by the effect it produces on the stomach and its work. In other words, the soup provokes an appetite for the foods which are to follow.

Interviewing the Editor

Many folks are full of the idea that the newspaper editor by reason of his sedentary occupation must necessarily be a man of slight muscular development. But 'tis not always the case.

One day a young man might have been seen leaning up against the front of a sporting journal, a prey to uncontrollable grief. A benevolent-looking old gentleman who was passing by, noticing the man's frame shaken with his outbursts of sorrow, approached him, and said:

"What is your trouble, my friend? Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Alas!" said the young man, "it is my poor misguided brother."

"And what of your brother, my young friend?" gently inquired the benevolent old man.

"Well," sobbed the stricken one, "this morning he saw an insulting paragraph in this paper, which he took to refer to him."

"Yes," said the kind-hearted gentleman.

"Well, ten minutes ago he went upstairs to knock the stuffing out of the editor."

"And has he come down yet?" asked the anxious inquirer.

"P-part of him has," said the brother, in a voice that was choked with emotion. "He—he's coming d-down in s-sections. I d-dunno' know when the bulk will arrive!"

The Peerless Peninsular
a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences

You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door—a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

The Peerless
is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.

Low Closet for Pots and Pans

Grates Easy to Remove

At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel—an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves—honest stoves—are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good—the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

All modern conveniences have been embodied in the Peerless, too.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.

Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"

illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

Chicago Packers Released.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—On application of counsel for the defendants indicted in the Beef Trust cases, Judge Kohlsaat, in the U. S. Circuit Court late yesterday issued a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the ten packers. The writ is returnable next Thursday. The action of the packers came as a surprise to the Government.

Attorney J. S. Miller, who appeared for the packers, attacked the validity of the Sherman anti-trust law in his petition for the writ of habeas corpus.

SHOE MACHINERY

Vital Part It Has Played in the Wonderful Development of the Canadian Shoe Manufacturing Industry.

Remarkable System of Machines Now in Use and the Advantageous Terms on Which Manufacturers Secure Them.

HISTORY OF AN INDUSTRY THAT READS LIKE A ROMANCE.

Howland E. Watson In October Issue of the Canadian Magazine

Have you ever watched a shoe in the making? Have you travelled from one intricate mass of cams and levers to another and so on down the long line of machines, performing seemingly impossible operations with an accuracy and dispatch that almost passes understanding? If you have never done so, take firm hold on the first opportunity, for every operation performed by these machines has something to do with your comfort your pocketbook, or your vanity.

The Canadian boot, like good wine, "needs no bush." Its reputation is firmly established. Upon any equitable basis, it will at the present time bear favorable comparison with the best produced in any other country. The enterprise of Canadian manufacturers and the constantly increasing skill and efficiency of Canadian labor make the boot and shoe industry loom large on the country's commercial horizon. All of these things are matters of common knowledge, but of the complexities and travail from which this great industry has arisen, of the unique and particularly advantageous conditions which have favored its marvellous growth during the past ten years, as well as the remarkable and efficient machines which form the equipment of factories making high-grade boots, little or nothing has been written.

Other industries have their marvellous machines, the modern loom, the Linotype, the Monotype, and various automatic machines now in use excite your wonder and admiration but here you have a whole system of machines, many of them as intricate and as finely adjusted as a watch performing with marvellous accuracy operations which, but a short time ago were thought to be impossible through any other medium than the human hand. Each fills exactly its place in the general scheme, constantly preparing for operations that are to follow, for in the making of a high-grade shoe there are no really minor operations. Some of the operations may seem to be less important than others but if you watch carefully the work of succeeding machines in their sequence, you will find the inaccurate work of a single machine, like the iniquities of a sinful generation, if not discovered is visited upon each of the machines which follow until the completed product emerges a pariah among its fellows and scornfully known among shoemakers as a "bat," a "crab," or a "cripple.

Fortunately this now seldom occurs for there is no system of machines in the world so finely adjusted to each other's requirements and which receive such constant and expert attention. No other aggregation of machines meets and successfully copes with so many and such variable conditions, different sizes, shapes, qualities, and a never-ending procession of styles, are made on one set of machines. It is here that we touch the very foundation upon which the shoe industry has been built up and advanced as in no other period in its history for it is but a comparatively short time since conditions were decidedly different, when there was no system of machines, as the term is now understood among manufacturers. Each manufacturer's equipment was obtained from a wide variety of sources, some he bought and others he hired. Some received a certain amount of attention from those who had placed them in his factory—others almost none. Unfortunately shoe machinery is not an exception to the general rule. Parts wear out and break, adjustments go wrong. In former times when this happened production in many factories would cease at that point until the machine had been placed in proper running order Delays were often long and vexatious, for prior to 1899 Canadian Shoe manufacturers obtained the greater portion of the machinery they used from different makers, most of them located in or near Boston. Sometimes the maker supplied but a single machine, in other instances several; but in any case the shoe manufacturer was not only obliged to meet the terms upon which the machine was ordinarily placed in Boston, but to pay such customs charges as were levied against it, and all the expenses of the expert usually sent from Boston to set up the machine and teach its operation from the time he left Boston until he returned. Under these conditions, it is not surprising that the boot and shoe manufacturing industry of Canada advanced but slowly. Many manufacturers preferred to cling to such primitive means as the wal, waxed ends and hammer—shoemaking implements as old as the Egyptian temples—operating only such machines as seldom required adjustment or attention rather than submit to the vexations and losses which attended the use of improved machinery and methods even then available, but only on the conditions as set forth.

It was a crucial period in the history of the industry. Foreign manufacturers operating under more favorable circumstances found in Canada a ready and even eager market for their surplus productions. The industry was anxiously awaiting the advent of a Moses to lead it safely from the sea of trouble in which it found itself. Such was the state of affairs when, in 1899, the United Shoe Machinery Co., of Canada was formed, and event which undoubtedly transcends all others in the history of an industry, which, in its evolution from the purely hand processes and implements of only half a century ago, has passed through many revolutions, many of them almost spectacular in character.

The United Shoe Machinery Co., of Canada established its factory and offices in Montreal. It secured some of the best machines then in use for fastening the soles and heels to boots and finishing them. It improved them. It invented or purchased others to fill up the gaps of which there was no machine. It harmonized their action, adjusting them to each other's requirements, until it had a system of machinery for attaching the soles to shoes, as shown in making the very high-grade type of boot known as the "Goodyear Welt," which is truly marvellous. All of this was accomplished only at the expenditure of much money and untold effort. But it did more than supply machines. It kept them in working condition. It established branch offices in Quebec and Toronto. It maintained in each office a supply of machine parts in order that any mishap to a machine might be readily repaired. When it is stated that this company in the regular routine of its business makes over 83,000 different kinds of machine parts varying from a machine base weighing over a tone to the most minute machine screw, the magnitude of this undertaking can be readily comprehended.

More than this, the company maintains in each of its branch offices a corps of men who are not only expert machinists, but expert shoe-makers as well—men competent not only to repair machines, but to teach their operation and to give expert advice. This corps of men are placed at the disposal of its patrons by the company. If any office of the company is notified of a mishap, a man is immediately sent to take care of it. The vexatious delays and the losses which held the trade so short a time ago have disappeared. Each one of the company's patrons, be he large or small, knows that he is entitled to the same service that his competitor receives. It seems to have been a cardinal principle in the building of the company's business to play no favorites, and the sincerity of the company's efforts is apparently never questioned by its customers.

While the quality of the company's service and the efficiency of its machines, through improvements and new inventions have, constantly increased in value to the industry, it has aimed constantly to reduce the cost to its patrons and with results that have earned their cordial approval.

The United Shoe Machinery Company of Canada has apparently been successful in performing the things it set out to do, for the boot and shoe industry has prospered as at no other time in the history. The company has been constant and diligent in anticipating the requirements of the industry it has served so well. From the small factory occupied the first year of its existence, it soon moved to one of larger capacity, and in 1906 built the fine plant it has since occupied on Lagauchetiere street, Montreal. It is now completing a new manufacturing plant in one of the suburbs of Montreal, which it is said will be a model in economical production and convenience. The illustrations of the different buildings occupied by the company, afford a most striking index of the prosperity which has attended the boot and shoe industry, for the business of the company has increased in exact ratio to the advance of the industry itself.

Success, however, has its penalties, and the United Shoe Machinery Company of Canada has not escaped. It has been charged that it is a monopoly, and, paradoxical as it may seem, after the description of the wonderfully increased prosperity of the shoe industry—that it is acting in restraint of trade. Fortunately, these accusations do not come from the company's patrons who apparently are well satisfied with present conditions, but from competitors of the company, some supplying but single machines, none with more than a small number of machines for performing operations widely divorced and therefore lacking every essential advantage which comes from the work of machines in a closely adjusted system. Promoters of these machines have naturally found but little demand for what they had to offer.

The charges are, however, based upon the peculiar conditions under which shoe manufacturers obtain their equipment of machinery—conditions which are probably without a parallel in any other branch of industry, for the boot manufacturer is not obliged to purchase his equipment of machinery—he can lease it. Many of the machines he can purchase outright if he so desires, some of them are only placed in factories on lease, in which case the owner of the machines participates in some small degree in the saving which the machines makes in the shoe-making process. This is the so-called Royalty System, a method of placing machinery as old as shoe machinery itself and a condition originally imposed by the manufacturers of shoes and closely adhered to in most instances ever since

This royalty plan has been a factor of the most supreme importance in building up the industry. It is related that Gordon McKay, one of the earliest builders of shoe machinery, tried in vain to sell his earliest machines. Shoe manufacturers, while acknowledging the efficiency of the machines and the undoubted saving their adoption would make in their business, did not have the money to pay the moderate price for which he offered them, or, in some instances, lacked faith in the future of making shoes by machinery. In his desperation, McKay made several unavailing efforts to sell his business, including all rights in the machinery, and finally evolved the scheme of placing them on a royalty, when they were eagerly accepted by manufacturers of shoes, many of whom became wealthy through their use.

McKay formulated a lease which manufacturers using his machines were required to sign. The provisions of this lease were no more onerous than those which the average householder is required to sign. The shoe industry is familiar with them, fo practically every successful make of shoe machinery has been obliged to follow the custom established by McKay about fifty years ago.

In some instances the manufacturer pays a small sum for each shoe on which the machine performs its part, of the work, in others, the shoe machinery company places the machine in the factory of the manufacturers without charge, and gets its return from the material used in connection with it, such as wire, nails, tacks, etc.; it being agreed that only material supplied by the company shall be used and that a slight increase over the market price shall be charged. Even in the periods when the price of metals was greatly enhanced, this company has found a way to maintain a very nearly even price for such materials and has never increased the price charged to manufacturers.

The average rate of royalty, direct and indirect, which the company now receives on all classes of shoes is less than two and one-fifth cents per pair. On some grades of shoes it is but three-quarters of a cent per pair, and that the highest paid on the highest grade of Goodyear Welt shoes, the best of which can be bought, is only six cents. Very few shoes pay a royalty as high as this, and the majority of shoes made in Canada pay a royalty of only a cent and a half per pair. In any case the return paid for the use of machinery cuts no figure in the retail price. Out of this small sum the company pays the whole cost of manufacturing machines—of developing and purchasing new ones—of administration—in short, the entire expense of conducting its business.

Under this the royalty system, a shoe manufacturer can start in business with a modest capital, and, although shoes are made on a close margin of profit, the capital being in liquid form can be turned several times a year, thus giving the manufacturer a substantial profit on the total volume of business, while giving the consumer the benefit of the narrow margin of profit on each pair of shoes. There is no other industry of any consequence of which this is true. The manufacturer of textiles, before beginning business, has to install a complete equipment of machinery at a cost which is prohibitive, except to concerns of very large capitalization. The industry is thus concentrated in very few hands, while the industry of making shoes is divided among different concerns of varying size and competition is made almost inevitable by the system under which any manufacturer, no matter what his relative importance may be, can get his machinery on terms as advantageous as those obtainable by his most prosperous competitor. Instead of worrying about the depreciation of his machinery, he knows that he is on equal terms with every other manufacturer and that he can confine his attention to the manufactury and sale of shoes, keeping practically all his capital in quick assets.

It is under these conditions that the shoe industry has advanced most rapidly. The small amount of capital required to obtain such a remarkable equipment of machines has made it possible for many shoe manufacturers, who are now numbered among the most prosperous, to enter business on their own account, who, under different conditions, would have been debarred from doing so. It is for this reason that the many young men now growing up in the industry regard with slight favor any suggestion that will tend to change these conditions, believing that if the manufacturer is compelled to purchase this machinery outright, it will tend to build up a monopoly in the manufacture of shoes among those who can control the immense capital which would be required.

The United Shoe Machinery Company of Canada has never attempted to monopolize the production of shoe machinery. In the factories of many of its customers the machines of its competitors are running with those of its own production; in fact, there are whole departments in which there are few, and in many cases no machines supplied by it. There is nothing in the agreement between the manufacturers and the company to prevent such a condition.

It is thus that the boot and shoe industry of Canada has advanced through discouragements and difficulties to the proud distinction of being the sixth in importance in the Dominion, at the last census. What the figures of the census now in progress will disclose is a matter of much interest to those actively engaged in the making of shoes. That the industry has continued its remarkable progress is best shown in the ever-improving quality of the goods produced and the attention which the product of Canadian factories is attracting in the markets of the world.

Of the future—who shall say? It is difficult, particularly for those engaged in the industry, to believe that the trend of public affairs and policy should point to a return of the troublesome conditions from which the industry has so recently emerged; but only the destiny which shapes the ends of industries can answer.

IRISH LEADER A SCOT

The Most Prominent Irish M.P. is Purebred Scot with Interesting Career.

Mr. T. W. Russell, the victor of North Tyrone, is perhaps the most prominent Irish M.P. who is not an Irishman. He is a pure Scot, born in Fifeshire close upon seventy years ago. He was the youngest of a workingman's family of six, and his father, a stonemason, generally earned less than $7 a week. When he set foot in Ireland he was, he says, "an ill-equipped, penniless, somewhat delicate Scotch lad. His first achievement in Ireland was to found a Y.M.C.A. and to become a noted temperance advocate. "T. W.'s" temperance work brought him into close touch with Parnell. A total abstainer himself, Parnell helped Mr. Russell with the Irish Sunday Closing Bill. On the day the bill was carried the Irish leader said to him. "Now, Mr. Russell, we have done with liquor; the next fight must be on the land." "It will take an earthquake to upset the Irish land system," replied "T.W.," and Mr. Parnell, after a pause, said, "Very well, earthquake be it." Prior to his defeat at the general election of 1910, Mr. Russell would not classify himself with either the Liberals or the Unionists. Although he sat on the Liberal benches he was a Russellite, a party consisting of himself alone. For his services to Unionism Lord Salisbury gave him the Parliamentary Secretaryship of the Local Government Board, which, with its $6000 a year, he held for five years. But the fruits of office were bitter to the lifelong agitator, and the routine of conventional duties galled him.

SEA POWER COUNTS

Hague Conferences May Count Later On, Meantime Sea Power is Safest to Lean On.

It is sea power that counts, and not Hague Conferences. Sea power is not only as essential to British security as ever it was, but it is more important than at any former period. The widely severed portions of the Empire are linked for defensive purposes by the Navy, and the Mother Country is dependent largely upon supplies of food coming by sea routes which the Navy protects. Were our fleets destroyed, the Empire would be broken up and Great Britain would run the risk of starvation. Predominance in sea power is thus a condition of national and Imperial existence.

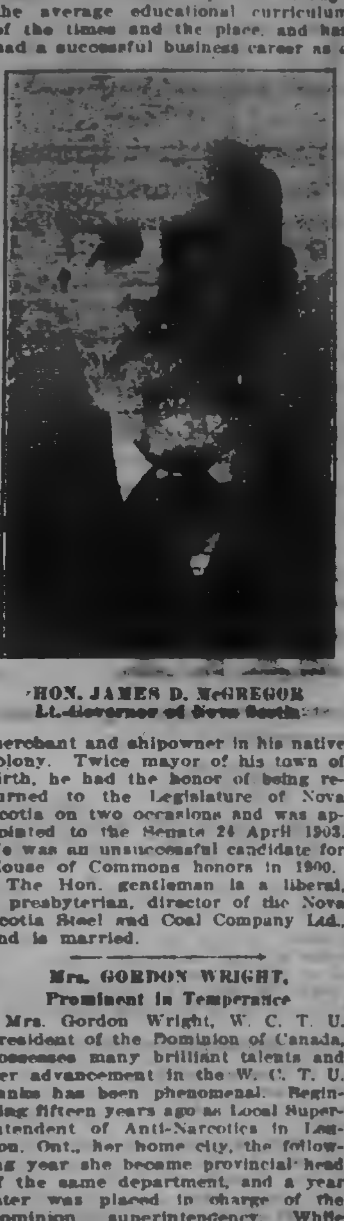
The cost of keeping up an invincible Navy is admittedly a serious burden in these times, when battleships are far more costly than ever before, and when all the leading Powers are building Dreadnoughts and thus raising the two-Power standard which is has long been our object to maintain. Attempts have been made to reduce the cost by proposals for a general limitation of armaments, by Hague Conferences for encouraging arbitration in international disputes, and by general movements for promoting a more friendly feeling between the inhabitants of different countries.

Something may come of all the philanthropic affort in the future, but for the present it must be regretfully admitted that nothing whatever has been done to check the competition in armaments.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

HON. JAS. D. McGREGOR

The honorable James Drummond McGregor, now Lt.-Governor of Nova Scotia comes of a family of very old standing in the country, his grandfather Rev. James McGregor, D.D., having arrived in Pictou in 1786, to earn fame as the pioneer minister of Eastern Nova Scotia. Born at New Glasgow in September 1838, the future Lt.-Governor passed through the average educational curriculum of the times and the place, and has had a successful business career as a merchant and shipowner in his native colony. Twice mayor of his town of birth, he had the honor of being returned to the Legislature of Nova Scotia on two occasions and was appointed to the Senate 24 April 1903. He was an unsuccessful candidate for House of Commons honors in 1900.



HON. JAMES D. McGREGOR
Lt.-Governor of Nova Scotia

The Hon. gentleman is a liberal, a presbyterian, director of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company Ltd., and is married.

Mrs. GORDON WRIGHT, Prominent in Temperance

Mrs. Gordon Wright, W. C. T. U. president of the Dominion of Canada, possesses many brilliant talents and her advancement in the W. C. T. U. ranks has been phenomenal. Beginning fifteen years ago as Local Superintendent of Anti-Narcotics in London, Ont., her home city, the following year she became provincial head of the same department, and a year later was placed in charge of the Dominion superintendency. While still holding this office, Mrs Wright was elected president of the London Union, an active organization of some three hundred members.

In 1898 Mrs. Wright was again advanced, being appointed recording secretary of the Province of Ontario. Two years later she was elected to the office of corresponding secretary for the same Union. This position she filled with conspicuous success, her management of difficult correspondence with influential bodies displaying a genius for this work, which made her a valued member of the provincial sub.-executive for a number of years. Mrs. Wright also acted for some time as editor of the Canadian White Ribbon Tidings.

In 1902 Mrs. Wright was further honored by being elected to the vice-presidency of the Dominion. Two years later she was raised to the highest position in the gift of the Union, that of Dominion President.

Mrs. Gordon Wright is a typical Canadian — a woman of culture and charm. Her winning personality, her natural gifts as an executive officer and public speaker, her devotion to all temperance, missionary and philanthropic causes, combine to place her in the front rank of Canadian womanhood.

HON. A. G. MACKAY
Who resigned Ontario Liberal Leadership.

The hon. gentleman who resigned the Leadership of the Liberal party in the Ontario House of Legislature a few days ago, is an M.A. and a K.C. Born at Sydenham, Grey County Ont., on 7th March 1860, his early educational days were spent at Sydenham Public school, Owen Sound High School, the High School of Mount Forest, and finishing at Toronto University from which he graduated B. A. in 1888 and M.A. in 1885. With such an array of instructional influences it is no surprise if the young Sydenham Scot was pointed in early life as a man who knew things, a man who was likely to go to the front in whatever direction he might decide to devote his abilities. That results have justified the faith of those prophets, is known today of all men who give attention to public affairs in Ontario.

Finishing his university career, Mr. Mackay was during four years Principal of Port Rowan High School, following which, he went in for law study and was called to the bar in May 1891, and three years later had the honor of being elected Crown Attorney for Grey County, a position he held until 1901.

Switching into the political arena at the 1902 general election, success came his way at the first venture, being returned representative for North Grey, a constituency that has continued its confidence right along to the present time.

Hon. Mr. Mackay is a director of the Imperial Cement Co., and president of the Owen Sound Dredging and Construction Company. He takes a live interest in military matters and is captain of the 31st Reg't of Militia.

Tony Antonetto, of Guelph, is accused of striking Thomas McGunnigle with an axe.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

CONSERVING VITALITY

Taking Care of Men Means Maximum of Results With Minimum of Effort.

What has long been considered one of the most important principles in the realm of mechanical and engineering science is finally beginning to be looked upon as an equally vital principle in the realm of human development. This is the conservation of energy. The best thinkers and the greatest leaders in the industrial world are awakening to a realization of the fact that it pays not only to take care of machinery but also to take care of men. And taking care of a man means giving him the right chance and the right instruction to produce the maximum of results with the minimum of effort — to use to the best advantage what energy he uses, and to conserve his energy in such a way that it will not be taxed unduly. Further, to protect employees from greedy and cruel employers who drive a man to death because it is easy to get another one to take his place, we are constantly passing more and more stringent laws regulating hours of labor, conditions in which people work in various establishments, the employment of women and children, and other common factors in industry of different kinds. In other words, we are coming to see that we can not afford to waste humanity any more than we can afford to waste our forests or any of our natural resources. Happily, too, we are going still further along this line of human conservation, and are making extensive provisions of a practical sort for the preservation of health through simple, natural, healthful manners of living. We are striving to interest everybody in the value of fresh air, wholesome food, proper exercise, bathing, and other health-building factors, and we are striving also to give everybody a chance to take advantage of all these things. The greatest movement of all the ages is this new movement for conserving human vitality.

NOTHING NEW

Flying Machine Patented in 1854

In the year 1854, the Earl of Aldborough, one of the most enthusiastic promoters of aviation of his time, patented in Great Britain a flying machine embodying a multitude of ideas—more or less practical,—and among his many suggestions, describes an aeronautical anchor of peculiar form, evidently the result of an investigation of the anatomy of a bird's foot, and which he describes in the following terms: "I prefer forming the grapnel with flukes, attached to the stem by joints, and pressed downward by springs in such manner that the flukes shall strike downward when liberated, in a manner bearing a certain resemblance to the talons of a bird, separate cords being attached to each of the flukes, and all these being collected in a small sheath, and so arranged that the flukes can be raised, or permitted to spring downward by either fixing these cords in any convenient way, or letting them go when it is desired that the flukes shall act so as to enter the ground or seize any object." Apparently not satisfied with this device, he further perfected it in a patent of somewhat later date, wherein he describes a steel-sheathed cable for supporting the anchor, the cable being provided with a device for lessening the effect of sudden shocks, this latter feature being of very common use in marine navigation, being known in that art under the name of "shock-absorbers."

Experiments in Wireless Telephony

Successful experiments have been made lately in wireless telephony, which may have far-reaching developments in aviation, particularly in war services. Conversation was finely carried on with an aviator while he was flying 750 feet in the air at a speed estimated to be 55 miles an hour. The aviator was B. C. Huck, of Leeds, who was using a Blackburn monoplane. He wore on his head an ordinary telephone receiving helmet, and on his chest the ordinary mouthpiece. Strapped on the machine was the "Aerophone" apparatus invented by H. Grindell Matthews, the youngest man ever elected a member of the Royal Institution. This was the first time wireless telephony has been tried on an aeroplane. Huck's voice was clear and distinct.

PETERBORO COUNTY HERDS WELL UP IN MILK YIELD

Norwood Man Has High Average — Local Milk Vendors in Cow Testing Movement.

The improvement of the dairy herd is a problem which is receiving a great deal of attention at the present time, and there is probably more room for improvement in this line of farming than in most of the branches. When proceeded with in a systematic manner ,the increase of milk and fat from year to year is very encouraging, to say nothing of the extra returns.

In connection with the cow testing movement it is interesting to note that two of the local milk men, Mr. E. Butler and Mr. Wm. Dummitt, are testing their cows, and these men are to be congratulated on their efforts to improve their herds and place before their customers a still better quality of milk.

The records for September show that while a large number of herds have fallen off in production, owing to the shortness of the pasture and the lack of supplementary foods, that a few herds have done remarkably well, and doubtless have been fed extra, their owners realizing from past experience that it is easier and more profitable to keep a cow milking good than it is to raise the quantity after the cow has been allowed to fall below what she should be giving.

The highest herd average for the month was 1,179 lbs. milk and 40.7 lbs. fat, which was produced by the herd of Mr. F. J. Greenbank, of Norwood.

The lowest herd average was 480 lbs. milk, and 16 lbs. of fat. Valuing the fat at 28 cents per lb., the 10 cows in this herd brought in for their owner $69.16 less than the 10 cows in Mr. Greenbank's herd, or, looking at it another way, it would be necessary to keep and feed 25 cows similar to those in the poor herd, as well as hire additional help to milk, in order to secure as much money as brought in by the best herd of 10 cows.

At the present price of labor can the farmers of Peterborough county afford to keep up buildings, machinery, and support a herd of 25 cows of the class found in this Peterborough herd?

The best cow produced 1,480 lbs. of milk and 51.8 lbs. fat, and belongs to Mr. F. J. Greenbank's herd.

The poorest cow produced 360 lbs. milk and 10 lbs. fat. Valuing the fat at 28 cents per lb. the best cow brought in for her owner $11.70 more than the poorest cow, or it would take 5 cows of the latter class to produce as much fat as the best cow.

The Norwood Association, which includes among its members Mr. F. J. Greenbank, Louis Brown, Mr. A. Thistlewaite and Andrew Marks, has not only the highest average yield in the Peterborough Dairy Record Centre, but is also one of the highest in the province.

Leaving Norwood out of consideration, we find some excellent herd averages around Peterborough. The herd of Mr. J. O. Ball, of the Peterborough Association, averaged 29.8 lbs. of fat. The herd of Mr. J. Smithson, of Keene, 28.5 lbs; the herd of Mr. Andrew Evans, of Chester, 28.2 lbs.; the herd of Mr. W. J. Telford, of Ennismore, 29 lbs., which was equalled by the herd of Mr. J. R. Mann, of Trewern.

The herd of J. K. Moore and Son, of Central Smith, consisting of 21 cows is doubtless the best herd of its size in the district ,a herd which its owners have good reason to feel proud of.

The herd of Mr. T. T. Milburn, of Trewern, contains the largest number o fhigh testing cows. 9 out o fthe 14 testing 4 per cent., or over.

Due to the Middleman.

Washington, Nov. 15.—President Taft is planning to take up the high cost of living in a special message to Congress when he transmits the report of the Tariff Board's investigation of the wool and cotton schedules.

It is also said that the President will vigorously renew his recommendations for a parcel post.

The Tariff Board's findings will show, it is declared, that much of the high cost of living is due to the middleman rather than the tariff.

66,600,000 Bushels Safe.

Winnipeg, Nov. 15.—Yesterday's report to the Board of Trade on the condition of the 1911 crop of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba shows that 75 per cent. of the threshing has been completed in Manitoba and 50 per cent. in Saskatchewan.

There has already been inspected in Winnipeg to date 44,921,810 bushels of wheat, and there is now in store in interior elevators fully 18,000,000 bushels more, with 3,700,000 in transit not so inspected, so that 66,621,810 bushels of wheat are safe.

The snow fall has been about five inches on the level and in Alberta and Manitoba it is very dry and shakes out of the stocks quite readily.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY'S OPENING MEETING IS HELD AT COBOURG

Fusilade From Ontario's Doughty Premier — Riddling the Liberal Platform.

Cobourg, Nov. 16.—It was no mere opening gun in the Ontario political campaign that Sir James Whitney fired here last night. It was a perfect broadside, a fusilade of records achieved that stand out before the electors in bold relief, not as promises visionary or uncertain, but as things actually accomplished in the interests of the people of Ontario.

Girt about with this armor of what the Government has accomplished in the seven years of its existence, Sir James boldly entered the centre of this avowed Liberal riding of West Northumberland to give an account of his stewardship.

Victoria Opera House, where the big meeting was held, was crowded to the doors. The townspeople, whatever their party affiliations were, put them aside for the time being and vigorously applauded the Premier as he recounted the different measures of progressive legislation that are now being enforced by the Government of the Premier province of the Dominion.

"I speak under somewhat of a disadvantage after the flattering words said about me by the previous speakers," said Sir James Whitney. "If I continue to receive the approbation such as I have received here to-night, I will continue to so direct my public life that you will not regret it as the days go by. Conscience and intelligence are the two main things required in the Legislature by those representatives who are elected."

Sir James, therefore, complimented Capt. McCullough on his intention to preserve his individuality if elected, but assured the captain that he would see nothing objectionable done by the Government.

Sir James said that the new leader of the Opposition had issued a remarkable manifesto, endorsing practically three-fourths of the Government's program, while on the questions of temperance and bilingualism, he hedged and shuffled and utterly failed to adopt any definite policy.

After referring to Mr. Rowell's statement that the Liberal platform aimed among other things to establish experimental farms, Sir James remarked that the Government already had established experimental farms all over the province.

"That is a sample," said Sir James, "of the twaddle that the Liberal leader wants the intelligent voter to swallow.

"To conduct the Government of the country in a business way," said Sir James, "that's the plain and simple way of describing what the Government of Ontario has tried to do, and will continue to do. Before we came to power our opponents stigmatized us as incapable of conducting the Government of the country, but what has been our record since?

"We created the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, which is meeting with some criticism at the present time in Toronto, but that does not matter. The people are only beginning to see the value this board is doing.

"We reduced the price of school books. We have honestly enforced the liquor license law. It is not perfect, but I defy anybody to show that we have anything of its kind in North America to compare with the honest way in which this law has been enforced.

"Public school teachers will now be required to teach one year in Ontario after granting of their certificates, and the salaries of the teachers have been increased during the past year.

"The needs of the provincial university have also been attended to. $486,000 having been granted to that institution. The sum of $582,000 has been spent during the year on colo-

MONTREAL PEOPLE WANT THE GEORGIAN BAY CANAL RUSHED

Chambre du Commerce to Interview Members of Cabinet in a Body.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—The Georgian Bay Canal, the necessity of having a branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific to Montreal, and the delay in the delivery of goods by the railway companies were questions which occupied the attention of the Chambre de Commerce yesterday afternoon.

The Chambre adopted a report to the effect that the body should at once urge the Government to take all possible steps for the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal and another to the same effect in connection with the desired branch of the Grank Trunk Pacific, adding a proviso that it be under the control of the Railway Commission.

The question of delay in the matter of delivering goods was brought up by a letter from the Calgary Grain Exchange, suggesting that freight trains be required to travel at a given rate under penalty. The Chambre de Commerce, however, adopted a report to the effect that railway companies should be required to deliver merchandise 48 hours after the receipt of the cars at their destination and to pay $2 per day demurrage.

ANOTHER ENGLISH NOBLEMAN TO TAKE AMERICAN BRIDE.

MISS ANTOINETTE HECKSCHER

Another international romance involving a leading New York family and one of the old families of England has become known to society. The engagement has been announced of the beautiful Miss Antoinette Heckscher, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Heckscher, of New York, to the Hon. Oliver Sylvain Baliol Brett, eldest son of Viscount Esher. The engagement compares in interest with that of Miss Mildred Sherman and Lord Camoys, who are soon to be married. While Mr. Brett is now an Honorable, he will succeed to the title of Viscount on the death of his father.

Yukon People Selfish?

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—"People up in the Yukon don't seem to care a continental hang about anybody but themselves," said Chairman Mabee yesterday morning, when an application for the postponement of the Dawson Board of Trade's complaint that the White Pass and Yukon Railway was charging excessive rates, was made. On account of the sudden death of Mr. Samuel H. Graves, president of the railroad, the case was adjourned till Dec. 6.

Turks Violating War Rules.

Tripoli, Nov. 16.—A report from an Italian source says that Derna was attacked by the Turks Tuesday night, but the enemy was repulsed. The Italian outposts at Tobruk were attacked with the same result.

A large number of Italians are in a critical state as a consequence of wounds made by bullets and heavier projectiles, which had been purposely mis-shaped in violation of the rules of war.

C.N.R. Express Wrecked.

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—The Canadian Northern express, running from Regina, Sask., to Winnipeg, was wrecked at Ladysmith yesterday.

All the cars left the track, the sleeper being turned over on its side.

Several passengers were injured, but none fatally.

Wouldn't Pay For Ring.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 16.—Charles Lahey was yesterday arraigned before the magistrate on a charge of theft preferred by William Germain, Buffalo. Lahey purchased a ring for $300, paying $150, giving a lien note for the remainder. Later Lahey is alleged to have refused to pay the balance and his arrest followed. He was remanded until next Wednesday.

Yankee Troops For China.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 16.—The State Department has practically decided to send a regiment of troops from Manila to Chin Wing Tao, a seaport in China about 250 miles from Pekin in the Gulf of Pechili. The purpose is to perform an international duty under the Boxer treaty in keeping open the line of communication between Pekin and the sea.

Thief Lost $1,000 Bill.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 16.—The display of a plump roll of money, the outside bill of which was of $1,000 denomination, led to the arrest here yesterday of Louis Rettinger, 17, of Brooklyn. The $1,260 the police found on him is part of $2,500 he secured from a forged check a chum gave him to get cashed. He lost a $1,000 bill in Albany last Saturday.

China's Strong Man Takes Hold of the Situation Will Form a Cabinet First

Pekin, Nov. 16.—(1.35 a.m.)—Yuan Shi Kai has accepted the Premiership and will assume office probably to-day (Thursday). Yesterday's Official Gazette contained an expression of thanks from Yuan Shi Kai to the throne for his appointment, but the truth is that he did not undertake the task before him without receiving guarantees that he would have practically a free hand in conducting affairs while he retained his official position.

The new Premier yesterday received several foreign ministers. In conversation with a foreigner, Yuan Shi Kai said that he intended to form a Cabinet immediately and endeavor to carry on the government by securing the support of as many provinces as possible, allowing the remainder to retain their independence for the time being. It would be his endeavor also gradually to win back their allegiance to the throne.

Another important development in the capital was the issuance of an edict yesterday ordering Hsi Liang, formerly viceroy of Manchuria, to assume command at Jehol, where the summer residence of the Emperor is situated, in place of Puting, the Tartar general. This appointment has led to the belief in certain quarters that the court may retire to Jehol, leaving Yuan Shi Kai as chief executive until the opportunity arrives for the court to resume a measure of authority.

Sun Pao Chi, the viceroy of Shantung has been elected president of the republic, which has been proclaimed in that province. His acceptance of this office is in accordance with the Government's advice, and several viceroys have gone with the people in the hope later of influencing the provinces to renew their allegiance. The provincial assembly of Chili adopted a memorial to the throne in favor of the establishment of a republic with Yuan Shi Kai, as president.

Wu Ting Fang, Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the provincial government of Shanghai, and other noted reformers have sent a telegram to the American Charge d'Affaires here, asking the good offices of the United States in connection with the delivery of a demand for abdication. The telegram is dated Nov. 11, and reads: "Kindly deliver personally the following to His Highness the Regent, informing him that further conflicts between the Imperials and the people will cause needless bloodshed. If His Majesty abdicates we shall endeavor to afford safety to the court, and protection to their property."

The address is a last appeal to the throne to awaken to the seriousness of the situation, check the bloodshed and reform the Government.

PROBABILITIES

BLAMED FOR THE WRECK

Lord Graham Reprimanded by Court Martial.

Charges Against MacDonald and White to be Heard.

Halifax, NS., Nov. 16.—Lieut. Lord Alliston Graham was yesterday found guilty by court-martial of causing, or suffering to be caused, the stranding of H.M.C.S. Niobe on July 30 last on the dangerous ledges of Cape Sable. He was sentenced to be reprimanded. Lord Alliston Graham was officer of the watch up to fifteen or twenty minutes of the time the cruiser went ashore.

The proceedings began at 9.30 yesterday morning and lasted until 6.30 last evening. The witnesses included Commander W. B. McDonald of the Niobe and Navigating Lieut. James White, both of whom are charged with the same offence as Lieut. Graham.

While the evidence seemed to show an absence of any deliberate negligence on the part of the accused, it developed the fact that he had not been as attentive to duty as he should have been. He was well aware of the existence of the Cape Sable lights and the time they should be discernible from the ship; but when this time passed and the lights were not seen he did not immediately report the fact to Commander McDonald or the navigating officer.

Lieut. Lord Alliston Graham, in presenting his defence, maintained that it was unfair to hold him responsible for the stranding of the ship when he have been relieved of the watch about twenty minutes before the accident occurred. Lieut. Graham's reprimand means nothing more than a black mark for him. Nevertheless, he feels keenly his position in the matter, for up to the present time he has held an enviable record as an officer.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the first case, that against Lt. White, navigating officer, was called, but was adjourned till this morning. The case will likely occupy a whole day also, as will the case of Commander McDonald, which follows. The court-martial was conducted with all the old-time ceremony of naval affairs of its kind. The members of the court, as well as all the witnesses were attired in full dress uniform.

Toronto, Nov. 16— The conspiracy charges against Warren and Stratton were taken up at the County Criminal Court this morning before Judge Winchester. To Announce Streets.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Chicago street cars are being equipped with a device intended to do away with the needless opening of its car doors in the winter, thus contributing much to the comfort of the passengers. The device consists of four enunciator horns, like graphophones set in the ceiling at the four corners of the car. The conductor will have a small telephone through which he will announce street names, his voice coming through the horns. It will be necessary to open the doors only when passengers are leaving the cars.

Gains in P.E.I. Elections Defeat the Government.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Nov. 16.—The result of the provincial bye-elections in the third and fourth districts of Queen's yesterday was a big landslide for the Opposition. The Liberal Government, in power since 1891 has been defeated. The new House will consist of fourteen Liberals, fifteen straight Conservatives, and one Independent Conservative. Yesterday Dr. Dewar, a straight Conservative defeated Premier Palmer (Liberal) in the third district by a majority of 354 with one place to hear from, which will increase his majority. Mr. Palmer's majority in the same district at the general election of 1908 was 108.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—At the opening of the Court of Appeals, T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., on behalf of the United Shoe Machinery Co., made the following statement:

"After consultation with my clients, I have come to the conclusion to withdraw the present petition for leave to stay proceedings until the final judgment.

"The company welcomes the fullest inquiry, and as soon as it is convenient to the parties concerned we wish the proceedings to begin."

STRIKE ON IN MEXICO TOWN

Bread Famine is Threatened by Bakers Strike.

Torreon, Mexico, Nov. 16.—A general strike has been declared here. The bakers have joined in and a bread famine is threatened. Five thousand workmen are idle, including a thousand smelter employes.

Except for the arc lamps the city was in darkness last night, striking linemen interfering with the operation of the electric system.

The Enterprise has been compelled to close its offices because of threats that the employes would be dragged from their posts. Even the servant girls are quitting their places. The market place has been closed and the street cars are not operated.

Gotham's Ashmen Loses.

New York, Nov. 16.—The city has won its fight with the municipal ash and garbage men. Night work, to avoid which the 2,500 regular drivers struck, will be resumed as soon as the department can get its force of green men going smoothly.

The strikers are all liable for trial before the civil service commission for breach of the rules, and have been called to appear on Monday.

BORDEN AND LAURIER MIX IT UP IN THE FIRST SESSION

Sir Wilfrid is Bad Tempered Over the Speakership— Wants to Know What Mr. Monk Thinks of Dr. Sproule—Borden's Reply.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—A scrap on the first day.

Quite an unexpected and almost unprecedented air of belligerency marked the usually tame and peaceful ceremony of electing a Speaker of the House of Commons at the opening session of the 12th Parliament yesterday.

Hon. R. L. Borden who, on rising for the first time in his place as Premier, was greeted with prolonged and tumultuous cheers and applause, after a short historical review of the functions of the Speakership, an office which, he declared, demanded a man of intellect and experience in the rules and procedure of the House, one who should be in a sense the representative on both sides of the House, a man impartial, courteous, had nominated, seconded by Hon. George E. Foster, Thomas Simpson Sproule (East Grey), as one in whom these very qualities would be found to reside.

Then came the surprise.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was heartily cheered by his followers, rose to remark that while he could take no exception to the appreciation of the merits of Dr. Sproule uttered by Mr. Borden, he was surprised at the selection, not on the qualifications of the hon. member for East Grey, but his surprise arose out of the very set of circumstances under which the present administration had come into power.

The British system, he said, had been to continue the Speaker of the previous House in the chair, and if the Government were as devoted to British institutions as they had professed to be, they ought to have elected Mr. Marcil as their candidate. (Laughter.) But British institutions had been relegated to the backyard, to the dust heap of oblivion.

"Dr. Sproule," continued Sir Wilfrid, "is able, painstaking and conscientious, according to his lights, although his lights are not my lights. The only fault I have to find with him is that he is a Tory, a Tory of the Tories, the very quintessence of Toryism.

"But if I was surprised at the selection," the ex-Premier went on. "I was still more surprised that the selection received the endorsation of my friend, the hon. the Minister of Public Works (F. D. Monk).

"In 1905, these gentlemen (the Nationalists)," Sir Wilfrid continued, "alleged a conspiracy between him and me in connection with the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan to deprive the Catholics of their schools and the French settlers of their language."

The Premier was visibly annoyed and spoke with considerable warmth of the "display of ill temper" by which the House had been treated by the leader of the Opposition. Sir Wilfrid had already, he said, begun to give evidence of the line he intended to take, to preach in opposition what he did not practice in power. If he desired to test the House on the selection of the Speaker, the opportunity was open to him then and there.

Sir Wilfrid sat back in his seat and smiled.

After the tumult and shouting died and Dr. Sproule had been duly elected Speaker, he was escorted to the chair by the Premier and Mr. Foster.

When the Commons assembled at 5 o'clock, almost every seat was filled, and there was a fair attendance of spectators in the galleries. In the absence, through illness, of the Usher of the Black Rod, Sergeant-at-Arms Lemoine of the Senate attended to the opening ceremony.

Mr. Chable said he had made an inspection of all the important forest lands of the southern continent and found no pulp timber fit for papermaking.

Tried to Commit Murder.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—At yesterday afternoon's session of the Court of King's Bench, Nicholas Hayes was found guilty of attempted murder. He was charged with entering the room of Juliette Lagneau, at the corner of St. Elizabeth and Vitre streets on the afternoon of Sept. 3, and of firing three shots into her side. Hayes, who said he was a cigarmarker by trade, had been drinking heavily before the crime, ad stated he did not remember the affair.

THE YOUNG MEN

This is the day of the young man, the day when mature years is no recommendation, no requirement even for the filling of responsible positions. The young man who has energy, grit, perseverance, stability, can command almost what he pleases, for the world of business to-day wants workers, wants them regardless of all, save their ability, to carry through their work successfully.

It is a great pity that eighty per cent of the young men to-day do not half realise what they can attain and command by a constant effort to improve themselves in width and experience. Some young men go in for whatever work temporarily commands the biggest salary. That is in many cases a great mistake. If the work affords opportunity for the young man to grow himself in character, in force, in breadth of vision, then he may count himself fortunate, for no difference of a few dollars a week can equal the capital he is storing up within himself.

There have been hundreds and thousands of mottoes, and maxims, laid down by the sages as secrets of success. There is no royal road to success, however, for the average young man. If he would attain the Olympian heights, he must bend to the work with a will, caring but little for the immediate return, but laying a foundation for his life work, carefully and solidly.

The advantage in experience in several places, where conditions are decidedly different cannot be denied. Travel is broadening and culturing, and diversity of experience is most desirable, providing that the worker plods strongly ahead, with but the single object in view.

Perhaps never has there been such a demand for the young man of sober habits and straight, clean life. He is a jewel if he possesses ability and energy, a determination never to fall fall down, on whatever task may be handed out to him. Bright men, and clever men, men of great parts there are in plenty, but when measured in the scales of stability, concentration, reliability, they are often much underweight. The youth who can unite these qualities is the possessor of a priceless combination—a combination that should enable him to climb to astonishing heights. But pay strict attention to business at all times. He must pay the price if he would command the good things of this world.

THE ROWELL SPEECH

Toronto News.

In Massey Hall last night Mr. N. W. Rowell launched his 28-day assault upon the Whitney Government. The new leader maintained his reputation for oratory and eloquence. Pleasant, easy, and good humored on the platform he has a faculty of getting into touch with an audience. He has a musical voice that penetrates to all points of the auditorium. For the most part he is clever, rather than weighty in speech, though at times he can drive his points home with considerable force. An honest man, he displays considerable awkwardness when it comes to the political necessity of skating around an issue upon which his followers are divided. Where Sir James Whitney would be blunt Mr. Rowell is apologetic.

On the whole Mr. Rowell ... may have missed his chance. The platform to which he signed his name a few days ago contained some pleasant features, but it so far failed in striking out definite new lines of policy that many Liberals confessed their dissatisfaction with the document. Many then fell back upon the hope that in opening the campaign in Massey Hall he would elaborate his program, and give the public some clearer idea of where he stands in regard to contentious issues. They were doomed to fresh disappointment, for he once more straddled the liquor and bilingual school questions.

On the platform around him sat a number of millionaires and other representatives of "the interests," who were deemed malefactors when they supported the Conservative cause in a Federal election. As for the meeting itself it was well attended, although two or three hundred seats were vacant when the speaker began and at no time throughout the night were all the seats filled. The special train from Hamilton failed to stop all the gaps. Nevertheless the audience was large and attentive and at times even enthusiastic. The names of Earl Grey and Sir Wilfrid Laurier brought forth cheering and the Provincial leader himself got a flattering reception. The legend "A New Leader and New Measures" stretched across the back of the hall proclaimed the heroic effort of the party to disown and forget that past which has sunk it to its present low estate.

As chairman Mr. Mackenzie King almost put a damper on the proceeding by expressing the hope that Mr. Rowell would lead the party to victory—ultimately. This was followed by the amusing statement that being afraid to risk ten by-elections Sir James Whitney had decided to face the whole country in a general election. He condemned the present government for neglecting town-planning, which is a civic problem, and for the small growth in rural population, which is largely attributable to the Laurier Minister's policy of sending all its immigrants westward. In trying to belittle Sir James Whitney's instructions to Sir William Meredith regarding the drafting of a new Workmen's Compensation Act Mr. King rather trickily observed that the wage-earners wanted justice instead of a reference to a chief justice. Surely a learned High Court judge is the man to draw up an effective statute that will give the worker his rights.

In his opening sentences, Mr. Rowell displayed an engaging modesty. In recalling predecessors like Edward Blake, Sir Oliver Mowat, Mr. A. S. Hardy and Sir George W. Ross, he visibly shrank. He went so far as even to confess that "all admired the blunt frank honesty of Sir James Whitney," and to admit that he himself had still to be initiated into the mysteries of legislation. Then followed the usual platitudes about the Liberal party being always on the side of the masses. The claim may be true when made on behalf of Old Country Liberalism, but it certainly does not apply in Canada. Mr. Rowell was scarcely straightforward in praising the Laurier Government for settling the prairies and in at the same time condemning the Whitney Administration for the comparative non-settlement of Northern Ontario. The old Federal Ministry might have diverted some of its immigrants to Ontario instead of carrying them all West. Moreover, the greater portion of the Clay Belt of the North is still unserved by the National Transcontinental Railway while the peopling of the West is greatly facilitated by three trans-Canadian railways and innumerable branch lines. As the National Transcontinental Railway across Northern Ontario nears completion the Borden and Whitney Governments have joined hands to develop and populate the New North.

In saying that agricultural land in Ontario is generally held at lower values than it was twenty-five years ago, the leader forgot to admit that the Whitney Government has been in power less than seven years and that in that period the prices of farms have advanced remarkably in many districts. He talked of doing great things for the farmers, over-looking the fact that a few weeks ago he did all he could to expose them to competition from the agriculturists of half the world. He drew unfair inferences in regard to the shortage of school teachers, neglecting to state that Sir James Whitney has treated the educational and teaching classes far more generously than the preceding Administration. A question put by a woman in one of the boxes forced Mr. Rowell to speak on the bilingual school question, but after much round-about phraseology on his part it is clear that he is not prepared to go as far as the Government in settling this issue to the satisfaction of the people. The leader's criticism of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, will meet with sympathy. On the liquor license issue he said he had received many suggestions upon which he had not yet been able to make up his mind, but a policy would be formulated before he faces the country in another general election. Altogether the Massey Hall performance is not likely to stampede the electors or set the country on fire.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Liberal practice of making faces at the Nationalists was followed yesterday by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House of Commons. But Mr Borden's retort showed that the premier will not stand for the hypocrite game, as played by the Liberals.

A German captain interviewed in Montreal says that the Germans to a man are ready to fly at Britain's throat. But John Bull's neck is rather thick, and hard to twist. And John has a rather brawny fist to impress a suitable message into the mentality of the would-be chokers.

Reports from all over the province indicate that Whitney's hold on the people is strengthening rather than weakening. The ordinary non-partisan people see through the wiles of the politicians, and judge according to a sound, sensible standard. And by this standard shall Premier Whitney take on a new lease of life for the benefit of the province.

The Niobe was put on the rocks through an order sent by Finance Minister Fielding to have the vessel proceed to Yarmouth to attend an old boys' celebration. This is a fact which demonstrates that it was more than reciprocity which put the late government where its warship landed.

A WONDERFUL CASE

Three Months in Hospital And Came Out Uncured

Zam-Buk Cured Him in Few Weeks

Mr Fred. Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N.B., says—

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched would become very painful. When the knee got warm, it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger, and at a time when my finger was in such a terrible condition that I feared it would have to be amputated."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold-sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 15.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 11 were 1900 cattle, 3900 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 800 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1550 cattle, 1400 sheep and lambs, 1300 hogs and 400 calves.

A feature of the trade continues to be the strong undertone to the market for top quality and prices since Monday have scored a further advance of 25c per cwt., which is due to the limited supply of such coming forward and the fact that buyers are having some difficulty in filling their wants, even at the higher range of prices.

There was no change in the condition of the market for common and inferior stock on account of supplies being more than ample to fill all requirements, and if it were not for the active buying on the part of packers for canning purposes, a number would have been left unsold. The demand for milch cows is good, of which the offerings are not large.

The market for hogs was weak on account of the more liberal supply offered and prices as compared with Monday show a decline of 25c to 30c per cwt., with sales of selected lots at $6.25 to $6.50. The demand for calves was good.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 per cwt.; medium, $5.75 to $6; common, $4 to $5; canners, $1.75 to $2.50; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $4 to $5.00; bulls, $4 to $4.25; milkers, choice, each $75; common and medium, each, $50 to $60; springers, $30 to $40. A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

—BY—

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"You swine," she heard, as she was pushed on one side, and though it was not pretty English for Anstruther, her heart went out to the boy for it, as his fist crashed into the big Indian's face, dropping him like a pole-axed ox.

Kisbeenaw, for it was the chief's son, struggled to his feet. "Want more do you," drawled the English voice, now quiet and steady, and again the fellow went down and Anstruther stood over him ready to repeat the dose as often as the man should require it.

But a woman's voice cried to him. "The rifle, Frank: the rifle," and he was only just in time to put his foot upon it before the figure at his feet had got possession of it.

At that moment a man who had come running back from tending his horses stepped, white lipped and stern, in front of Kitty Clifford, so that she saw neither Kineeshaw nor the other Indians who had returned at the sound of the fighting, but she heard a rifle shot ring out, and if she could have seen from where she stood, she might have seen Jim square his shoulders and put his head back, like a man who prepares to take a shock. But neither Anstruther nor Jim fell. Khelowna, though he had fired point blank into the group, had not dared as much as that yet. It was only the wretched dog which, with a strange instinct, had crawled for preservation to Mrs. Rolt, that turned over under her very feet, and stretched itself in death. The blood of it splashed her skirt.

Then Jim jumped forward.

"Drop them guns, you dogs," he roared. "Anstruther, cover those men and stand still. If they stir, shoot. Now, Khelowna, drop that gun, or—" and his rifle said the rest.

The cowboy's tense face was working with rage, but the Indians who were fortunately in a group and unsheltered by timber, saw that his Winchester was as steady as a rock, and they knew a white man's voice when it meant business.

They knew too Jim Combe's reputation as a rifle shot, and when Khelowna dropped his empty rifle the rest of the band followed his example.

It takes a very brave man to shoot, when another and a quicker man has the drop on him, and except behind cover Indians are not very brave men, neither are they good shots, and this they knew.

"Let him up, Anstruther," ordered Jim, with his eye still on the group, "and now, you dogs, git to hell out of that! No! leave them rifles there; I want those in my business. If you put a hand to them I'll shoot you, sure."

Sullenly, but without a word of protest, the four braves slunk away, leaving behind them at one white man's command, what they prized most in the world.

When they had gone Jim turned to Mrs. Rolt.

"That's a bad business, a bitter bad business, I'm afraid. I lost my head a bit, so you mustn't mind if I did swear, Mrs. Rolt. We've got to git now, and only hit the high places between this and the ranch. Put Miss Kitty up, Anstruther."

But Anstruther was busy collecting the rifles.

"No! never mind them. I'll fix them," said Combe, and taking them one by one, he smashed the stocks off them against the nearest pine tree.

"Won't do much shooting for a while with them things," he commented, surveying his work of destruction. "But, Gee Whiz! it's a bad business. Let 'em go," and he put his foot in the stirrup and swung himself into the saddle whilst his horse galloped.

For six long miles he gave them no rest until Kitty was beginning to feel weak in her saddle, though Mrs. Rolt rode as if she would never tire, and then he pulled his horse into a walk.

"Take a bit of a spell now," he said, "and don't try to talk. We are all safe as long as it is light, and I don't suppose that they'll try to follow us any way, but we've got to make the ranch before dark, and that will keep us busy."

How do women telegraph to one another? Have they some subtler sense which we male things have missed, or is it that, through much practise, they can really speak with their eyes?

This deponent knoweth not, but this he knows, that when the four horses were steadied to a walk, the natural tendency of them was to come together, but at a glance from the girl, Anstruther found himself in some unexplained manner, attached quite against his will to Mrs. Rolt, and riding ahead, whilst Kitty and Combe followed them.

When Mrs. Rolt had taken Anstruther far enough ahead, Kitty Clifford's colt sidled up to Jim's cayuse, and putting her hand timidly on the man's arm, the girl said:

"Jim."

"Yes, Miss Clifford."

"Why not Kitty, as it used to be?"

He flushed to the roots of his yellow hair.

"Kitty then."

"Why did you get in front of me when that Indian shot the dog?"

"Did I, Miss Kitty? I beg your pardon. Did you want to see him do it?"

"Don't be stupid. Why did you do it?"

"Didn't know as I did do it."

"Didn't you, Jim? I think you did, old friend, but I wasn't worth it, Jim. I wasn't worth it"

What he answered or what more they said, the prairie breezes may know. This only Mrs. Rolt told me: that Jim did not say then what he might have said, and what Mrs. Rolt hoped that he would say, because when they reached the ranch that night she did Kitty's hair for her, and the girl had no secret to confide.

Perhaps Jim had scruples about hitting a man when he is down, as he would have put it, or may be did not want any mistake made between love and gratitude.

He was always a good sportsman, Jim.

CHAPTER VI.

A ranch house in the Far West is not quite the same thing as a country house in England, though even that is not always as luxuriously comfortable in small details as many of the middle class town houses of Canada. If we are at the beginning of things out West, we grow fast, and solid comfort is not an English monopoly.

What ordinary manor house in England has a bath room attached to every bedroom, electricity ready to be turned on at every possible point where light could be wanted, it's even temperature assured by a furnace in the basement, its labor-saving appliances so complete that one Chinese factotum can perform all the domestic labor which machinery will not do for him.

The want of domestic servants has made western men use their brains for the abolition of labor, and one of the results has been small houses so compact, so well arranged, that servants can almost be dispensed with.

But a wide gap divides the town house of Canada from the ranch house. That perhaps is more like a very early edition of the English manor house. Like it in its ample rooms where many men may gather together o' nights when the work is over; in its solidity, which gives it warmth in the long days of winter; and in its frank kinship to the Great Out-of-Doors, which alone makes it habitable for men who must be in and out all day long, and cannot spare the time to "change" every time that they are hungry. But after the day's work is over, on such ranches as the Risky at any rate, the cowboy, if he lives in the house, is supposed to shed his working dress, so that when the lights from the great log house streamed over the weary hunting party, the first to greet them was a cheery English squire in his evening kit of old pumps and a smoking jacket.

"Why, my girl," he cried, "what brings you home in this fashion?"

"Didn't you want to see us, old man? Yes! take the horses, Jim, and let some one else look after them. Don't stay to change. Come in to-night as you are. We've ridden all day, Dick, and most of the time at a gallop. Help Kitty upstairs. I believe she is too tired to walk."

"Shall we carry her, Anstruther?" asked Dick Rolt, helping his wife down first, "or do you think you are man enough to do that yourself?"

"I think I might just manage it, sir, if Miss Kitty will allow me."

But Kitty was not minded to give him the chance. Her eyes followed the "hired man" somewhat wistfully for a moment, and then putting her arm through Mrs. Rolt's, she climbed the stairs with her friend.

"I can't understand him," she whispered, "and he has changed. What have you done to him while I've been away?"

"Do you think that he is so much changed? I thought it rather like the old Jim to-day, when he put himself between trouble and our little madcap".

"Yes; but Polly—"

Mrs. Rolt saw that the girl was overtired and all but crying.

"'But me no buts,' Miss. There's your room and the old man has lighted the stove for you, which means that they saw us coming and that there will be a fire in my room, too, bless him. Go in and hurry, and don't keep dinner waiting. No man cares two straws how a woman looks when he is hungry."

Outside, in the corrall, Jim Combe led the tired horses slowly to their stables, and though he had been asked to hurry, dwelt unconscionably over his chores. As a rule he was the quickest man about the ranch, but on this occasion even the horses grew impatient and fidgetty under his leisurely handling.

They wanted their oats. Jim wanted to think.

He had to adjust himself to certain new phases of thought, and the operation was not easy to him.

Before Kitty Clifford went back to England, it had not seemed unreasonable that he, the foreman of the Risky Ranch, should aspire to her hand. She was of the ranch, a part of those wild plains which it dominated and had no other world to conquer. Neither did she seem to need any.

The ranch language was her language, its happiness her happiness; to her as to him there had been nothing worth having beyond it, and as far as such things mattered, he knew that if his man's life had roughened him a little, he was as well-born as she was.

So that there had seemed no reason why he should not love, and by and by marry Kitty Clifford.

There was no reason now, he almost believed, why he should not propose and be accepted.

But was it fair?

It was this thought that made him so rough with the colt that that indignant youngster hunched his back and drew up a threatening hind foot.

"Whoa, boy, steady," Jim said, apologetically. "Am I too rough with you little fellow, and wouldn't I be too rough with her?" he added to himself. Everything had changed since her visit to England. Before that she had been almost a child, now she was a young woman, who had tasted of the tree of knowledge, and knew, or thought that she knew, the good from the evil. Her eyes had been open so that she saw how rough and monotonous the ranch life was, and yearned after the brilliant life at home, of which she had not seen enough to tire. Worse than all for Jim, she had learned to see his lack of polish and the discords in his speech, which at home would have meant want of caste.

No. Jim was beginning to think that even if she would be content with the ranch life now, her content would not last, and lives are long in the West.

When he went into the dining-room a little later, the long table was nearly full. As usual Rolt's family party eat at the top end of it, and below the salt, as it were, sat the white men of the establishment. The Indian cowboys messed by themselves elsewhere.

As friend as well as foreman, Jim Combe had been accustomed to sit where he pleased, one day with the men when he wanted to talk cattle, the next among the tyhees, as he called those who sat above the salt.

On this day when he came in there were two places vacant, one above and one below the salt, and he saw Kitty draw her dainty gown of [illegible] soft sage green stuff towards her as if she would make room for him. Her action was in itself an invitation, and the dress, a combination of colors of that great cattle country he loved so well, with its soft dominant tones relieved by a flash or two of the sumachs' fiery crimson, touched him. He himself had suggested the colors of it, on a ride long ago, as colors proper for a "sage brush girl," as he had called her.

As he had not seen the frock before, he argued that it must be one that she had brought from England, and that therefore some thought of this, if not of him, had been with her there.

But he took the other place half way down the lower table between old [illegible] M'Gillivray.

It [illegible] ing to do of course, but it was done in obedience to a blundering instinct of his which forbade him to force the running whilst she had that ridiculous idea in her head that he had risked his life for hers, but it hurt him to see the pretty face harden and then light up, as he had never seen it before, for that fellow from England. He knew nothing of women, how should he, and he misread the signs, and wondered what on earth those two could find to talk about. Of course Anstruther knew her in England, and that made all the difference. Loyal Briton as he was, how he hated England for the moment, and even if he had known her in England, surely that was no reason why she should treat Anstruther like a brother, or better.

Yes, better; a good deal better.

Jim tried to break into the conversation, and did so clumsily.

"That's a bad racket, Boss, about those cattle thieves," he said, and his own voice seemed hard and unnecessarily loud. "They will be making a hole in your pile this season."

"Mrs. Rolt tells me that you found a branded hide in one of the Chilcoten's old camps."

"Found an ear anyways, but I'm scared that that is not all. Davies' murderer is out again with Khelowna's band. It means mischief."

"What ought we to do about that?"

"If we want to stop it we've got to catch some of the thieves and make an example of them. You know what Indians are if you let them get away with you."

"Then you would organize a posse and hunt them. It might be as well, but could we leave the Indians to look after the ranch for a week."

"Might as well. The work is pretty well forward, and Mr. Anstruther could look after the ladies."

"What do you say to that, Kitty?" asked the Boss.

"Certainly, if Mr. Anstruther's whole soul is not in the cattle."

Anstruther muttered something in his low drawling voice which the others did not catch, but Kitty's answer was sufficiently audible.

"Oh!" she laughed, "that is not manly, Mr. Anstruther. It's cattle first and cattle all the time with the men."

"Cattle are naturally rather important on a ranch, my dear," put in Mrs. Rolt. "We Western people have to work for our daily bread, and that is what the cattle mean to us."

"Some people work in England," retorted Kitty, tossing her pretty head, "but they don't bring their work to all their meals."

It was as near a slap in the face as Mrs. Rolt had ever received at her own table, and for a moment an uncomfortable silence fell upon them all, but Anstruther saved the situation.

"I don't think we should have done well on the prairie to-night, Mrs. Rolt. Do you hear how the wind is getting up?"

It needed no straining of ears to hear it.

For a spell there would be silence or only a thick whispering round the corners of the old house, and then an angry shaking of every casement in the building as if some strong man was trying to find a place to make an entry.

HER SKIN SEEMED ON FIRE

Every Other Treatment Failed But "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., Jan. 2nd, 1910.

"My wife was greatly distressed for three years with chronic Eczema on the hands, and the disease was so severe that it almost prevented her from using her hands. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, but none of them did any good. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves and she wore out three pairs without getting any benefit. As a last resort, I persuaded her to try "Fruit-a-tives", and the effect was marvellous. Not only did "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cure the Eczema, but the Asthma, which she suffered from, was also completely cured.

We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives". N. JOUBERT.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Eczema or Salt Rheum because "Fruit-a-tives" purifies the blood, corrects the Indigestion and Constipation, and tones up the Nervous System.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and valuable tonics, and is the greatest of all blood-purifying remedies.

LINGERIE PILLOWS

Girls of Today are Getting Strong on this Class of Home Ornamentation.

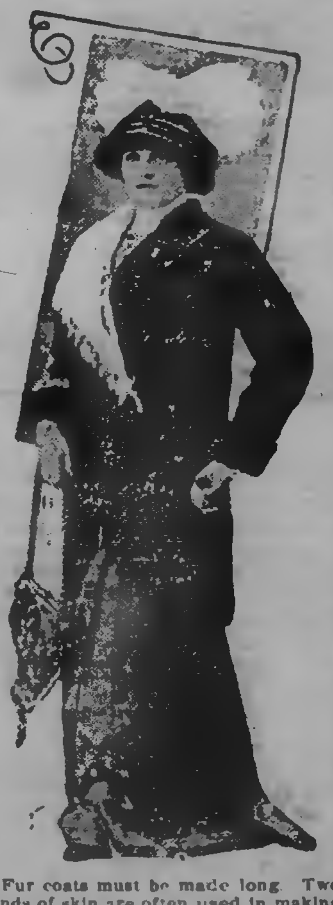
Many girls have come to the conclusion that they cannot have too many lingerie pillows. Time was when the girl who had one found it sufficient; but now she wants half a dozen. They are in all sizes and in all designs. Some are heart-shaped, others oblong many square and some of the new ones are circular.

All of these are flat, and the cases are made separately, with buttons and buttonholes about an inch from the edge and the under side. The lining, or rather the covering of the pillow itself, is in one's favourite colour. Pink, blue, and shades of lavender are usually chosen.

Some pillows are heaped on the bed, others on one's lounge in the bedroom, and some are tied to the tops of an easy chair. The girl who travels this summer must take at least one with her for she wants to make sure that she will be comfortable in whatever bed she sleeps. It may be scented with sachet powder or, if perfume is objectionable, she may simply use orris root, powdered and sprinkled, in the cotton filling.

One girl has made several artistic lingerie pillows by using the ornate front of blouses that were not serviceable last winter. A gown that had gone hopelessly out of fashion was also brought into play, and contributed its best part toward making the outer slip.

COATS WILL BE LONG



Fur coats must be made long. Two kinds of skin are often used in making a simple garment. This is especially true in the contriving of muffs and scarfs. Chiffon, velvet and silk are also used as decorations upon fur neck pieces and muffs.

About Neck-Wear

At the present moment neck finishes play a very important part in our toilette, and there never was such a selection of the kind as one finds in the windows of our drapery establishments to-day. Many of these are of the kind that the girl with quick, deft fingers can easily fashion for herself, out of the oddments she is sure to possess. There is, too, a use for many of those little lawn and lace trifles which our grandmothers treasured, and were perhaps worked by their own fair hands, and very proud are those fortunate ones who possess one or more of these embroidered fichus, and cambric collars, and lace sleevelets, as they can all be worn with great effect with the costumes and frocks of to-day. The side or Directoire frill is very popular, some of them being immensely wide, and fastened on the shoulder by jewelled pins. The very newest ones, however, are made of a triangular piece of Irish crochet, bordered with lace or a tiny frill. The Quaker note is as insistent as ever, and the rever-shaped affair of crochet is the latest idea in the way of a neck finish to this mode.

A Pretty Summer Frock.

High waist dresses are still as fashionable as they have been throughout the summer, and some of them are, indeed, very smart and becoming. One of the latest and most charming models has the blouse cut all in one, low in the neck, and with cool, short sleeves and the skirt just the popular width. The blouse and skirt are made up separately and joined together afterwards, a cord being sewn round to hide the seam. Another length of cord is sewn down the side of the dress, and buttons are placed along the edge to indicate a fastening.

For material there is nothing better than cool, soft tussore, or some of the many good imitations, which have been worn so much during the summer. Delaine of even zephyr or linen could, however, be used quite well, with collar and cuffs of either lace or embroidery.

A Result Worthy of Consideration

Endowment Policy No. 34022 was issued to a local citizen twenty years ago for which he paid in ten annual instalments to the Company in all premiums, amounting to $688.50. He now receives a single cash payment of $1273.65 which as an investment is over 4% compound interest, or he may accept $750.60 in cash, which is $62.10 more than he paid in, together with a paid up policy for $1000, payable at death which earns profits every year during the balance of his life.

Where can a young man or woman find a better way of saving money as well as providing a protection for those dependent upon them.

The above is the result of a matured policy in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA, payable on December 1st., 1911.

BIFOCALS

OR

DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments.

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

SIXTY FOUR NEW MEMBERS

For the W.F.M.S. of George St. Methodist Church

Sixty-four new members for the W.F.M.S. of George street Methodist church, speaks eloquently. This report was made at the regular monthly meeting of the society on Tuesday. The majority of the new names were received during the last week of one month's canvas and coming as they do, following three consecutive stirring missionary sermons by the pastor, Rev. Isaac Couch, encouragement is given to the pastor and to those who have worked in the interests of the campaign. With such a triumph as the campaign has brought, it is needless to say that still greater effort will be put forward. For some time past, the life of George street church has been growing broader, and expanding to points not reached before and there is every indication that the good work will continue.

Next Sunday evening the service will be especially interesting to young men. All members of the congregation and strangers will find the service of deep interest, but the young men have been particularly in mind in the arrangements for the evening.

Death came with painful suddenness into the home of Mr. Michael Calnan, at 498 Sherbrooke street, this morning, when the husband and father was stricken with illness while at his work at gas main extensions for the Peterborough Light and Power company in East City, and passed away one-half hour after being hurriedly taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

St. Lawrence Sugar

Compare the report of the Provincial Government Analyst, with the Analysis of any other sugar. You will find that "ST. LAWRENCE GRANULATED" is the equal of any other sugar, not only in Canada, but throughout the civilized world.

Read Prof. Hersey's Report:

MONTREAL, 22nd February, 1909.
I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

STORY DIDN'T GO WITH OFFICER

Hard Luck Tale Told by Wanderer Was Fruitless

Relief Officer Finch Miller had a visitor at his office yesterday who was a pretty fair sample of a large percentage of the class of people who say they are down on their luck and approach him seeking aid.

This particular man was apparently in the neighborhood of forty years of age, spoke broken French and evidently was of the same racial extraction. His story as related to the relief officer, was that he had walked forty miles that day and was anxious to reach the city of Montreal, but was lacking in money. Warned, however, by the odor of whiskey, which emanated from him, the officer felt that the man was unworthy of the assistance, and that his story was probably another one of the faked and unreliable kind so often poured into his ears, by unknown visitors.

The man wanted the officer to supply him with railway transportation to Montreal. When his request was refused he inquired if there was any Frenchmen in the city and he was directed to the place of business of one of his countrymen.

Leaving Lindsay

Lindsay is about to lose another of her bright and popular young men in the person of Mr. Merrit Knowlson, ledger keeper in the local branch of the Bank of Montreal. Yesterday Mr. Knowlson received word that he had been transferred to the branch at Edmonton, and he intends leaving for the west Thursday or Friday of this week.

Mr. Knowlson in leaving for the great west takes with him the good wishes of a large circle of friends in Lindsay. He is a local boy and has been prominent in curling, hockey and baseball circles for a number of years. His sportsmanlike and gentlemanly conduct and his genial disposition won for him many staunch friends, who will regret to hear of his transfer.—Lindsay Warder.

ROMANCE OF KLONDYKE

Large Audience Delighted With Lecture by Rev. R.M. Dickey

A very large and appreciative audience met in St. Paul's church last evening to hear the Rev. R. M. Dickey, now of Toronto, and formerly pioneer missionary of the Presbyterian church to the Klondyke, who gave a very entertaining and enjoyable lecture on pioneer days with the goldseekers of the Klondyke. Mr. Dickey had a number of slides made from photographs taken on the spot by himself and others, and he made use of these throughout the whole lecture with fine effect, illustrating the journey from Vancouver to Dawson City in a very realistic and vivid manner, as he made it in company with the vast number who braved the dangers and perils of the trail of 1897 and 1898 in their thirst for gold. He described the journey through the Chilcoot Pass and White Horse Pass. He gave many vivid touches of life on the trail and in the mining camps, and had something to say of the honor as well as the tragic and romantic life on the trail. He referred to a couple of books which had been recently published, one of which has as its title "The Trail of '98," and said, while perhaps there was not any exaggeration of certain phases of life that were to be found in the Klondyke, it was thoroughly defective in that it only disclosed one side of life or one strata of it, that was to be found among the men of '98. Mr. Dickey was in close touch with hundreds of men, and personally knew many who were as thoroughly Christian and consistent in their life as those to be found in any other part of the world. He said that the men who could stand the stress and strain of adverse influences of life on the trail and in the Klondyke were Christians of a very high type.

LT. COL. STEWART SAID FAREWELL

Leaves Command of the 15th Regiment at Belleville

Belleville, Nov. 15.—The officers of the Argyle Light Infantry and many friends and fellow citizens gathered in the hospitable mess room at the armories last night to present a testimonial of their regard to Lieut.-Col. Thomas Stewart, who has handed over the command of the regiment to Major Lorne W. Marsh, after five years of faithful and fruitful service as colonel commanding. Major Marsh, in a brief and appropriate speech, expressed the kindly feeling entertained by all his brother officers for the retiring colonel—while he was leaving the command he was in no sense leaving the regiment, of which he would always be an honored member. Col. Stewart's term of office had been historic in marking the building, completion and equipment of the splendid armories, their regimental home and his comrades would never forget his good work, his genial manner, and his honorable career as an officer and a gentleman. Major Marsh then presented Col. Stewart with a gold-headed cane, chastely engraved.

Successful Affair Given by the Knights of Columbus

The Knights of Columbus held their first dance of the season last evening in their comfortable rooms in the old opera house block. Over eighty-five couples were present and the occasion was a grand success. Progressive euchre occupied the evening until ten o'clock, then dancing commenced, with an intermission for refreshments.

The music was most capably supplied for dancing by Mrs. McGill, of Toronto, an artist of splendid ability, secured especially for the occasion. Everybody left the place feeling that the evening was an all round success.

MORE HUNTERS RETURN

Mr George Fitzgerald's party returned home from the hunt yesterday after having had a very successful outing. They had an excellent time and bagged eight deer. Mr. Fitzgerald is laid up with a bad cold to-day, which he caught on the way out.

IS DANGEROUS

East City Man May be Sent to the Asylum

Police Magistrate Dumble made out the necessary legal papers this morning at police court, for consigning an insane man who lives in East city, to the asylum, in Toronto, if such action is proven by medical examination to be needed.

The information relative to his condition was supplied by his sister, who testified to his being a dangerous and contrary subject to deal with. He is forty five years of age and has never been in a normal condition, and mental deficiency prevented him from securing any education. In later years he has been subject to epileptic fits.

WITH McEWEN AT THE GRAND

Mrs McEwen (Florance Hartly) laughed merrily at the suggestion of the effects as a result of her afternoon's sleep yesterday, when she chatted interestingly to a Review representative to-day.

"Why, I felt wonderfully refreshed," she remarked.

"It seemed as though I had slept for about one hour when awakened and I caught a glimpse of the boys in the gallery and I could have gone to sleep again."

"Why, if people would only educate themselves to the benefits which are to be derived from a hypnotic sleep much pain and suffering would be overcome, and people who spend sleepless nights, would find it a great boon."

THE LADY WHO SLEPT.

"And look at me," continued Mrs. McEwen, "I have gained in strength and weight and am in the best of health. Before taking these sleeps I weighed but 110 pounds. Now I can send the scales to 160."

Mrs. McEwen explained that the public demonstrations by her were made on account of the recent departure for her home in Richmond, Conn. of the lady who assisted Mr McEwen in this department of his work.

"The publicity does not appeal to me," she remarked, "yet at the same time, some objections made to the demonstration, came from very narrow minded people."

"When I take the sleep, it interferes with my rehearsal and singing, and that is the reason of my non-appearance last-night

Perhaps He Slipped?

There was a slight collision on Charlotte street last night about eleven o'clock when a young man, travelling at a high rate of speed, collided with the gate on the G.T.R. crossing, the consequences of his carelessness being that the gate was badly damaged. It might not be a bad "eyedea" for the young gentleman in question to procure a pair of glasses.

WHO'S COMING AND GOING

Mrs. (Rev.) Sawers will not receive to-morrow.

Mrs. R. M. Glover, 305 Margaret avenue, will receive the second Wednesday of each month.

Miss Jamieson, travelling secretary of the Y.W.C.A., has been a guest of the local association this week. Miss Jamieson's next trip is to the Maritime Provinces.

The many friends of Mr. Samuel J. Fanning, 255 Reid street, will be sorry to learn he was removed to the Nicholls hospital last evening and underwent an operation for appendicitis. He is doing as well as can be expected.

STOLE FROM "PRINCESS"

Police Land Youths who Touched the Till for $49

Two young Scotch lads aged fourteen and fifteen were arraigned before the police Magistrate this morning, and pleaded guilty of the theft of $49 from the office of the Princess theatre. The stealing took place late on the night of Saturday, October 28. Only $10 of the stolen money was recovered by the police, the remainder having been "blown in" on chocolates, pastry, picture shows and on other sources of gratification to youthful appetites.

ARRESTED AT HOME

Detective Newhall and P. C. Kidd visited the home of the lads last night and nabbed them both as they were leaving the house. The boys raised considerable of a rumpus, and objected strenuously to arrest using feet and teeth upon one officer.

Both lads retain their Scottish brogue. The family are but recent arrivals from the land of the heather and the parents are eminently respectable having tried to train the lads in the paths of rectitude. Both of the youngsters had been working but the swelling of their finances by the sum of $49 induced them to join the sons of rest and their spare time was given over to the ways of the idle rich.

HOW THEY WORKED

The slick way they stole the money one watching, while the other inserted his hand through the hole in front of the box office was cunning. The father of the lads was present and while innocent of his offspring's depredations, promised to pay Mr. Pappas, the proprietor of the Princess, one dollar a week until the debt was wiped off. Mr. Pappas generously offered to cancel the debt, but His Worship felt that it was due him.

The boys were allowed their liberty. J.E.L. Goodwill was present and took part in the proceedings.

FORMER LOCAL NEWSPAPERMAN REFEREES WITH GOTCH WORKING

Local friends of Mr. Croyland Yokome, who is identified with the Calgary Albertan, will be pleased to learn that he is meeting with success with newspaper work in the western city. Recently he had the honor of officiating as third man at a wrestling program put on in Calgary at which such celebrities as Frank Gotch and Yousiff Mahmout took part in mat exhibitions. "Timmy" also went on with a local grappler for a preliminary and later was included in a photo taken with the world's champion mat artist as principal. Mr. Yokome writes that the sport is taking well in Calgary.

PETERBORO BOYS ARE STARRING ON THE GRIDIRON

References to Pete Campbell Heffernan, Sheehy and Ross Craig for Their Great Work.

The following clippings, which speak in warm commendation of the work done by Peterborough boys in the rugby games on Saturday, will be interesting.

Right in line with the big Douglas boy stands Frank Heffernan, who starred from start to finish. Unless some unfortunate accident happens to the Peterborough youngster at the opening he should be the sensation of the Intercollegiate next year. This was the first game in which he had been feeling right, and he certainly showed how the game should be played. He tore through Varsity's line for a touch, and in the last quarter played from his own goal line right to centre, upsetting at least half a dozen men in his trip. Heffernan and Quilty are two of the heavier men on the College team, which goes to show that had the garnet and grey machine a little more weight, Varsity would have some trouble in getting into the same class with them.—Free Press.

Pete Campbell was the pivot on which the whole team worked. His handling of the signals was so perfect that the plays were in progress almost before the teams were lined up. Campbell's passing and tackling attracted attention throughout the contest. Varsity has had many good quarters, but Campbell is as good as any of them.

Dick Sheehy was a bright particular star at all stages of the game. His tackling was wonderful while he was down under every kick, and but for the decision of the referee Sheehy would likely have had credit for a College win.

To get away from the "ifs," the best team won, and in face of the tactics pursued by the T.A.A.C. officials in changing dates and demanding to have the game played at the H.A.A.A. grounds, victory is doubly sweet. Superior line bucking ability and the wisdom to use it at the right time, won the game for the Alerts, and to Ross Craig goes nine-tenths of the glory. It was Craig who started the fierce attack which turned the tide and placed the T.A.A.C. on the defensive in the last ten minutes of the final period, when matters looked bad for the locals. At that time ten minutes remained of the playing time and Alerts were only two points to the good and old Pete Flett was booting some and the wind was blowing about twenty miles an hour. Play was on Alert 30 yard line and Craig was given the ball. He hit the line with such force that he was not stopped until he had plunged to midfield and several crimson huskies had been knocked aside and a few knocked out. From that time on Alerts hung to the ball like glue and Liz Marriott's wisdom in saving his line as much as possible until the [illegible] tired the other fellow proved beneficial, and that is how the game was won. Had not Craig been so strong and had he not been assisted by Clark H. Hecker and Jack Grey, the husky scrim helping out, it would have been all over and good night, and our friend Livingstone, he with the long noodle, would have chuckled.—Hamilton Standard

HOCKEY

Annual Meeting of Hockey Club Called for To-night

Everyone interested in hockey for Peterborough this coming season is invited to attend the annual meeting of the hockey club, to be held at the National hotel this evening, commencing at eight o'clock.

New officers will be elected and other interesting matters discussed.

The death occurred at Cobourg this week of David Kerr, a prominent athlete of many years ago. The late Mr. Kerr was in his younger days, one of the best hockey players in the game. He was also a well known baseball umpire.

Berlin has dropped the professional hockey game and will enter a junior and intermediate team in the O.H.A. this season. Galt will also have two association teams.

There are eight names to be voted on for the O.H.A. executive and four to be elected. Among the list is the name of R. M. Glover, of the local club. Mr. Glover was an executive officer last year, having been appointed by the president.

Frank Heffernan has been drawing bouquets for his baseball and rugby performances at Ottawa College. Local fans will watch with interest his work in hockey.

Sarela, of last year's intermediates, is located in Guelph.

FRONTENACS LOSE MORE PLAYERS

McCammon and Davidson Have Gone to the West

Wm. McCammon and Allan Davidson of the Frontenac hockey team, left, on Monday noon, for Calgary, Alta., where they have accepted positions. It is likely that they will play hockey for one of the teams in that city. Kingston will lose two of the best hockey players that she ever had. The Frontenacs will lose greatly by them leaving the city. This now makes five players the Frontenacs have lost so far this season. The only players left of last winter's team are Brouse, Williams and Boyer.—Whig.

Coal Strike Averted.

London, Nov. 16.—A national strike in the coal trade was temporarily averted yesterday when the delegates of the miners, who have been in session here for three days voted against a ballot of the men as to whether a strike should be called.

Such a ballot undoubtedly would have resulted in favor of the cessation of work at the mines throughout the country.

Negotiations with the mine owners will be re-opened with a prospect of a compromise being reached.

Manitoba Boundaries.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Word has been received by the Government that Premier Roblin of Manitoba will be here to-day to reopen negotiations for the arrangement of the boundaries of Manitoba. The negotiations were carried on for years with the old Government without conclusion, an agreement on the financial terms of the proposal being found impossible. It is doubtful if the conference will result in an immediate settlement of the question.

Chicago Packers Released.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—On application of counsel for the defendants indicted in the Beef Trust cases, Judge Kohlsaat, in the U. S. Circuit Court late yesterday issued a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the ten packers. The writ is returnable next Thursday. The action of the packers came as a surprise to the Government.

Attorney J. S. Miller, who appeared for the packers, attacked the validity of the Sherman anti-trust law in his petition for the writ of habeas corpus.

Robert Walker was elected president of the St. Andrew's Society of St. Catharines.

MR. BURKE'S VISIT

Architect Inspects New Murray St. Church

Mr. Edmund Burke of Toronto, the architect of the new Murray street Baptist church spent Tuesday in the city inspecting the work. He expressed himself as being very much pleased with the stonework which is now completed, and also with the splendid work of the local contractors Messrs. McIntyre Brothers. The building will be heated next week and plastering proceeded with. Mr. Saxby has the lathing almost done. The grounds around the building are being levelled and graded and certainly, the effect of the stately stone building on the square with its ample grounds, is a matter of real delight to all who are interested in the progress of Peterborough.

The Baptist church, when completed will be second to none of the admirable buildings in the city.

REV. J. E. STARR'S APPOINTMENT

Holder of New Office Was Assistant at George Street

The appointment of Rev. John Edward Starr to the office of a commissioner under the Juvenile Delinquent's Act, giving him the power of police magistrate to deal with juvenile offenders at a juvenile court, which will be instituted in Toronto is of local interest.

The older residents of the city, especially members of George Methodist church will remember Rev. Mr. Starr when he was located in Peterboro, as assistant pastor of the church, just thirty years ago, and local acquaintances will congratulate him on his new appointment.

Under the act referred to, the Children's Aid Society officers are given power to keep child offenders under constant supervision.

Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill, the local Children's Aid Society officer, considers the adoption of a similar system in this city, would be a first class think, although in his opinion the work here was most thoroughly looked after by the Police Magistrate.

A Sham and Delusion.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 15.—The recent conviction for conspiracy of three officers of the Cigar Makers' Union at Tampa, Fla., because they advised their fellow-workmen not to return to work, was condemned by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor here yesterday.

"Outrages as they occurred in Tampa," declared the council, "tend to intensify the feeling among our people that equality before the law is a sham and delusion."

It was said that two of the indicted Tampa labor chiefs had been pardoned. The council demands immediate pardon of the third.

Re-instatement of the carpenters and joiners and the steam and hot water fitters and helpers suspended from the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor at the St. Louis convention last year, was recommended by the executive council.

That Manitoba Boundary.

Winnipeg, Nov. 15.—Premier Roblin and Hon. Colin Campbell left yesterday for Ottawa to take up with the new Government the extension of Manitoba's boundaries.

Saskatchewan will contest Manitoba's claim to the Hudson Bay country.

Mr. Roblin said that he had hopes that this would be the last trip necessary to Ottawa to obtain equality as regard the natural resources for Manitoba.

Wants Resignation Accepted.

Boston, Nov. 15.—The members of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge have received a second letter from their pastor, Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, under indictment for the alleged murder of Avis Linnell, urging the acceptance of his resignation as pastor of the church.

Wm. H. Haw[illegible], of the Inland Revenue Department, is dead at Winnipeg, aged [illegible].

IN THE WORLD OF SCIENCE

COMICAL WAYS OF CRABS

Peculiarities of the Crab Before Reaching the Tinned Stage Awaken Curiosity of the Naturalists.

The peculiar fascination of crustacea consists largely in the extraordinary variety of bizarre forms which they have assumed under the pressure (so to speak) of their environment—infinite variations on much the same theme of joints and legs. Furnished by nature with a beautifully articulated suit of armour (which they are compelled to discard and reproduce from time to time to allow for growth), evolution has had to play some queer pranks with them to equip them for the very varied situations in life in which we find them—exaggerating or diminishing out of all sense of proportion (according to our ideas of congruity) a limb here, a joint or series of joints there; tucking one part of the body under another; flattening into a plate in one case, drawing out into a mere thread in another; and thus and in other ways giving rise to the quaintest series of forms to be met with in the animal kingdom. Then their curiously intelligent habits are no less fascinating to watch — their habit, for instance, of carefully testing their environment with their feelers; their alternately retiring and pugnacious disposition; their inimitable gait and comical ways of walking off sideways and of "backing." All these features combine to awaken our curiosity and strike our sense of humour. Added to this lack of dull monotony in the group is the additional advantage to the student that crustacea, where they occur (and they occur practically everywhere), are comparatively easy to capture and to keep in activity. They do not require shooting or a laborious hauling of nets, or even digging up to any extent. A dipping or a towing net or a simple trap is generally all that is necessary to ensnare them. No wonder, therefore, that the crustacea are a favourite group with naturalists, both professional and amateur.

A LIGHTNING PHENOMENON

Reports of the occurrence of globular or ball lightning during recent severe thunderstorms in Europe have again drawn attention to this rare and singular electrical manifestation. Half a century ago the reality of this phenomenon was much doubted, but the gradual accumulation of trustworthy evidence has now thoroughly demonstrated its actual existence. The records agree in describing the appearance as that of a luminous ball, generally of a bluish colour, and varying in diameter from a few inches to as much as three feet. The sphere has a sluggish motion, either falling slowly from the clouds or drifting over the surface of the ground, the movement always being such as to give the impression that the thunderbolt is of material heavier than air. It remains visible for several seconds or even minutes, and as a rule finally explodes with great violence. The disappearance is generally followed by a strong smell of ozone in the locality. During the period of visibility the ball often behaves in an extremely peculiar manner. Sometimes it seems propelled along horizontally by a feeble air current or by electric forces. Frequently it has been seen to follow the course of a conductor, such as a water main, and it almost always explodes on coming into contact with a sheet of water such as a pond or stream. The immense store of energy which the ball undoubtedly contains is evidently not held in the shape of a surface electric charge, as it is not destroyed by contact with ordinary conductors. Thus the ball may touch earth, pass down a chimney, traverse a room, and so on, without being dissipated, although it has thus had abundant opportunity of giving up any surface charge of electricity. It is indeed this very tenacity of existence which has in the past caused certain physicists to be rather sceptical of the phenomenon, while so far at least all attempts to produce analogous appearances experimentally have been entirely unsuccessful.

Stinging Trees

In the southern part of Formosa grows a tree, about 10ft. in height having long leaves which possess the property of the nettle, and produce a maddening irritation of the skin when incautiously touched. The natives call it chiao-jen-kou, meaning "man-biting-dog." Mr. Tokutaro Ito of Tokio, who has recently made a botanical exploration in Formosa, suggests the name "viper tree" as a more distinctly warning title. There is another species of "stinging tree" in Australia, which attains a height of 15 feet, and the effect of whose touch appears to be even more maddening to men and animals. Horses stung by it have to be shot, and dogs, when affected by the poison of the leaves run about whining and biting themselves.

Spiders' Threads in Astronomy.

The cultivation for scientific use of certain species of spiders, solely for the fine threads they weave, has an important bearing upon astronomy. No substitute for the spider's thread has yet been found for bisecting the screw of the micrometer used for determining the positions and motions of the stars. Not only because of the remarkable fineness of the threads are they valuable but because of their durable qualities. The threads of certain spiders raised for astronomical purposes withstand changes in temperature, so that often in measuring sun spots they are uninjured when the heat is so great that the lenses of the micrometer eyepieces are cracked. These spider lines are only one fifth to one-seventh of a thousandth of an inch in diameter, compared with which the threads of the silkworm are large and clumsy.

nization roads, and since the present Government came into power the finances of the province have been put on a sane and stable footing.

"In spite of all of the obstacles, and they were many, that have been thrown in our way by the late Dominion Government, we have carried on and extended our Hydro-electric system in eastern Ontario and brought cheap power to the very doors of the people.

"Mr. Rowell stands to-day before his party, that in many ways has worked for the good of the country, the bond slave of the interests, and I say before you here, that Mr. Rowell dare not formulate a policy on the temperance question, and he dare not form a policy on the bilingual question."

With regard to Mr. Rowell's attitude on the temperance question and bilingual schools, Sir James said that no individual ever picked his footsteps over a hot gridiron with more precision than Mr. Rowell did over these two questions.

Moreover, it is hard to understand what the promptings are that make Mr. Rowell propose to give over the control of the Ontario Government Railway to the Dominion Government—this railway, that is bringing such a revenue to the province.

MADE WELL AND STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto.—I gladly give you my testimonial in favor of your wonderful medicines. Last October I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas.

After receiving your directions, I followed them closely and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels, and am stronger in every way.

I also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby was born, and I recommend it highly to all pregnant women.—MRS. E. WANDBY, 32 Logan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Another Woman Cured

Maple Creek, Sask.—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I am now in perfect health. I was troubled with pains every month. I know other women who suffer as I did and I will gladly recommend your medicine to them. You may publish this if you think it will help others.—MRS. F. E. COOK, Maple Creek, Sask.

If you belong to that countless army of women who suffer from some form of female ills, don't hesitate to try Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

On Charge of Blackmail.

London, Nov. 15.—(C.A.P. Fader stayed at the First Avenue Hotel, and the allegation is that the prisoners tried to extort money by threatening him with the accusation that he had caused an illegal operation to be performed on a young woman whom the prosecutor had innocently befriended. When the alleged blackmail was attempted Fader promptly denied the allegations and communicated with the police.

WHAT CANADIANS ARE DOING

REV. MELDOLA DE SOLA

The well known Jewish pastor of Montreal is the eldest son of the late Rev. Abraham de Sola, L.L.D. of that city, who was one of the most scholarly exponents of orthodox Judaism in America, and was born in Montreal May 22, 1853. He early displayed a love for Hebrew and Theological studies, which were prosecuted under direction of his father and after following commercial pursuits for a time, his father's failing health redirected his attention to the work of the ministry, and from 1876 to 1882, he officiated regularly as voluntary lay assistant at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue in his native city. On the death of his father in 1882, the son, at the urgent request of the congregation took over the charge, thus becoming the first Jewish minister of Canadian birth.

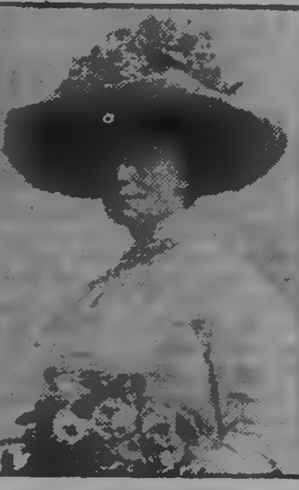
REV. M. DE SOLA
First Canadian-born Jewish Pastor

He is recognized as the leader of the orthodox majority of the community and as a steadfast opponent of innovation and so-called reform.

The Rev. gentleman is an accomplished musician, and he instructed the congregational choir for a long number of years.

Mrs. VERA SHEARD

The list of Canadian women who write charming verse is quite a lengthy one, and carries the names of not a few who are possessed of a very high talent in that particular section of literature, and whose work finds ready acceptance by the best class of magazines published in this country and in the United States. Amongst these Mrs. Sheard occupies an honorable position. One of her latest and best efforts reached the public within recent times through the pages of Scribners. Mrs. Sheard is a resident of Toronto.



MRS. VERA SHEARD
A Toronto Poetess

HON. T. CHASE CASGRAIN

Although he first saw daylight on the southern side of the border, he saw so little of it before his transfer north, and has, moreover, been so closely identified with interests of prominence in Canadian life since the years matured him into manhood's estate, the Hon. T. C. Casgrain is by general acceptance an adopted son of the Dominion. Born in 1852, his educational terms were spent at Quebec Seminary and Laval University. During the years 1886-96 he was member of the Quebec Legislature; was Attorney-General for the province 1891-96, and member of the House of Commons 1896-1904. He took a leading part in election matters amongst the French-Canadians of Quebec during the recent contest.

In Mr. Casgrain's manner there is something of the military, and he has been likened to Lord Roberts in general appearance. Upstanding, dignified and alert, with self-command and determination expressed in every movement — one feels, as one looks at him, that the description is an apt once. The white tuft of hair upon the under-lip, and the white moustache that almost meets it bristle with military vigor, — and vigor, too, is expressed in the snappy eyes partially concealed by gold-rimmed glasses.

As a platform speaker, he is recognized as of its orators of the country. In his own native language he is eloquence personified, and he is scarcely less magnetic in English. The sentences pour from him like a flood — humorous, compelling and at times extraordinarily ironical.

Mr. Casgrain's father was Hon. C. E. Casgrain, and the family dates back to Canada's early French days.

France and Spain will now negotiate to determine the status of Spain in Morocco.

WHAT "A1 AT LLOYDS" MEANS

A Well Known Phrase to Most People, but Few are Familiar with its Real Significance.

In the first place, it may be as well to explain, that Lloyd's it not an insurance company. It is simply a combination of individual members, each member transacting his own business, but being bound by the common rules. In other words, Lloyd's does not insure as a body, all business being transacted by individual members. These members divide the risk, each member taking a small proportion only.

Thus, in the case of a policy for $5000 it is quite probable that the risk would be split up between ten members. Each of these members would sign the policy, stating the amount of risk undertaken. As the signatures are written on the policy one under the other, the meaning of the term "underwriter" becomes apparent.

In the case of a large policy, there may be columns of names, and so it would happen that should a vessel be wrecked no individual person would be responsible for the whole loss, in the case of disaster no member would have to pay more than the amount underwritten by him. It frequently happens that the fractional risk taken by an underwriter may be underwritten again by other people, who will thus share his loss, if such occurs.

Lloyd's was started about the year 1688 by Edward Lloyd, the first of the Lloyds, who kept a coffee shop in Tower Street, and who at the same time provided such facilities for marine insurance that his name has always remained as the title of the association of underwriters who transact business under its auspices.

Lloyd's grew and prospered. So much so that the members made fortunes. The years 1811 and 1871 were red letter years in the history of the association, the former witnessing the organisation of the company on the lines on which it is still conducted, and the latter the Act of Incorporation.

In every port and upon every coast Lloyd's are represented, and at the present moment there are no less than 2000 agents stationed all over the globe. The movements of every ship from point to point are known to these men, and, as they are in constant communication with headquarters in London, the latter are in a position to answer all inquiries relative to vessels in which Lloyd's are interested.

Marine insurance and marine information are the specialities of Lloyd's, but every kind of risk is undertaken. The underwriters will insure any person against practically any imaginable contingency.

Always Her "At Home" Day

Carpenter-mason birds would probably own the hornbills as the head of their profession. A pair of these birds make their nest in the trunk of a tree, and the female, when about to lay her eggs, enters the hole and does not come away until the eggs are hatched. There is no way out, for her lord calmly fastens her in by plastering up the hole through which she has entered, leaving only a narrow slit through which she can thrust out her beak to be fed by him. The male has a hard time in feeding her and the whole family which is presently hatched. Still, his family costs him less than does that of the eider-duck, which plucks the down from its snowy breast to line her nest.

Birds build pretty well everywhere, with all manner of material. The king-fisher is content to have evil-smelling fish-bones in the hollow tree-trunk in which it lays its eggs; the hoopoe, similarly housed, has a nest which smells vilely, apparently as a means of protection. A bare ledge of rock for a sea-bird, a hole in the sand for the ostrich, a mound of decaying vegetation acting as a natural incubator for the eggs of the brush-turkey; nests of leaves, nests of spiders' webs, nests of dainty lichens; nests shaped like cups, like bottles, like hammocks, like sugar-loaves; nests made from a sort of glue from the bird's mouths—there is no end to the variety of nest-making, from the simplest to the most complex.

Opening Up the West Lands

One of the most remarkable features of the railroading in Western Canada this year has been the unflagging energy of the Canadian Pacific Railway officials in pushing forward its branch lines to completion. Despite the fact that the company has had to pay big prices for construction gangs, owing to the scarcity of labor, hundreds of miles of new road have been built, and good services inaugurated, greatly to the convenience of incoming settlers.

What is probably the longest of these new branch lines was opened for traffic early in November — the Regina-Colonsay branch. There were really two branches open, as at Valeport Junction, 24 miles from Regina, a sub-line leaves the big branch and runs to Bulyea. From Regina to Colonsay it is 132 miles, while from Valeport to Bulyea it is 19 miles.

Never Too Late

Character may be improved, and it should be guarded and kept bright. Reformation is praiseworthy, and it is never too late for people to reform, and change and mend their ways. Reformation proceeds from within, and is independent of external circumstances. It may be produced by some good thought which enters and fixes on the mind, or it may come from the light produced from the flame developed by a spark of goodness which entered the heart, and radiates, and transforms darkness into light over the whole character. There have been many instances of people that have not seen, or corrected, the errors of their ways until they reached middle age, and they then turned over a new leaf, and became good and useful members of the community.

Fill out free coupon below and mail today. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

Pennsylvania Man Thankful

Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Perhaps it will interest you to know that I have been ruptured six years and have always had trouble with it till I got your Appliance. It is very easy to wear, fits neat and snug, and is not in the way at any time, day or night. In fact, at times I did not know I had it on; it just adapted itself to the shape of the body and seemed to be a part of the body, as it clung to the spot, no matter what position I was in.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They would certainly never regret it.

My rupture is now all healed up and nothing ever did it but your Appliance. Whenever the opportunity presents itself I will say a good word for your Appliance, and also the honorable way in which you deal with ruptured people. It is a pleasure to recommend a good thing among your friends or strangers. I am,

Yours very sincerely,
JAMES A. BRITTON.

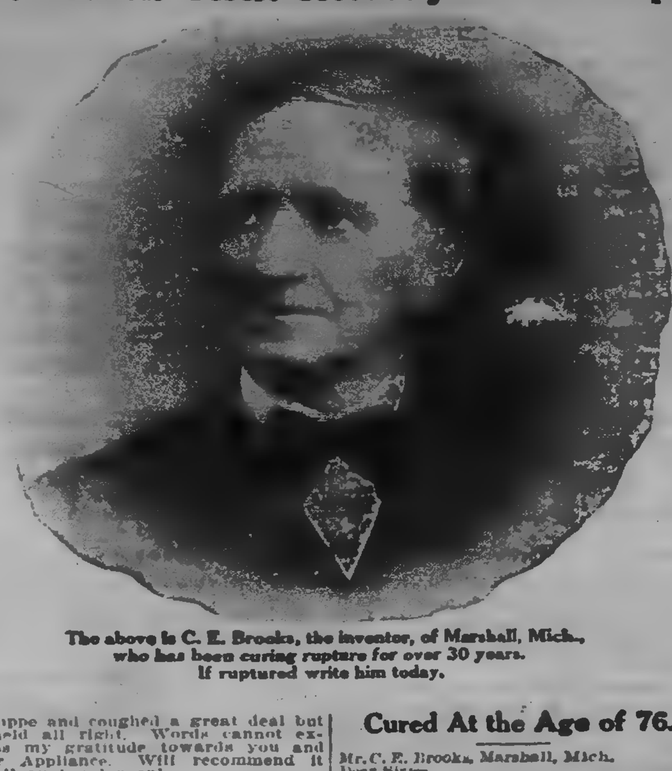
Recommend From Texas Farmer

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co.,
Marshall, Mich.

Gentlemen:—

I feel it my duty to let you, and also all people afflicted as I was, know what your Appliance has done for me. I have been ruptured for many years and have worn many different trusses, but never got any relief until I got your Appliance. I put it on last November, but had very little faith in it, but must say I am now cured. I have laid it away—have had it off for two weeks and doing all kinds of farm work with ease. While I was wearing it, I had lagrippe and coughed a great deal but it held all right. Words cannot express my gratitude towards you and your Appliance. Will recommend it to all ruptured people.

Yours sincerely,
Bald Prairie, Texas. J. E. LONG.



The above is C. E. Brooks, the inventor, of Marshall, Mich., who has been curing rupture for over 30 years. If ruptured write him today.

Others Failed But the Appliance Cured

C. E. Brooks,
Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Your Appliance did all you claim for the little boy and more, for it cured him sound and well. We let him wear it for about a year in all, although it cured him 3 months after he had begun to wear it. We had tried several other remedies and got no relief, and I shall certainly recommend it to friends, for we surely owe it to you. Yours respectfully,

Cured At the Age of 76.

Mr. C. E. Brooks, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

I began using your Appliance for the cure of rupture (I had a pretty bad case) I think in May, 19[illegible]. On November 20, 19[illegible] I quit using it. Since that time I have not needed or used it. I am well of rupture and rank myself among those cured by the Brooks Discovery, which, considering my age, 76 years, I regard as remarkable.

Very sincerely yours,
Jamestown, N. C. SAM A. HOOVER

Child Cured In Four Months.

21 Jansen St., Dubuque, Iowa

Brooks Rupture Appliance Co.

Gentlemen:— The baby's rupture is altogether cured, thanks to your appliance, and we are so thankful to you. If we could only have known of it sooner our little boy would not have had to suffer near as much as he did. He wore your brace a little over four months and has not worn it now for six weeks.

Yours very truly
Andrew Eggenberger.

Ten Reasons Why

You Should Send For Brooks Rupture Appliance.

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.
2. The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.
3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.
4. Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.
5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.
6. The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.
7. There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.
8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.
9. All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.
10. My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon today.

Remember

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail today.

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

WHEN NATURE KICKS

Science Shows that Overfeeding is Responsible for Many Ills that Affect Mankind.

It is surely a reflection on our present-day "civilisation" to find that we are still immersed in, surrounded by, and suffering from an incalculable amount of illness and disease in every shape and form, says a scientific writer, who claims over feeding is at the root of the evil, and suggests a reform in our dietary that would eliminate disease, and maintain the average human frame in sound health. Advocating a two-meal-a-day plan, he says:

"If we would only, after rising in the morning, wait some two or three hours, exercise a little, or do some work, the whole system would be far more ready to digest and assimilate the food; therefore, it would be infinitely better for most of us if we would take our first meal at eleven or twelve o'clock, with nothing whatever before that, unless it be a little fruit; then wait for some six, seven, or eight hours before we have our second meal; we should thus have allowed sufficient time for the organs of digestion to empty themselves thoroughly; and be it remembered again, that it is not until such organs are thus emptied of food that actual incorporation of food into the tissues takes place. I must impress on my readers it is only that which is incorporated, and not what is eaten, which nourishes us.

"This plan of two meals a day would alone be the means of renovating in the case of many diseases. I see men and women constantly whom I know will, sooner or later, have a fit of apoplexy, simply because their blood vessels are over-charged, or have become degenerate through overfeeding. There are thousands of deaths annually due to this cause, and most of such are preventable."

A NOTED SCIENTIST

It is eighty years since the British Association first met. One of its avowed objects was the "removal of any disadvantages of a public kind which impede the progress of Science." Science is able now to return the compliment. At last the voice of Science, in the person of Sir William Ramsay, the President, has a practical message that will bring the country to a knowledge of the limitation of its national resources, and of the nature of national economy. Sir William Ramsay is a Scot. He was born at Glasgow on the second of October, 1852. Like so many other famous Scots, he passed through the Edinburgh Academy and the University. That was in the days when German learning dazzled thinking Britain; so Tubingen marked his next step. In 1874 he became Tutorial Assistant of Chemistry at Glasgow University, and at the age of twenty-eight obtained his first Professorship at University College, Bristol, a "chair" which he held for seven years, at the end of which time he became Principal of the College. So far as the general public is concerned the two outstanding features of Sir William's life are his knighthood, which was conferred in 1902, and his research into the properties of radium. His paper on argon, written in conjunction with Lord Rayleigh, leads us into the purely scientific domain, wherein the properties of helium, radium and the products of pitchblende are as yet sealed questions to the layman. Scientific research has reached a point at which the discovery of new practical qualities in minerals and new arrangements of heat or force-producing matter may at any time be made. To Sir William Ramsay in Britain and to Madame Curie in France the man of to-day is looking for developments.

Cheap Aerophones

Anyone will be able to buy a complete outfit for aerophoning for $100 in a little while. Sir Wm. Bull, the chairman of the Grindell-Matthews Wireless Telephone Syndicate, told an interviewer that this would probably be the price of the two necessary small boxes, and it is expected that before long the aerophone will be in everyday use. "One of the largest firms of financiers in England," said Sir William, "have taken a great interest in the invention. They allowed us to use their strong-room for experiments. The room is built of chilled steel, and is air-tight, so that our operator could only remain in it for 10 minutes. In that time he got connected with another operator on the roof of the building. Experiments have also been successfully carried out and I, myself, have in the early stages of the invention spoken 'through' the walls of a suite of rooms." The two boxes which complete the outfit are about nine cubic inches each, and are made of mahogany.

Ocean Liners Days Late.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—Of the five liners on the way to Montreal, one is as much as five days over due, but all are reported in the gulf, except the Pomeranian, which is two days late in reaching the gulf. No anxiety is felt however, as it is usual at this time of the year.

The vessels behind hand are: Corinthian three days late; Manchester Importer, three days; Cassandra, two days; Pomeranian, not reported; Montreal, five days late.

Cholera In Italy.

Chiasso, Switzerland, Nov. 15.—The report of the Italian Government shows that there were 153 cases of cholera and 81 deaths in Italy from Oct. 29 to Nov. 11 inclusive. The towns of Naples, Genoa, and Rome were immune. The Province of Naples reported one case and the Province of Genoa two cases and one death. There were three cases but no deaths in the town of Palermo and one case in the province.

LAKEFIELD LOSES AN OLD RESIDENT

The Late Mrs. Rolleston Passes to Her Reward

There passed away on Sunday, Nov. 12th, at Lakefield, in the person of Mrs Rolleston, one of perhaps the oldest residents in this district.

Sailing from Ireland in the summer of 1822 as an infant of ten months, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reid, Mrs. Rolleston has spent the greater portion of her life in the County of Peterborough and perhaps half her life in the village of Lakefield.

Of her contemporaries only one or two survive and she is the last of a large family of brothers and sisters who have all predeceased her by some years.

Married at the age of 33 to the late Matthew Rolleston, Esq., of London, Eng., her early married life was spent not more than a mile from the house where she peacefully passed away at Lakefield.

The late Robert Reid, Mrs. Rolleston's father, was a man of stirring qualities, broad minded, high principled and deeply religious, his far seeing eye foretold, even in those early days some of the mighty changes that have taken place since in the country of his adoption. He held various positions of trust under the government of that day and was keenly interested in the settlement of the country and in the assistance of the early settlers.

Mrs Rolleston's devotion to her father's memory was very beautiful and from her many descriptions he must have been one of that type of the straight-forward Christian gentlemen who bore such a large part in the early building of this country.

To all who knew and loved her there most particularly stood out her wonderful self-sacrificing devotion to those she loved and it seems almost as if her whole active life was given up to those who had her affection.

Eighty-nine years ago she came first to the shore of Little Lake as an infant in arms after what was then the arduous journey from Cobourg.

On Tuesday, the 14th, her earthly remains were brought to Little Lake cemetery to their last long resting place. Meanwhile she herself has gone to join those loved ones she has lived long enough to see slip one by one away.

Requiescat in peace for great is her reward.

DEATH OF OLD OTONABEE RESIDENT

Special Correspondence

Lang, Oct. 29.—It is with deep regret we have to record the death of Mr S. Fife, aged 78 years, which sad event took place on Sunday morning, Oct 29th. Deceased was sick for a short time, and afterwards passed away very happy. Deceased was born in Otonabee and lived there all his life until a few years ago, when he gave up farming and lived at Lang, until his death. He was married when quite young to Miss Christina Kidd, of Warsaw, who survives him. He was always willing to assist his neighbors and friends will be greatly missed in this community. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, three sons and six daughters. The family, all living in different parts of Ontario, are as follows: Mr. David Fife, of Otonabee; Mr. Edwin Fife, who resides on the homestead; Mr. Law Fife, of Norwood, being his youngest child; Mrs. David Nelson, of Keene; Mrs. Wm. Dinsdale, of Peterborough; Mrs. Wellington Fife, of Otonabee; Mrs. John Humphries, of Winnipeg; Mrs. Walter Garnett, of Otonabee; Mrs. Wm. Fife, of Bleasard's Station.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Tuesday afternoon, from his residence at Lang and proceeded to the Methodist church. The Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Keene, conducted the funeral service. The pall-bearers were his two sons, Mr. Edwin Fife, of Otonabee, and Mr. Law Fife, of Norwood; his two sons-in-law, Mr. Wm. Dinsdale, of Peterborough; Mr. Walter Garnett, of Otonabee; his brother-in-law, Mr. John Kidd, of Warsaw, and Mr. Henry Fife, of Norwood.

The remains were buried in the Fife cemetery, Otonabee.

MARRIED MEN'S CLUB MEETING

Live Program In Which the Wife is Discussed

Special Correspondence.

Indian River, Nov. 16.—The Married Men's Club on Tuesday night last met at "The Elms," the home of its president, "Mail and Empire" Kidd, to discuss matters relating to home life. In opening the meeting he spoke of the happiness of married life as compared to bachelorhood, saying he could speak from experience. The first topic for discussion was "How to have your wife get meals on time." "Big G." Whibbs thought gentle persuasion (muscular) was the best. "Drover" Devlin said he found the best results by giving her her own way, remarking that the more one tried to force a pig the more contrary it got and while he did not wish to make a comparison yet the reasoning applied. "Elevator" Hall thought the easiest way the best, take the meals when they were ready and say nothing. "Assessor" Borland said it was a good plan to sit down at the table whether the meal was ready or not and if it was not, look cross but say nothing. "Globe" Patterson also thought it as much the man's fault as the woman's; he was often late and wife often had to let a good meal get cold before the good man appeared. He believed promptness on the husbands part one of the best ways. "Deacon" Evans thought it a good plan to give some praise when meals were on time; tell her what a fine house-keeper she is and how good to have meals promptly, that she was not like other women who often kept husbands waiting. It was unanimously agreed that it was disastrous to say anything in the way of censure as all had found out to their cost. The topic for the next meeting is, "What Should be the limit of a wife's hat bill for one year."

The president in closing thanked those who had taken part in the discussion so freely and said that he hoped all would come prepared to discuss the next topic as it was a most important one for while the hats were getting big, the bills were getting still bigger each year.

PRESENTATION BY DOURO PEOPLE

To Mr. and Mrs. Sarginson—To Live in City

Prior to their removal to Peterboro to take up residence, a number of the intimate and warm friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sarginson, Concession 8, Douro, sprang a totally unexpected but delightful surprise on them at their home, on Monday evening by presenting the couple with a handsome set of silver spoons, and a gentleman's companion set. The gifts were accompanied by the following complimentary address.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Sarginson—It is with feelings of sincere regret that we have come to say good-bye to you as neighbors. We have always found you generous, kind and honorable, and in memory of the many happy hours we have spent in your society, we would ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of the high esteem and love with which we have learned to regard you.

Your removal from our midst will be keenly felt, but our loss will be a gain to others. We all join in heartily wishing you health and prosperity wherever your lot may be cast, and may happiness and God's blessing continue to attend you.

The address was read by Mrs. Beavis, one of the intimate friends of the family, while Mrs. Bradfield presented the gifts.

The remainder of the evening was most pleasantly beguiled with music and refreshments.

Although deeply affected by the evidences of their neighbors' affection, Mr. and Mrs. Sarginson both appropriately replied, embodying in their remarks their warm feelings of thankfulness, and regretting that it was necessary for them to remove from their midst.

Mr. and Mrs Sarginson have lived in the vicinity for several years and were very popular and highly thought of by all the neighbors.

Q. Why do children squint?

A. By squinting or frowning the muscle in the eye is relieved of strain, this is nature's way. Study glasses relieve this strain, and thus prevent squint.

Q. Why do children have eye headaches?

JUDGE WINCHESTER RESERVES JUDGMENT IN THE BANK CASES

Charges Against J. R. Stratton and J. J. Warren Heard in County Court—W. R. Travers Exonerates Them on the Conspiracy Implication—Says They Were Not in It.

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—Judge Winchester this morning reserved judgment on the conspiracy charges against J. R. Stratton and J. J. Warren in the Farmers' Bank affair.

Toronto, Nov 7.—At the afternoon session of the hearing of the conspiracy charges against J R. Stratton and J J. Warren, in the Farmers Bank case, a number of witnesses were called yesterday, the principal one being W. R. Travers, formerly general manager of the defunct bank. He was examined at length by Mr. Du Vernet, for the Crown, and by Mr. Watson and Mr. Rowell, acting respectively for Messrs. Stratton and Warren.

Travers told his oft-repeated story of the time, and the circumstances connected with his first appearance in the Farmers Bank circle. He said that the men who had organized the bank, had approached him and asked him to assist them in the promotion of the institution. There had been a sufficient number of subscribers to stock, but there was not enough money for the required deposit with the government. There had been $150,000 paid in, there was a promise of $20,000, and he then set out to secure the other $80,000. Two banks and a large brokerage office were approached, but he could not arrive at terms with them, and he went to the Trusts and Guarantee Co.

He had a number of interviews with Mr. Warren, and only on one occasion did he see Mr. Stratton. This time it was only for a minute, and Mr. Stratton said that the manager of the company, Mr. Warren, had the handling of the whole thing. He and Mr. Warren came to an agreement by which Travers was to get $80,000, as a loan, giving as security $105,000 worth of different farmers' notes, paying a bonus of $1,000 and ten per cent interest. Travers said that he had made the loan for thirty days as he thought he would be able to pay it back, when the money, less the five always retained by the Finance Department, was returned by the government. The other loan of $20,000, which he made was because of a broken promise from another party, and for this loan he gave the same kind of security. This made $100,000 in all.

HAD FULL AUTHORITY.

Travers said that he had full authority from the provisional board of directors to make the loans and endorse the notes given by subscribers. Before he approached Mr. Warren, he had received advice from his counsel as to the legality of a company accepting as security for a loan, the kind of notes he gave Mr. Warren. He then thought he was acting absolutely legally.

In his examination Travers was asked about the way the certificate was obtained. He admitted irregularities and deceit on his part, but emphatically stated that neither Mr. Stratton nor Mr. Warren, had as far as he was concerned, any idea that there was any wrong going on. He said that there were names on the subscription list which should not have been there, when it was sent to the government, but stated that none of the officials of the Trusts and Guarantee Co knew anything about it. Mr. Watson finally asked the witness of he could see any reason why either Mr. Stratton or Mr. Warren should be charged with conspiracy with him in obtaining the Farmers Bank certificate, and the witness again stated that they had nothing to do with it.

CHINESE REBELS ARE READY FOR BIG DECISIVE BATTLE

Revolutionaries are Mobilizing in Chin Kiang in Large Numbers—Yuan Shi Kai Selects Cabinet.

Nanking, Nov. 17.—Throughout the day Gen. Cheng, commander of the Imperialists, was preparing to receive the reformers' army, which he confidently asserts will meet its Waterloo before Nanking. Imperialist troops moved out of the city and were distributed to strategic points to check the advance of the revolutionaries from Chin Kiang. The defences at Pukow are formidable.

Gen. Chang sent 35 mountain guns and 2,000 men across the river and a large body moved down the main road in the direction of Chin Kiang.

Rebels Are Mobilizing.

Chin Kiang, Nov. 17.—Revolutionaries continue to come into the city in thousands. The scene is marvelous in its confusion. The troops are disorganized, but not disorderly. The forward movement of the revolutionaries has not yet begun, but large numbers have been taken aboard the gunboats and transports, which are proceeding up the river in the direction of Nanking. It is presumed that a flank movement is planned to hold Gen. Chang's troops in Nanking or to cut them off if an attempt is made to advance.

There are some evidences of discontent among the reformers, but the pervading spirit seems to be "do or die." A big battle is not expected to take place for several days, but there may be some preliminary engagements.

A Hybrid Cabinet.

Pekin, Nov. 17.—Premier Yuan Shi Kai's new Cabinet was named in an Imperial edict yesterday, but it is questionable whether it will stand. One of the members expressed amazement at his appointment. It is believed that few of the new Ministers have been consulted, and it is expected that a number of them will decline to serve.

The Cabinet comprises curious appointments. Liang Chi Chiao, appointed vice-president of the board of justice, is the great Chinese reformer who was exiled by the late Empress Dowager at Yuan Shi Kai's suggestion. Chiang Kiang, appointed resident of the board of agriculture and commerce, is a member of the new Government of Kiang Su. He signed with Wu Ting Fang, the demand for the throne's abdication, which the reformers sought to have delivered to the Prince Regent through the American legation. The organization of the Cabinet, as it now stands, was evidently an attempt to include in its personnel representatives of all parties.

To the Poor Railroad.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 17.—Government regulation of railroads as practiced in the United States, was characterized as bureaucratic control, impossible of continuance and Government ownership of American railways was declared to be incompatible with the existence of a free democratic Government, in an address made yesterday before the Detroit Board of Commerce by Joseph Ramsey, jr., president of the Ann Arbor Railway, and former president and general manager of the Wabash.

Mr. Ramsay paid a glaring tribute to the late E. H. Harriman. "How long," he asked, "would it have taken the progressive paresis-conservation of natural resources and restraint of prosperity party to build and develop the Union Pacific Railroad?"

HANGED ON FEBRUARY 22

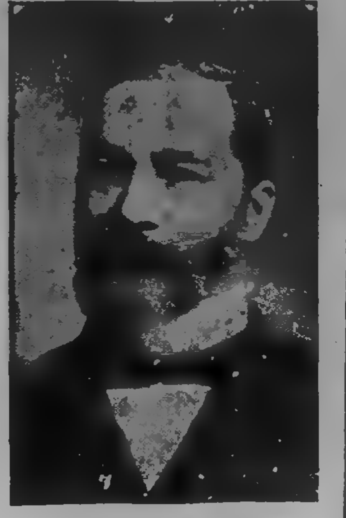
Sentence Passed on Jessamine This Morning

Special To The Review

Toronto, Nov. 17—Joseph Jessamine who murdered James Lougheed, was this morning sentenced to be hanged on February 22. When asked if he had anything to say, he started incoherent babbling, and then straightened up and assumed quite a swagger. Edward Wilkie will be sentenced on Monday.

Will Force Public Operation.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—In a remarkable address, that has caused a profound impression among railroad men, Martin A. Knapp, presiding judge of the U. S. Court of Commerce, told a large audience in the Houston Club of the University of Pennsylvania that a crisis is coming which will test the policy of the Government's rate regulation system, and that if it fails, Government ownership will be the only alternative. This crisis will come within a generation, he said. He asserted also that there must be a general wage increase for all railroad men and for other workers, that the present system of railroad competition is ill-advised and that the railroads should be permitted to make uniformly profitable rates and destroy competition.



JUDGE WINCHESTER.

GRIRO A FREE MAN TO-DAY

Warning for Toronto Man Accused of Murder

Toronto, Nov. 17.- When the jury in the case of Frank Griro, charged with the murder of Frank Tarro, brought in a verdict of not guilty, approval of their action was visible in the faces of most of those present. Many of his compatriots have been in constant attendance at the trial, and after leaving the court room, Griro was surrounded by a number of friends who congratulated him.

Justice Riddle, in discharging the prisoner, said:

"The jury have found you 'not guilty' and I do not quarrel with their verdict. If they believed your story they could have come to no other conclusion.

"There is one thing I want to say to you, however. If you intend to remain a citizen of Canada, you must learn not to carry dangerous weapons. That practice has caused more fatalities among your countrymen than any other thing.

"I charge you, if ever again anyone demands money from you by threats you should go direct to the police. If your life is in real danger they will not give your name away—they are not so foolish. Tell all your people this also.

"There are only two people who know whether your story is true or not—yourself and that God to whom you must some day give an account.

"Go now, and behave yourself in future like a good Canadian."

BONAR LAW IS ON THE FORUM

Talks About the Canadian Elections

Result Gives New Life to Imperial Matters

London, Nov. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Bonar Law appeared for the first time as leader of the Opposition last night, when he addressed a tremendous audience in Leeds' Coliseum. After an expression of his views on the question of home rule, disestablishment, and reform, he made the following references to Canada and the recent election:

"That election is, as Mr. Balfour truly said, not only the most remarkable event of the year in the political history of the British Empire, but it may turn out, as I believe it will turn out, to be a landmark in the history of the world. If we are to understand the full significance of those elections, let us consider, not what the Radical speakers and the Radical press now say, but what they said when they thought the result would be different.

"We were told that the treaty marked a great step towards free trade. If that were true, then the rejection of the treaty was not a step but a leap backward from what they call free trade. We were told the treaty was a deathblow to the cause of preference. If that were true, then the rejection of that treaty gives new life to the cause—the controlling cause of these.

"The elections were that Canadians believed, and I agree that Taft was right when he said that it was a case of now or never, that their decision then would settle finally whether Canada was to continue as an autonomous nation becoming more closely united to the Empire or whether she should gradually come under the influence of a great friendly nation lying to the south.

"It is now claimed that the election has no bearing on the cause of preference. A more ignorant or more impudent claim was never made for many years. At every Imperial Conference the Prime Ministers of every self-governing colony have urged upon us a policy of reciprocal preference in trade as in everything else of each party of the Empire, treating every other part on better terms than those which were given to the rest of the world. The Canadian elections are simply an emphatic reminder that this is still the aim of our self-governing dominions."

Berlin, Nov. 17.—Sharp earthshocks occurred last night at Munich, Strassburg, Mayence, Frankfort and Stuttgart. The shocks were felt quite severely at Stuttgart and Frankfort. The disturbance took place about half-past ten o'clock, and at Frankfort, where several houses were badly shaken, half-clad people rushed into the streets. Big cracks appeared in the walls of several buildings. At Stuttgart household furniture was overturned and pictures fell from the walls.

Early in September last a prolonged earthshock occurred at Suttgart and two lighter shocks at Aix-la-Chapelle and Eschweiler, but no damage of any consequence was done.

POWER CONFERENCE TO-DAY AT OTTAWA; EXPOSE OF LIBERALS

Hon. Adam Beck Taking a Hand in the Trent System Game—Relief in Sight From Old Liberal Plan of Handing Everything to Private Corporations.

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, 3 p.m.—The deputation was introduced by Mr. Burnham. Mayor Morrow stated that Peterborough wanted the hydro-electric to give it its own power. Hon. Adam Beck and George Lynch Staunton, K.C., asked Hon. Mr. Cochrane to give Peterborough dams 4 and 8. After a heated argument, the matter ended, and a very satisfactory decision, giving Peterborough power through the hydro-electric is assured.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Hon. Adam Beck's presence in Ottawa to-day has revealed a situation that is not to the credit of the Liberal party, whose leader is now campaigning Ontario for the cause of the people. When in power at Ottawa Ontario Liberals in the federal government so tied the water powers of the Trent Valley Canal system to corporate interests that Sir James Whitney and his Power minister were all but completely prevented from giving the towns of Central Ontario cheap power. Under the regime of Hon. G. P. Graham one water power after another on the Trent Valley Canal system passed to the electric merger now doing business as the Electric company, limited. Its head offices are in Toronto, and Cecil B. Smith, former chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric commission, is credited with being "the brains" of the concern.

With the advent of the Borden government Sir James Whitney and Hon. Adam Beck see some relief from the situation. Hon. Mr. Beck on behalf of the Hydro-Electric commission and a deputation representing the municipal councils of Peterborough and Lakefield waited upon Hon. Frank Cochrane, the new minister of railways and canals, to-day to secure the right to develop and transmit power from dam No. 4, on the canal, above Peterborough, and also to have the rights of the commission to set forth as to the transmission of power from dam No. 5, where the Otonabee Power Company have a development plant. R. R. Hall, of Peterborough, is the head of this concern. So far, Peterborough has been unable to secure any relief from the big power companies which are in control of the situation and which secure their supply from a source beyond the reach of the provincial government, since the source is a canal, and therefore under federal jurisdiction.

Peterborough has had too high-priced a supply of power for some time and has been unable to secure more from the company or a satisfactory promise of more. The present supply is transmitted five miles to the city and the company claims that water power which it has is developed to capacity. This water power and the one at dam No. 4, above it, are capable of generating 4,000 horse-power and Peterborough and Lakefield are anxious to have No. 4 developed on behalf of the public. Under Hon. G. P. Graham, no relief could be secured, and the Hydro-Electric commission were powerless to aid the municipalities as these water powers were under federal and, at that time, antagonistic control.

The conference had the effect of clearing up the entire situation and put an end to the Graham policy of pre-empting from the public the Trent Valley water powers to obstruct the cheap power scheme of the Whitney government. There are some water powers in the Trenton district not yet allotted which the Hydro-Electric commission desire to secure, and there are other water powers that have been allotted to the Cecil B. Smith organizations that have not been developed. It is just possible that Hon. Frank Cochrane will cancel these leases. It has transpired that many of these agreements were made after the defeat of the Laurier government on September 21st.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY DEALS WITH BI-LINGUAL SCHOOLS

Premier Handles the School Question Without Gloves—Reviews the Work of the Government.

Hagersville, Nov. 17.—"Is a man who is like wax or putty a suitable man to lead a party which hopes to be entrusted with the government of this province?"

In this terse way Sir James Whitney, at a monster meeting in the rink here last night put the question, contrasting the side-stepping attitude of N. W. Rowell, the Liberal leader, on important political issues, with that of the Government which had tackled so many problems of import to the people of Ontario, and actually completed a great many of them.

Headed by the Caledonia Band and a torch light procession, Sir James Whitney was driven in a motor car from the station to the rink. The crowds that clamored inside to see and hear the Premier, taxed the capacity of the structure.

Sir James Whitney, after expressing appreciation of the warmth of his greeting by the people of Haldimand, and the townspeople of Hagersville, complimented the people of this section of the province in having such worthy candidates in the field for the Legislature.

The reason the people of Ontario elected 86 out of 106 candidates in the last election, said Sir James, was because the Government had been doing things.

"When the present Government came into power, none of us had any experience as Cabinet Ministers, although I had twice been offered a Cabinet position by my opponents."

The manner in which the liquor license was enforced by the old Government was a burning shame, he said, and a disgrace. It was never enforced until the present Government came into power. If we have never done anything else in the world, we deserve a renewal of your confidence, he said.

"It's a pretty good record we have had. Any one of the recent progressive policies that the present Government has brought into force is worth the entire manifesto of the gentleman who made his debut as Liberal leader a few days ago."

"There is no such thing as bilingual schools in the Province of Ontario," declared Sir James. "The English language must be the language of instruction.

"The only instance where a deviation of this occurred is in some of the country schools north of Sudbury, when the little French-Canadian children don't understand English. For a few months the teachers are allowed to convey the teaching in the French language until the children are old enough to understand English. That's all there is to it, and it's all there will be to it."

"There is no doubt whatever of the propriety of creating a new department in the Government, in charge of the Hydro-electric system, with a Cabinet Minister at its head. However, we are submitting this question to the people just to see what opinion the people have of it.

"Mr. Rowell deals with New Ontario just as if it was a 'terra incognita,' and totally regardless of the fact that the Government has been spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on colonization roads."

Controversy Over Bryce.

London, Nov. 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Correspondence is appearing in The Times between Prof. Dicey and F. E. Smith, the former rebuking the latter for what is described as a personal attack on Ambassador Bryce. Smith yesterday reiterated that Mr. Bryce is wholly unsuited, owing to his economic prejudices, to represent Britain in the fiscal negotiations. It is evident, he says, that Mr. Bryce, as a free trade welcomed reciprocity as the gentle rain from heaven.

WHITE ON TRIAL IN NIOBE AFFAIR

Court Martial at Halifax Is Proceeding

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 17.—Evidence in the trial by court-martial of Lieut. Charles White, navigating officer on H.M.C.S. Niobe, charged with negligently or by default stranding, or suffering to be stranded, the Niobe on the ledges off Cape Sable on July 30 last, was much the same as that given on Wednesday at the trial of Lord Alliston Graham.

About a dozen witnesses in all were examined, but little that was new was elicited. The entire day was taken up by the prosecution, but at the opening this morning the case for the defence will be presented and immediately afterwards judgment will be rendered.

Lieut. Lord Alliston Graham, with sword dangling at his side, it having been restored to him yesterday, took the witness stand at the afternoon session, and stated that the ship was steady on her course when he left the bridge. Asked if he inferred from the fact that the Cape Sable light had not been seen by 11.30 that the ship was out of her course or that fog intervened, witness replied that he inferred nothing.

He considered that the officer on watch was responsible for the navigation of the ship when the navigating officer was not on the bridge. It developed in the course of cross-examination of Lord Graham that he had gone only once to the accused and that was when the captain sent him about three minutes after twelve.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

Hudson Bay Railway Construction to be Handled

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—With all the eclat and distinction which the presence o royalty and the inauguration of a ne Government, enhanced by the brilliant sunshine of a clear winter's da could lend to the occasion, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught yesterday afternoon met the assembled Senators and members of the Hou of Commons and opened his firs Canadian Parliament. In the opinio of all who witnessed it, it was th most brilliant function of the kin that has ever graced the halls of th grey gothic pile on Parliament Hill.

As the carriages of the royal party drew up under the great archway, th guard of honor, consisting of 38 me of the Governor-General's Foo Guards, under command of Major G. T. B. Gilmore, came smartly to th salute, and, as the band struck u the National Anthem, every head i the great crowd was reverently bared At the same time was heard the booming of the royal salute of 21 gun from Nepean Point, for the first tim replacing the accustomed vice-rega salute of 19 guns. The 23rd Field Battery furnished the firing party.

Meanwhile the Commons had me in their own chamber and awaited th summons to proceed to the Senate which soon came, with the three tap on the door by the Gentleman Ushe of the Black Rod. Headed by th Speaker and preceded by the mace they trooped across to the Bar of th Upper House.

His Royal Highness wore the uniform of a field marshal, and besid him on the dias sat the duchess, attired in an exquisite gown of gold ti sue, with a long court train of gol and white brocade, which was borne by two little pages in costumes o white cloth breeches and red sati coats.

The duke read the speech from th throne in a strong, clear voice, easil heard in any part of the chamber first in English, then in French, an it should be noted that he spoke th language of Gaul with all the fluenc and purity of accent of the born Parisian. The speech follows:

"Honorable gentlemen of the Sena gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"It is with much satisfaction that meet for the first time the Parliamen of Canada, and avail myself of you advice and assistance in the fulfilmen of the important charge which ha been entrusted to me by His Majest the King. I can assure you that I teem it a privilege to be called u to administer the affairs of this pr perous and growing Dominion, an to associate myself with you in the i portant duties which you are abo to approach.

"It affords me great pleasure to congratulate you upon the continued an increasing prosperity of the country Our trade, both with British and wit foreign countries, is rapidly expanding, and there is every prospect tha its volume in the present year will b largely in excess of that attained a any time in the past.

"Although there has been some damage to the crops in certain district the harvest has, on the whole, bee abundant, and it is believed that th returns to the husbandmen, will exceed those secured to any previou year.

"The results of the census take during the present year will be lai before you, so far as they have bee tabulated. While the increase in population has not fulfilled all the sanguine expectations that had been formed, yet it has been substantial an encouraging.

"You will be pleased to learn tha the revenues for the current fiscal yea have, up to the present, largely exceeded those during any similar pe iod in the past, with every prospec that this increase will be maintaine

"The advantages that would resu from a wider exchange of product between the various countries of th Empire are undoubted, in view of th wonderful variety and extent of tho productions, and negotiations hav been opened for improved trade a rangement with the British We Indies and British Guiana, whic should prove advantageous to the colonies as well as to this Dominio

"The importance of providing ou country with better highways i manifest. A bill will be introduce for the purpose of enabling the Dom inion to co-operate with the province in the accomplishment of this desi able object.

"It is essential to recognise that, i a country possessing so great an are of fertile land as that with whic this Dominion is happily endowed, th great basic industry is agricultur My advisers are convinced that th time has come when greater aid an encouragement should be given t those who are engaged in the cult vation of the land. To this end measure will be introduced unde which it is hoped that there may b co-operation between this Dominio and the various provinces, for th purpose of assisting and encouragin our farmers to secure the best re sults in production, and at the sam time preserve the fertility of the soi

"A measure will be introduced re vising and consolidating the acts re lating to the inspection of grain, an providing the means by which th Government can secure, through commission, the control and operatio of the terminal elevators upon th great lakes.

"A bill will be introduced to estab lish a permanent tariff commissio whose duties it shall be to ascertai by investigation and enquiry, suc information as will furnish a mor stable and satisfactory basis for tari legislation than has hitherto bee available.

MR. HALL AND POWER

Mr. Hall has adopted a new tack on [illegible] power question. He started out ith the idea of defending the power rporations which have this district its grip, but finding that position itenable, and very unpopular, he has eidec that it is a better game to at- ck the Whitney Government for not restalling the big power corporations the Trent district. He has hunted t a report made by Cecil B. Smith, e chief engineer for the hydro-elec- power commission in Ontario, in , the year after the Whitney gov- nment came into power. Mr. Hall nts to know why action in the mat- r was not taken immediately. One ason might be cited, and that is the hitney government was so busy try- to clean up the mess left by the government, after its thirty-three rs' lease of power, that it had not d time to develop a scheme of such nitude in such a short time.

he proposition that the Whitney ernment must be attacked for not mediately seizing all the water- wers in this district before it had an opportunity to formulate a eral power scheme, or to even get ough the Niagara Power deal, is que. Nobody but Mr. Hall would e conceived the idea—it is really a ppy inspiration. And Mr. Hall n't mention that the obstacles put the way of the hydro-electric eme in Western Ontario by the pri- corporations with which Mr. Hall affiliated, were sufficient to the Whitney government to con- trate all its attention on the suc- of the one scheme.

uckily for the people of Ontario it a triumph for Adam Beck. Having this system on a sound footing Government has a chance to turn Eastern Ontario, and this district. w the Whitney Government proposes do for Eastern Ontario what it did western—and shall the people of tern Ontario say nay?

hould the people of Eastern Ontario so small, so narrow and jealous that y would rather see Western Ontario the grip of private power corpora- ns, rather than forge ahead? We n't believe it of the people of Peter- rough. We have the chance to get a dro-electric system here. The Whit- y government will expropriate en- gy or sites under its constitutional wers, and though the private cor- rations have got strongly rooted in district, hope is by no means gone. propriation of one of the water- wers near Peterborough, with the istance of the Dominion government, should do much to remedy the situation in enabling the city to keep a check on the power interests.

Perhaps some people around Peterborough will recollect that only a short time ago Hon. Geo. P. Graham threatened to fight the Whitney government over a power site, claimed by the latter in this district. The policy of the Dominion government in controlling the Trent Canal, was to give the sites to private corporations—friends, of course—under the pretence that the power rates were under the control of the Dominion railway commission. As a matter of fact, Mr. Hall and his friends had every opportunity to get control of the power sites around Peterborough, by working the Laurier mal-administrators.

It is a Gilbertian joke of the first order that R. R. Hall should come out to loudly complain that the Whitney government had not lambasted him in a tender spot with the power stick five years ago. This is merely one of Mr. Hall's jokes on the public. Knowing his power affiliations—the fact that the Seymour company is supposed to control the Otonabee Power company now, is evidence—it is a funny attitude.

• • •

Does Mr. Hall want the Whitney government to step into this district, with a cheap power proposal? Not much! That would hurt his pocket. Would he not block to the best of his ability the extension of the hydro-electric scheme to Peterborough? His pocket must answer. Would he be a good representative for Peterborough to have, with the Whitney government in power, and in view of the probable important developments in this district in the next two or three years? What does your pocket say?

LAURIER'S OUTBREAK

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's outbreak in the House of Commons on the opening day, when he refused to second the motion for the appointment of Dr. Sproule as speaker, in accordance with the custom of the leader of the opposition joining the premier in doing that act, was most unusual. Sir Wilfrid's retirement to his well-earned rest has not helped his temper and he showed distinct loss of dignity on this occasion.

Dr. Sproule has been a grand master of the Orange body, it is true. The deputy speaker, P.E. Blondin, is a Nationalist. The two sections of racial and religious thought are thus represented and under Mr. Borden are able to unite and present a strong front. Yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the man whom the Liberal applauders throughout the country, hailed as the healer of all racial and religious differences, the very first man to make an effort to break the entente cordiale between the two diverse sections of the community. His refusal to follow precedent and custom was aggravated by an unseemly exhibition of temper, and Premier Borden's retort that it must have arisen from spleen at the Conservative party presenting a solid and happy front, was certainly most justified.

It is evident that the ravings of the Globe and other "Liberal" newspapers about the union under the Conservative banner, has given the Laurier minority in the Commons the keynote. The Liberals intend to take their chief attack a racial and creedal one. Instead of the Nationalists being the stirrers up of racial and creedal strife in Canada, the Liberals are to assume the new cloak. May it fit them well.

The strength of Premier Borden's position with reference to the combination under his leadership of the two elements, British and French, has already been demonstrated. Let us hope it increases, under his wise and just handling of a most difficult situation.

PROVINCIAL PROHIBITION

Rev. Ben H. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, is much disappointed at the stand taken by Leader Rowell on the temperance question. Mr. Spence says that Mr. Rowell's attitude was cowardice masquerading under the name of caution. He says:

> "Disappointment and regret are the feelings of the temperance people of this Province at the Province at the failure of the new leader of the Liberty party either in his published platform or his expression at Massey Hall to deal strongly and effectively with the temperance question.
> "There was a right thing to do. He has not done it. Some men will call the inaction or non-action of the party at this juncture political caution, more will appraise it as political timidity, for there is a whole lot of cowardice masquerading under the name of caution.
> "The Liberal party would seem to be guided by the same sinister counsels which have brought it to defeat and disgrace in the past rather than by the well-known personal inclinations of the new leader."

Mr. Spence is in many ways right. But while the Conservatives have honestly and straight-forwardly attempted to meet the situation, by providing for local option, and the expressed will of the people, the Rowell platform promises nothing more. It is a continuation of the Ross game. The wiping out of the liquor business would be a good thing, but it is being as rapidly accomplished now as public sentiment will permit. What the people at large want they will have; and if there is to be prohibition, there must be a general demand for it. And that the Dominion Alliance will probably find its easiest and most effective course in suppressing this great evil is to continue the fight, as it has been carried on so successfully of late years, until the time comes when a strong majority of the people generally will back up a government in a provincial prohibition policy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The electors of this riding cannot measure their Peck in Mr. Hall's half bushel.

The more one hears of the doings of the late and unlamented administration in helping its friends to fat things, the more one is convinced that Laurier was finishing his work with some speed.

On the front page of the Review today is an expose of the way the power business was worked during the Graham control of matters by the Liberal politicians of Peterborough. In view of this fact, what do the people of Peterborough think about Mr. Halls' complaint that the Whitney government did not step into the breach here five years ago, and take what the Dominion government would not let it have?

The Liberal candidate does not attempt to criticise the Whitney record. In that he is wise. He bases his plan for working the voters of the riding on suggesting new ideas. Whether they will ever be seriously considered or not is a trifle inconsequential providing they do the necessary work in the meantime. As an ex-member of parliament it is only to be expected that Mr. Hall will show some fertility, and he does no injustice to his reputation of being able to "slip 'em over."

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

— BY —

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

Again there would be a pause, followed by a long wailing cry, and the grinding and shrieking of the thousand branches of the pines around the house, while again would come that wrenching and straining at the casements.

"It's going to be an early winter," said Jim. "I guess that's why all the cattle are coming in."

No one heard her say anything, but Kitty's mutinous little face could speak without words.

"Let us have some music," said Rolt, rising and opening the door for the ladies. "It is stormy outside, and I fancy you ladies want your nerves soothing after that hard ride."

The two went out, and when they had gone the Boss stood pulling his long moustache in a way he had when he was annoyed. Then he went over to Jim and laid his hand kindly on his shoulder.

"Do you really think that we ought to go out?"

"I do, sure."

"And you think that it is safe to leave Anstruther only with the women." He spoke in a low tone, and he seemed to be asking more than his words implied.

"That's his place, sir."

"I don't know so much about that. Anstruther is very much of a man if he does carry a high polish. But do you wish it to be so?"

Jim looked squarely in the face and understood him.

"Yes, Boss, I think so."

The Boss threw his cigarette into the fire-place. He, too, had his dreams, and understood.

"All right, then, have it your own way. Tell the men quietly what you mean to do. You can trust them all, I suppose."

"Every last mother's son of them."

"All right, then. Of course I shall come with you."

Jim opened his mouth to protest.

"My cattle, Jim," was all that was needed to stop him. "When you have told them, come into the drawing-room; the wife wants you."

It was a "one man's show," to Jim's mind, when he did enter that dainty room in which Mrs. Rolt had gathered round her all her treasures, a room almost startlingly in contrast to the rest of the house, and its surroundings; one of those rooms which speak so plainly of that past which many up-country people have left behind them.

It was not only the photographs, framed and otherwise, with which the room was littered, which called to you, nor the two or three exquisite landscapes of Old Country scenery; not even the little cabinet with its collection of miniatures, Rolts and Vernons, bewigged and uniformed, or patched and powdered, after the various fashions of their sex and of the days in which they had lived; not these, nor even the great bowls of flowers which it was Mary Rolt's labor of love to raise with infinite trouble in her greenhouse in spite of the elements: rather was it the pervading atmosphere of the room, the visible expression of a loyal loving heart which, whilst it would tolerate no word against the new house, sweetened all things with its memories of the old.

It has been the work of such women as Mrs. Rolt to keep alive the spirit of England on the wildest and most ragged edges of the earth, and it may even be that for those who love the England of their childhood, they would find more of it in such distant colonial homes than they would to-day within the sound of Bow Bells.

Conditions change, but memory is faithful.

When he entered it, that room was almost too full of English memories for poor Jim Combe. The women were tired, and a little rift had appeared within the lute which had temporarily marred the harmony of their friendship, and Anstruther, seeing this, was busy charming them back to their most sweet natural selves.

Unasked and without any preface, he had seated himself down to the piano, and sometimes playing, sometimes singing softly to himself, he led them from gay to grave, from Sullivan to Beethoven, from "Little Yum-Yum" to "Douglas, tender and true," but never once away from that holy of holies, which the English call Home.

And as he played or sang, he talked to his lady, not in the foolish modern phrases, but in the music of the masters, and the words of love's great poets, until Jim, hating him the more, the more he recognized his mastery, felt hope fading very far away.

"What a fool I have been," thought Jim. "I see it all now. Doves do not mate with hawks, and what possible use is my brute strength and woodcraft against this man's magic."

Such skill as Jim had might have made a ranch wife happy, might lighten the labors of a working woman; but the dainty thing upon whom he had set his heart was never meant for the stress of hard living.

The voice of her own world was calling to her, and of course she would go back to it, and he could not blame her; but how he hated the other fellow.

"Thank you, Mr. Anstruther," said Mrs. Rolt, at last, as he paused for a moment. "You have been to use what David was to Saul, I think. But we must not make you do all the work. Won't you give us one song, Jim? Sing "Somebody's a-callin'." Mr. Anstruther has carried us all off to England, I think, and I want somebody to call me home again."

Her hand was lying on the little Japanese table by the side of her chair, and in the firelight the Boss's great fist closed over it.

He appreciated his mate's loyalty to himself and his chosen profession. Before the advent of Mr. Anstruther, Jim had whiled away many a long evening for the ranch folk with his mellow baritone, untrained it is true, but full and sweet as a thrush's voice, so that he could hardly refuse Mrs. Rolt's request.

"The herds are gathered in from plain and hill.
Who's that a-callin'?
The boys are sleeping and the ranch is still.
Who's that a-callin' so sweet?"

he sang, and the old days came back to him. In spite of herself Kitty's face softened, and beneath her closed lids she saw pictures in which the stranger had no part.

"Yes, that is pretty," said Anstruther critically when the song had come to a close, "especially the air and that one verse, but the rest of it is a bit weak, isn't? It seems to me that fellows don't think the words matter nowadays."

"Especially in your favorite comic operas. There is not much poetry about the 'Colonel on his little tin geegee,' or your 'Singularly deep young man,' is there?" asked Mrs. Rolt.

"I did not think that people went to the comic operas for poetry?"

"Those seem to be about the only things they do go to."

"Perhaps, and yet you know we have some songs in the Old Country which hardly need the music to make them beautiful."

"Old songs?"

"Yes, and modern songs, too. Is there no dignity in this?" and rising, he went again to the piano and sang Pollock's noble song, in which a modern has for once caught the chivalrous spirit of the past.

"It is not mine to sing the stately grace,
The great soul beaming in my lady's face.
But mine it is to follow in her train,
Do her behests in pleasure or in pain,
Burn at her altar love's sweet frankincense,
And worship her with distant reverence."

Nature had been kind to Frank Anstruther. There was no startling beauty in his face, but he had in an altogether uncommon degree that highly-bred grace, without which no man should dare to sing those courtly words. When his song closed, even Mrs. Rolt could not help admitting, "Yes, that is best."

Whatever Kitty thought, it was left unsaid, but there was no reassurance for Jim Combe in the cold bow with which she bade him good-night.

It was "another victory for the Old Country."

CHAPTER VII.

The Storm

Kitty sailed out of the ranch drawing-room with her head in the air. Only to Frank Anstruther she unbent in the sweetest of smiles. She came down next morning white-faced, the sparkle of her dimmed, and all the self-confidence gone; her spirit only returning when Anstruther made an effort to cheer her. Then the little vixen turned upon him and made him wish himself a thousand times one of Dick Rolt's avenging posse.

There had been tears in the night; tears, confession and penitence, and between the two women there was peace again, but there was no peace for Anstruther. With Jim before her, Kitty had been a small angel to his rival, but Jim had gone at early dawn; there were no longer and loud men's voices about the corrals. The quiet of the place invited meditation, and the more Kitty meditated the less she could find to justify her attitude to Jim Combe, and the less she saw to admire in the man she had induced to stay behind. Indeed all her own small sins took a bodily form, and called themselves Frank Anstruther. As he smoked his last cigarette before turning in, that gentleman had come to a decision. He was quite sure then that the only woman fit to succeed his mother at Bilbury Park was the girl he had been singing to, and he had decided that he would put his fortunes to the test before he was a day older. Kitty would not say "no" to him, of that he felt sure. She was not one of those women who would willingly spend all their lives in an humdrum Canadian ranch.

But though he suffered without protest, as a man must, by midday Frank found himself wondering whether after all a world without women would be so utterly unendurable.

As for Mrs. Rolt, she had privately vowed that her favorite should have a fair chance, and that to prevent poaching in his absence she would haunt the two young people like their shadow until Jim's return.

No self-constituted duenna ever found her duties less exacting than did Mrs. Rolt; no pair of reputed lovers less anxious to be alone than Kitty and Frank.

Indeed, to such a pitch of misery was that unfortunate young man reduced before evening, that Mrs. Rolt found herself trying to make some amends to him for the girl's perverse temper.

In her heart she began to hate "young people." Without them there had been peace at the ranch, whereas now it was almost as bad as being in love again herself.

But this thought brought a smile to her sweet face. There had never been any rival in her case to big Dick Rolt. She scarcely thought the man existed who could have been.

The night after Jim's departure there was no music at the ranch, and the music next morning was neither of man's making nor to his liking. For days past the great red "Herefords" had been crowding in closer and closer round the corrals, and for five days the clouds had grown more and more murky overhead, whilst a bitter wind kept whining uneasily amongst the sage brush and the willows. Perhaps the absence of the men really accounted for the gloom which seemed closing round the ranch, and yet there seemed more than mere loneliness in the depression which took hold on those who had been left behind.

The last golden leaf had fallen from the cottonwoods along the creek bottoms, and now and again dry balls of sage brush would race and bound along upon the uplands, driven by unseen wind devils, or the trees in the recently burnt patch of pine timber just beyond the corrals would for minutes break out with a great groaning and grinding of limbs. But these things only occurred by fits and starts. The strangeness of them was due only to the fact that there seemed to be no storm to account for them. Such winds as there were, were purely local and short lived until the Wednesday morning.

Then the dawn broke in weird fashion, with such devilish storm lights, such unearthly and terrifying shadows as are only seen on the sea or the prairies, and the first act of winter began.

In half an hour every loose thing about the ranch had been blown from its position. A wagon which the Indians had left out was lifted right over and lay bottom upwards in the yard.

Fences which the biggest of the bulls had respected, were laid flat as if they had been but card houses.

The little creek which a week before had threatened to run dry, became a swollen torrent. Pieces of board and tin cans whirled along in the wind, battered and rattled against the walls, whilst the old house itself throbbed and hummed like an organ, and from time to itme an earth-shaking report announced the downfall fo some great Douglas pine in the slashing. Whilst the storm lasted there was no sun. The racing clouds bloted him out, so that a vague dull light prevailed, such as might have existed when the Spirit moved on the face of the waters.

The three in the house cowered at the windows, and watched the desolate scene with that feeling half of pleasure, half of awe, which is natural to human beings safely entrenched in a cosy, storm-proof house when storms rage without, until a miserable looking object with lowered head and streaming hide came trembling past the windows towards the barn.

"Oh, my poor little Mawitch. Mary, look. There is my fawn. Those idiotic Indians must have let it out."

"Well, she can go into the barn if she wants to. I think she is going."

But the fawn, like other only half-civilized things, had lost its wild wits, before it had acquired the sense of the domestic beast, and now stood shivering in the very eye of the wind, looking for some human being to take care of it, instead of taking care of itself.

"Mary, I must let it in, poor, miserable beastie. Do you mind, dear?"

To be continued.

FIGHT SELFISHNESS

Mothers Should See That Their Children Are Well-Grounded in Thoughtfulness for Others.

A selfish woman is an abomination; so is a selfish man, but he is not made to realize it. Instead of deploring the selfishness of men, fight it. This may mean ructions, but it will polish up masculine manners.

Men are not born selfish, and it is the fault of some one else that a nice man becomes inconsiderate.

Who is to blame? Generally every one with whom the boy comes in contact. It is not the heathen parent only who is puffed with pride over the man-child. No girl baby ever causes the unctuous voice in which a young father says, "My son!" Even the mother has a longing that the first-born be a boy.

What follows? Spoiling. He is treated like a special being, though he may be trained to actual obedience. Less is required of him, more is excused him, because he is a boy. No wonder he exacts attentions as a right.

When the cook leaves does brother wash dishes? Not he. He is at the ball field or at ease in a hammock while sister must put her hands into the greasy dishwater.

If mothers only realised that they were training their sons for unhappiness they would take more pains to make them thoughtful. Half the unhappiness in marriage is caused by a selfish husband.

MOUTH ULCERATIONS

It is probably not well known that the mouth is a perfect hot-bed of microbes. No fewer than one hundred varieties of micro-organism have been found flourishing in the human mouth. Probably the inhabitants of an ordinary mouth will number at least thirty varieties, and as they must live, like every other vital organism, by getting their food on the spot and throwing off poisonous excretions, chiefly of an acid nature, it is quite easy to understand how they can set up irritation. This is most commonly observed, in the first instance, at any rate, in that delicate membrane which encircles the neck of the tooth. Just what takes place is not quite clear, but an illuminating article in a medical paper the other day gives a very suggestive solution of the problem. Its writer insisted that a tooth brush should never be used more than once, as immediately thereafter it is so terribly infected that it practically acts as a machine for inoculating the gums with more or less dangerous micro-organisms. These quickly set up inflammation, and inflammation may of course, or may not, end in ulceration.

The most common form of ulceration in the mouth is that which is associated with indigestion. These ulcers are generally very easily cured by a mouth wash containing Chlorate of Potash, or as being more convenient of application, a Lozenge or Tabloid containing Chlorate of Potash Borax and a little Cocaine. Still, a mouth wash of any of the following substances:—Chlorate of Potash, half an ounce to a pint; Boracic Acid, one in thirty; Carbolic Acid, one in a hundred; Glycerine of Alum, one in five of water, should meet the requirements of almost any ordinayr case.

Intoxication by Tea

Tea drinking in moderation is of great value, and is not the least likely to do any damage. It is, however, perfectly certain that its constant use establishes a craving, and although it has been claimed that its regular use is not followed by depression it is really doubtful whether secret drinking amongst women may not be encouraged by the excess of it. Its abuse is certainly followed by chronic intoxication. Sufferers from this ailment do not reel about the streets like people in alcohol, but muscular tremour, irregular heart action, breathlessness, nervousness, headache neuralgia, ringing of the ears, and constipation accompanied by severe mental and nervous depression may result. Many confess to drinking three or four pints a day, and it is not to be wondered at if they suffer therefrom.

To Use Up Tough Meat.

It sometimes happens that cold meat is hard and dry, especially if the joint has been overcooked. It may be turned into a nice dish for family consumption in this way:—Pass it through your mincer with a slice or two of onion. Season to taste, and add a little powdered herb. Butter a pie dish; put a thin layer of bread crumbs into it; then a layer of meat, with a few pieces of suet or butter. Proceed with more crumbs, meat, and so on, till the dish is full, letting the top layer be of bread crumbs. Pour in a little gravy, stock or water, and bake, with the dish covered, for about 45 minutes. Uncover the dish, and brown the surface.

Simple Indigestion Cure

The following simple prescription is the most generally useful substance in ordinary cases of painful dyspepsia:—Carbonate of Bismuth and Bicarbonate of Soda of each ten grains, Tincture of Nux Vomica five drops, Tincture of Ginger ten drops, Chloroform Water half an ounce, to be taken half an hour before each meal.

BIFOCALS

OR—

DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments.

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

BLOCKED BY TWO FEET OF SNOW

Mr. Roy Cavanagh Had to Stop At Bancroft

Mr. Roy Cavanagh returned this morning from a trip in the interests of the Storey livery to the north country where he made an effort to drive by buggy to one of the lumber camps. He could, however, only get as far as Bancroft, the snow in that part of the country being as deep as two feet in some places, with sleighing in full operation.

HOW FALLIS MET HIS DEATH

The Particulars of Sad Fatality Brought About at Millbrook.

The Millbrook Mirror gives further particulars of the accident to Edward Fallis, whose death was reported in yesterday's issue of the Review.

While delivering a horse to Mr. Wm. Leith shortly after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and immediately in front of Mr. Leith's residence, the led horse got his foot entangled in one hind wheel of the buggy raising it forward and throwing Mr. Fallis against the heels of the driven horse, which kicked him and crushed his skull. Mr. Fallis seemed to remain unconscious of the injury sustained, not consulting a doctor, attending to his business as usual and remaining in town till after four o'clock, when he drove home with his son who attended the village school. He went to the table at tea time but his stomach was unable to retain food, sickness supervened, he lay down on the lounge and became unconscious. Dr. Turner was summoned and finding the case such a serious one was obliged to return for surgical instruments, before again leaving his office a telephone message came that Mr. Fallis was dead.

The late Mr. Ed. Fallis was a prosperous farmer living about three miles west of the village. His death, occurred in such a tragic manner, made a profound impression in the village and county around. He was respected and his sudden removal regretted wherever known. Deep sympathy is felt for his young family.

LAWN TENNIS CHAMPS

No official lawn tennis statement having been forthcoming, enquiry was made at the Y.M.C.A. to learn the standing in the two lawn tennis competitions which have dragged on more or less throughout the summer and fall, because of the indifference of some of the players, whose legality held back the more enthusiastic competitors. "Bill" Landry repeated his performance of last year and is the 1911 city champion, having won out in the finals with Meyers in Class A, and Butler in Class B.

INTER CLUB SERIES.

The situation in the Inter Club competition finds the Y.M.C.A. club well to the front, but it looks as though the remaining games will not be played. Should the 'Y' lose all of their game, yet to be played and the Golf Club win all of theirs, the two clubs would only stand tied.

The championship is practically conceded to the association club and this sends the honors Central Park way for the third year.

A programme and pie social will be held at the Auburn S.S. on Tuesday, Nov. 21st Admission 15c or 2 for 25c. 3d

McEWEN WANTS TO TRY DARBIES

Challenges Detective to Produce Handcuffs He Cannot Master

How McEwen, the hypnotist redeemed his promise to escape from a thick strongly nailed packing box at the Grand, last night, gave the crowded house something to puzzle over. That he did was plain to all, even the most skeptical and doubtful class. In full view of the audience a packing box was constructed by two carpenters, and this was further strengthened by ropes nailed around the box. By the time he was ready to enter, he had the audience worked up to a considerable degree of excitement, and when the box, with McEwen inside was trundled into a cabinet, the spectators awaited his re-appearance with plainly exhibited interest. Two gentlemen from the audience were requested by the hypnotist to come up on the stage to satisfy themselves that the act was genuine. In a space not exceeding one minute, McEwen sprang out of the cabinet, simultaneously with the cracking of a pistol, and although somewhat disheveled, appeared to have exerted no undue efforts in accomplishing his probably premier feat. The act was heartily applauded.

McEwen challenged detective Newhall, to produce a pair of handcuffs from which he could not free himself. This will be a new item on the program to-night if the officer comes along with the darbies.

SIR JAMES ON THE SCHOOL QUESTION

"Dr. Merchant has been making a thorough examination into the question of bi-lingual schools," said Sir James Whitney at Cobourg Wednesday night. "The report is not in yet, and is not nearly ready. When it is the Government will see if there is any remedy to be applied under the terms of the resolution of the last Legislature, and it will be applied regardless of whose corns are trod upon."

Defending the stand taken by him on educational matters, he blamed the present alarming scarcity of teachers upon the movement in the West, and indicated what the government was going to do to remedy the matter.

"We are preparing now a regulation by which every teacher will have to teach a year in Ontario before getting a certificate. My own opinion is in favor of compelling them to teach here two years, but I had to give way. I am not sure yet that I was not right."

The program for the entertainment that is to be given by the members of the physical department will include parallel bar work, pyramid building with and without apparatus, marching and calisthenics, instrumental numbers, tumbling, group games and mat work.

The reception tendered the employes of the Brinton Carpet Co. was a great success. There were some sixty men who came up to the building and all had a good time. A class of intermediates in the gym. entertained the men to some very classy work on the floor and a good game of basketball. Then the men chose teams for a game of bowling, Mr. I. Brock captained the winning team. Two of the men from the Brinton company gave an exhibition of scientific wrestling which was very much enjoyed by their fellow employes. Then a number of the men donned running shoes and had a good time on the gym. floor for a half an hour, after which all hands had a swim in the plunge bath. Refreshments were served in the reception hall and a few minutes after ten the men left for their homes.

Wants to Buy Dam.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Hon. Adam Beck, who was in Ottawa yesterday, asking the Government to cancel the sale of Victoria Island at the Chats' Falls, to Dan O'Connor, will wait on Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, to-day, to ask the Government to sell to the Hydro-Electric Commission dam No. 4, on the Otonabee River, near Lakefield.

Battleships Too Large.

New York, Nov. 17.—Smaller battleships and cruisers were advocated by Sir William H. White, former chief constructor of the British navy, in an address yesterday before the annual meeting of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers. Sir William is acknowledged to be one of the world's foremost naval architects.

"My personal conviction, based upon long-continued study of the problem," he said, "is that the wisest course in warship building would be found in a return to more moderate dimensions and a reduced unit cost for capital ships."

a 7% profit sharing preference stock on which dividends are paid twice a year—a stock issued by a concern with a record of 25 years' successful and progressive business experience a concern at present controlling Natural Resources which are bound to double the value of its securities before long.

We guarantee 7% on this investment. We are practically certain that this stock will pay higher profits. It's the best industrial stock, at par, on the market.

Furthermore we guarantee to buy it back, at par, plus 7% in one year from date of investment.

INTERMEDIATE AND JUNIOR O.H.A. TEAMS

Mr. Sam. Ray Given Second Term as President of Local Hockey Club.

The Peterboro Hockey Club is off again with Mr. Sam. Ray at the ribbons. As the secretary, Mr. R. M. Glover remarked at the annual meeting, held in the parlors of the National hotel last night, the club never had a more enthusiastic president than Mr. Ray. Some presidents and other officers are "candy kids" with a winning team, and worse than useless to a team with different success. Mr Ray delivered the goods last season, and was on the job, at home or away, and has the qualifications, which ably fit him for the office. Win or lose, so long as they played the game, President Ray always had a good word for the members of last season's team and better results, it is confidently expected, will be seen this coming season.

THE OFFICERS

Patrons and patronesses.—

Mr. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton, Mr. R. R. Hall and Mrs. Hall, Mr. W. H. Denham and Mrs. Denham, Mr. C.G. Graham and Mrs. Graham, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

Hon. Pres.—Dr. H. Wightman.

President—Mr. Sam Ray.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Jos. Wieard, jr.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Harry Morgan.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. R. M. Glover.

Executive.—Messrs. Thos. McGeachie, E. N. McWilliams, Fred. D. Craig Chas. Curtis.

The office of assistant to Mr. Glover was left open for future appointment.

It was decided that the local club should enter a junior and Intermediate team in the O.H.A. and that Mr. Thos. McGeachie, the club's representative to the annual meeting at Toronto on Saturday, should go unpledged in regard to his support of O.H.A. officers.

MR HARRY P. MORGAN
Elected 2nd Vice President of the Peterboro Hockey Club

The amendments to the constitution were discussed by the meeting and the local representatives will vote accordingly.

The club starts off wiht a balance from last season's operation of $15.

Players available for the Intermediate team are, Derocher, Patterson, Dearss, Denison, Park, Kelly, Coughlin, Giroux, McMillan, Weatherston, and several others.

HOCKEY

Rollie Glover of the Peterboro Examiner, is in the field for the executive of the O.H.A., Rollie is deserving of election, being an old timer at the game. He takes a keen interest in the game throughout the province. Further, both Peterboro and Lindsay should have representatives on the executive of the O.H.A. —Lindsay Warder.

According to the Lakefield News, that burg may have a junior hockey league this winter.

The local club has dropped the six man team scheme, thereby relieving representative McGeachie of a heavy load.

Fitting reference was made at the hockey meeting last night to the loss the club had sustained through the death of the late Wm. J. Metheral, who was without a doubt one of the best of the many efficient officers the club has had.

Mention too was made of the absence of Charlie Ray and W. J. O'Brien. Seventy five per cent. of the hockey fans never knew of the handicap under which Charlie Ray played on numerous occasions, and probably not more than a small handful ever stopped to think of the real hard work associated with the office of assistant secretary which "Bill" O'Brien so acceptably filled.

It is practically certain that Billy Breen will act as trainer this season.

Jack Thirnbeck the old reliable, will again manufacture the frigid surface at the rink.

Add Hockey.

There will be a meeting of the executive of the Church Hockey League in the Y.M.C.A. parlors at 7.30 o'clock to-morrow night.

The Presbyterians will hold an organization meeting in Knox church on Monday evening next at 7.30 o'clock. Players and fans from St. Paul's, St Andrew's and Knox are requested to attend, as a Presbyterian team is to be entered in the Church League.

Russian Troops For Persia.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—As no reply has been received from the Persian Government to the Russian ultimatum of Nov. 11, it is officially announced that the Government has ordered the immediate despatch of troops to Persia. They will be concentrated for the present at Kasbin, called also Kasvin, which is ninety miles northwest of Teheran.

U. S. Export Trade Booms.

Washington, Nov. 17.—There was a balance of $203,000,000 on the right side of the ledger in the Government's account during the past fiscal year of its imports and exports of farm and forest products. While it imported $688,000,000 worth of these products it exported $891,000,000 worth.

THE RING

New York, Nov. 16.—Abe Attell, featherweight champion of the world, easily defeated Young Cohen, who came from England with a reputation of being almost as shifty and clever as Jim Driscoll at the Houston Athletic Club last night. Attell gave the Englishman a good beating, but Cohen took all the champion could give and came back for more.

CANADIAN RUGBY

The Carrying Code Grows Sturdily and England May Send a Team Next Year.

The whole atmosphere being created, contemplate taking a picked team from Manitoba to play the picked teams of Alberta and British Columbia, while the Alberta and B.C. unions intend to visit Winnipeg next season. The union is also in communication with the English union of London to get a British team to tour Canada in 1912.

Canada has not been visited by an old country rugby combination since 1898, while South Africa, New Zealand and Australia have been visited twice in late years, also a team toured in the Argentine last year and it is considered due to Canada that the mother country should send out on tour a crack combination so as to help increase the interest, and pass along to our players any up-to-date pointers they may have to spare.

The development of English rugby in the colonies the last few years has been enormous and it is safe to predict that a quadrangular rugby test, in which the old country, New Zealand, Australia, South Africa and Canada will participate, will in all probability before long, be an accomplished fact, running on the same lines as the inter-contests in cricket.

PRODUCTION OF FOOTBALLS

The average follower of the football game is under the impression that the balls are still manufactured from pig-skin. The players do not "boot the pigskin" at all these days. There is nothing of the hog in the get up of the article.

Football covers are made from the material that goes to make your best shoes—calfskin. And only the very best grade of skin is used for good balls. Cheap balls, such as kids buy at the corner store, are made of sheep skin. The bladder, which is in the ball is rubber.

A visit to the factory on this side the Atlantic where the greatest number of footballs is turned out, elicits more interesting information. For instance, a shop sage says that the reason the ball is called "pigskin," is that in the old days, a pig bladder was used to give buoyancy to the ball. The bladder has been discarded and rubber substituted.

Some of the best balls are made from hides imported from England, but the skin of the domestic calf is considered good enough for the majority.

The regulation intercollegiate ball weighs from 12 1-4 to 14 ounces. The "soccer" ball from 13 to 15 ounces.

Although the game has changed greatly the ball remains about the same as the old Rugby. From June to November 42,000 oval footballs are turned out by this factory.

Good Men from Over-Seas

Writing on Canadian Rugby a critic claims that Western Canada is today able to place in the field a team equal in strength to an international side in the old country. Amongst the well-known old country players in Winnipeg are: For the Welsh, Fisher of Newport, Griffiths of Whatatutu, New Zealand; Davies of Llandovery college, and Aberdare. For the Barbarians, Inglis, from the eastern provinces; Skelton, late of the London Welsh team; and Hicks from a well-known English club. The Irish have their captain from one of the premier teams of Dublin; Law, the halfback hails from Belfast, and Myer has sported the colors of the Dublin Wanderers; while the Harlequins have Dowsett, from London; Stretch from Dublin; and Johnson, from Dentstone college.

Another for the Pro. Ranks

William A. Martin, the champion sprinter who has entered the University of Pennsylvania, and who was counted upon to carry everything before him on the cinder path, is reported to have turned professional under an alias.

Martin recently ran at Pottsville under the name of Harry Davis. He also has played on the Pottsville base ball team under the name of Tryson. Martin was the star performer at Notre-Dame University. He won the hundred yard American championship at [illegible] in 1909.

LATEST ABOUT RADIUM

Inexhaustibility of Radium Emanation Has Been Disproved.

Scarcely twelve years have elapsed since Professor and Madame Curie, by a painstaking and laborious process, succeeded in isolating the radioactive substance from a large mass of mineral having radio-active properties, and to it the name radium was given. This discovery was followed by fantastic theories and elaborate hypotheses brought about by the desire of physicists to account for the wonderful properties of the new substance without doing violence to existing laws. Here was a phenomenon which had to be reconciled to existing laws of energy, though apparently it transgressed the fundamental law of the conservation of energy. Radium gave off energy day by day and year by year without apparent exhaustion or even diminution in radiating power; and not a few of our leading physicists were ready to disown the law of the conservation of energy under the formidable evidence presented by the untoward phenomenon of this new substance; but recent researches have shown that this barrier to the full acceptance of the law of the conservation of energy has broken down, and that radium slowly wastes away by the dissipation of its energy just as a furnace unreplenished with fuel will eventually lose its radiating power. The extreme slowness of the decline in radiating power of radium was the cause of the first incorrect assumptions regarding it; but under the experimental skill of such men as Professors Soddy, Dewar, and Rutherford the apparent inexhaustibility of radium emanation has been disproved; and, instead of a substance possessed of an inexhaustible store of energy, it may now be regarded as a body possessed of great concentrated energy, which it allows to escape slowly and persistently, and in this respect it fits in with the existing order. As we learn more about it we find that there is less occasion to modify our previous ideas of energy in general.

MEDITATION

When my final autumn days,
Set aflame the maple tree,
When October's purple haze
Wraps the lawns and woodland ways,
Conscious that no more for me
Autumn's gold outspreadeth free,
Then I pause and ponder well,
All my goings, good or ill,
While to me the boon is given,
Earthly life to train for Heaven.

Have I sought the world to bless?
Have I lived in selfishness?
Is the record dark or bright
In that Book where perfect light
Shows the motives, shows the thought,
Prompting all that we have wrought?

Have I cheered the lonely heart
Or dried the mourner's tear?
Have I grasped a selfish part
Of specious pleasure here?

Have I trod where Jesus went
Amid the poor and low,
Lifting loads from shoulders bent,
And mitigating woe?

Have I courted fickle smile
Of fashion devotees?
Bowed at Mammon's shrine the while
To pander and to please.

Tho' the acts, unselfishness,
Removes from life the thorn,
For comrades nearest in the press
Of zenith cares or morn.

Home is dearer day by day
With thoughtfulness and care,
Kindness lavish'd all the way
And wisdom everywhere.

Whatever part this restless hand
Has taken in life's fray,
All noted by celestial band,
Attesting in that day,
When hidden things are all reveal'd,
And chimes of Heav'n ring—
Orchestral harpers sing
"Great controversy seal'd!"

If talents, merely one be sent
That was not mine to boast;
In condescension only lent
To praise the Lord of Hosts!

Praise Him in kindly ministry
That loyalty will see!
The verdict for sweet constancy,
"Ye ministered to Me!"

Oh record sure, long to endure,
Thy bank stock up above!
Unseen, unknown, let it be pure,
A monument of love!

The righteousness of Christ be mine;
Our own is simply dross;
Frail, erring mortals covert find
Reposing at the Cross.

FINE WAS FIFTY DOLLARS

Driver of Automobile Was Only Sixteen Years of Age

A fine of $50 was imposed by Magistrate Dumble, on an automobile owner this morning, who pleaded guilty of a violation of the laws governing auto-driving by allowing his sixteen year old son to drive the car. The Act strictly prohibits any person, under hte age of seventeen from driving a motor car or motor cycle, and when such violation is discovered the owner of license shall be held accountable. The regulations have been noted in the Review previously.

The penalty for the first offence is a $50 fine or one week in jail or both together.

His Worship, while not doubting that the lad was capable of driving the car, nevertheless was under the necessity of imposing the penalty as prescribed by law.

The owner was given ten days in which to pay the money.

"But you don't believe it, do you, Mr. Dumble?" chuckled the prisoner. He was led downstairs to the cell.

WIFE BEATER IS REMANDED

Italian Goes Back to Jail Till Next Thursday

Wife Says She is Afraid He Will Kill Her

Automo Mascarrow, the Italian wife beater, was remanded for another week by order of Magistrate Dumble this morning.

The prisoner's wife appeared in court with a badly blackened and discolored face, one side of which was swollen to to quite an extent. She was accompanied by her only surviving child out of a family of seven, the youngest of which died the same day as the prisoner was placed in the jail. Mr. Thomas Minicolo again acted as interpreter for the woman while gave evidence against her husband, and told his worship the origin of her disfigurations.

HUSBAND WHIPPED HER.

She stated that it was not the first time she had received ill-treatment at her husband's hands.

"He has always whipped me," she added. "One day recently he lifted a chair against me, but was prevented from striking by two of the boarders."

"Does she want to be separated from him?" asked his worship through the interpreter.

"Yes," was the answer, "because he has no affection for me, and I am afraid he will kill me."

WANTS TO BE GOOD.

The husband, however, said he did not want to be separated from his wife, vigorously asserting that "he would no more kick, no more fight."

"Well, you are not going to have the luxury of beating your wife," remarked Mr. Dumble.

He will come up again on Nov. 23rd.

YOUNG CLERGY IN THE WEST

Rev. J. H. Edmison, formerly of the Kincardine Presbyterian church, but now prominently identified with Dr Grant in the home mission field work, delivered a criticism at the men's missionary congress in Montreal yesterday morning condemning the policy of bringing out young clergymen from Great Britain to the mission fields of Western Canada.

Rev. Mr. Edmison is one of the leading Presbyterian divines in the Dominion. He is a nephew of Mr. George Edmison, K.C., of this city.

BEWARE OF BLOOD-POISON

Zam-Buk is A Sure Cure.

Mr. Jas. Davey, of 785 Ellice Ave., Winnipeg says—"A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk.

"I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However in about two days I was greatly alarmed, as my whole hand and arm to the elbow, became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home.

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned by dust and dirt getting into it. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and, having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement.

"In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. It draws all poisonous foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it too, for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction to the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent too for baby's bath. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

"Bills will also be laid before you with respect to the department of external affairs, the archives, and other subjects.

"The selection of the best route for the Hudson Bay Railway is engaging the attention of my advisers, and an announcement will be made to you of the result of their enquiry.

"Gentlemen of the House:

"The accounts of the last year will be laid before you. The balance of the estimates for the current fiscal year, as well as the estimates for the coming year, will be submitted for your approval at an early date.

"Hon. gentlemen of the Senate:

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"I commend these subjects, which I have mentioned, to your best consideration, and I trust that your deliberations, under the blessing of Divine Providence, may tend to the welfare and good government of this Dominion."

Some interesting bits of by-play were noticed by those standing below the Bar of the House.

Hon. Adam Beck was intently following the words as they fell from the lips of His Royal Highness. As the duke announced that a bill would be introduced to enable the Dominion to co-operate with the provinces in the improvement of public highways, a sotto voice exclamation of "Good, good," broke from the lips of Ontario's pioneer Minister.

When the Commons had returned from the Upper Chamber, after the independence of Parliament had been vindicated by the introduction of the perennially abortive bill to amend the act respecting the administration of oaths of office, Dr. Alguire, the member for Stormont, was introduced by Hon. George E. Foster and Hon. Dr. Reid, and took his seat.

The Premier announced that it had been decided to adjourn till Monday to meet the convenience of members. The debate on the address will usher in the week.

D. HUGHES CHARLES TELLS OF HIS TEA-PARTY CONVERSATION

Judge Winchester Takes Up the Stratton and Warren Conspiracy Charges In County Court—Only the Two Bank Cases Up.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—Mr. J. R. Stratton and Mr. J. J. Warren, two of those charged with conspiracy in securing the charter of the now defunct Farmers Bank sprang a surprise in court circles this morning when they elected to be tried by Judge Winchester in the County Court instead of in the Assize Court, where their case was assigned for trial.

The two accused reported to the sheriff and announced themselves ready to go on.

Mr. Stratton's and Mr. Warren's names appeared on the indictment drawn up at the last Assizes with the provisional directors of the bank. They had the right to make their election, which they did this morning.

"I thought it was the best thing to do," Mr. Stratton told The Star.

The provisional directors have not as yet taken the same step, however. They are: John Watson, John Ferguson, Alexander Fraser, Alex. S. Lown, Clark H. Smith, and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt.

HAD TO PREPARE NEW CHARGE.

When it came to reading the charge, none could be found. After a hunt, Mr. R. H. Greer, County Crown Attorney, made out a new one.

The lawyers were: Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., and Mr. George H. Watson, K.C. The first named appeared for Mr. Warren, and the latter for Mr. Stratton. The Crown was represented by Mr. A. E. E. Du Vernet.

"Does the Attorney-General consent to this?" asked Judge Winchester.

"I understand that when a re-election is made this is necessary, but this is the first time they have elected," said Mr. Du Vernet.

He then read sections of the Act which deals with this question.

NO OBJECTIONS MADE.

"I think you are quite right," said Judge Winchester. "I wondered if any objection was being made to their being tried by a county judge."

"No, your Honor. The Attorney-General doesn't object," said Mr. Du Vernet.

Judge Winchester then read the charge.

"How do you plead?" he asked.

Both men said "not guilty," and elected to be tried by His Honor without a jury.

Mr. David Hughes Charles was the first witness called. He is a broker of Montreal. He said he was in the Bank of Commerce for several years in Peterborough.

"Did you have any discussion with Mr. Stratton about the Farmers Bank?" he was asked.

"Yes."

"What about?"

"Obtaining a certificate. He informed me he had made advances to the Farmers Bank to make a deposit with the Minister of Finance."

"What was said?"

"I told him he was taking a chance."

"Why?"

"I thought the bank would never get started."

"Did he say he was getting anything for it?"

"Yes. He said he got an interest and a bonus."

Mr. Charles saw Mr. Stratton again on a train and he had told him he had been repaid the advance.

LOANED BANK MONNEY

The first conversation had been held at a tea party at which witness had been a guest. He believed the conversation took place on a Sunday. Afterwards he was given to understand that the Trust and Guarantee Company had loaned the bank $80,000.

Thomas Knight, an accountant and an inspector for the Bankers' Association was next called. He said he had been instructed to inspect the circulation of the Farmers' Bank, and told particularly to enquire into the personnel of the stock list.

He had informed Travers and Nesbitt that there were rumors concerning the bank, and he had seen the list.

"At this time did the company with which Mr. Warren and Mr. Stratton were connected come into the conversation?"

"Yes."

"Was any sum mentioned?"

"I think a loan from Mr. Stratton's company of $80,000 was mentioned."

Witness said that in order to obtain further information on this point, he had called at Mr. Stratton's office, but was unable to see him. He made an oral report of what he had learned to certain persons in Ottawa, using the long distance telephone, but never submitted a report in writing. He had done all in his power to bring the matter to the attention of the Finance Department, and that ended his work.

Cross-examined, he said that when he was unable to see Mr. Stratton at the Trust and Guarantee Company's office, he did not know whether he tried to see anyone else or not.

Edward Stockdale, the Ontario manager of the Trust and Guarantee Company had taken the stand just before adjournment.

UNLICENSED CO'S. ARE UNDER FIRE

Action Taken In Toronto in Fire Insurance Cases

Toronto Star.

The offices of the Insurance Brokerage and Contractors company in the Continental Life Building, were visited by the police at noon to-day and the general manager and an agent of the company were placed under arrest on a charge of conducting an illegal insurance business.

The men who were taken to police headquarters are C. M. Carroll, general manager, and Olson Miller, agent.

The charge is that they did conspire together to defraud Phippen Brothers and others of sums of money, the amount in the Phippen case being $500, which it is alleged the Insurance Brokerage and Contractors Company received as premiums for companies which are not licensed in Ontario.

It is stated by the authorities that other charges may be laid, but the one upon which they will act was placed by the lumber merchants. According to the information which came to the police, the representative of this insurance firm approached the complainants and represented to them that they were paying too high insurance on their plant and lumber at 146 Pape avenue, stating that they could offer equally good security on smaller premiums. The transfer of the policy was made and the Phippen Brothers state that they advanced premiums to the amount of $500, their policies being taken out in the name of various American Insurance companies.

Later, from articles which appeared in a local paper, they discovered that the American companies with whom their policy was taken out, were not licensed to do business in Ontario. They were instructed that the policies were no good, that in case of loss they would be unable to collect in Canada and possibly not in the United States. They they tried to cancel the policies and get back the money which had been advanced. This, it is alleged, was refused.

In any other case in which the police may take action, the circumstances are identical. When the officer of the Insurance Brokerage Company was visited the authorities took possession of all the books of the firm, which will be kept until the investigation is over. Crown Attorney Corley and Inspector of Detectives, Duncan, held a consultation on the case.

CHINA AND THE WAR

Authoritative Speaker Coming to the City for Sunday

The war which is being waged in China at the present time has aroused an intense interest, and any man who can speak with authority about the happenings in the Celestial city, is sure to command a large audience. Mr. J. L. Macpherson, who comes to Peterborough under the auspices of the local Y.M.C.A., has just recently returned from China, after spending the past seven years in close touch with the affairs of that land.

Mr. Macpherson will speak in two of the city pulpits on Sunday, and at a men's meeting on Sunday afternoon in the boys' game room of the Association building. At the men's meeting his subject will be "A World Task for Young Men," and this will be an address well worth hearing. Mr. Macpherson is well known to the people of Peterborough, and many will be delighted to have another chance to meet with him, and hear what he has to say about his experiences during the past seven years among the Chinese.

MILITARY MEN HAVE CONFERENCE

Col. Sam Hughes' Idea a Decided Success

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—The military conference, called by Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, which took place in the Railway Committee room of the Commons this morning, was a decided success. After a speech of welcome from the Minister of Militia, it was decided to divide into three sections:—Infantry, cavalry and artillery.

Among those in attendance were:—Lieutenant-Governor J. M. Gibson, Sir H. M. Pellatt, Col. Wetmore, Col. A. T. Thompson, Lt.-Col. Wm. Ponton, Capt. Armand Lavergne, and General Cotton, who presided over the infantry section.

The chief proposals submitted by commanding officers were that more pay was needed for the militia, better armory accommodation, especially for rural corps, the provision of better clothing, and the exemption of militiamen from various forms of taxation.

Lt.-Col. Ponton, of Belleville, urged the need of a campaign of education to inspire the young men of Canada. He lamented the spirit of anti-militarism which was now rampant in the country, and urged that the privilege of the ballot should be made conditional upon military service. This idea was approved by several other speakers, one, Col. Fisher, of Brockville, going so far as to assert that the success of the militia depended upon some form of conscription.

Every man is said to have his price, but the average woman sizes him up and thinks he is eligible for a place on the bargain counter.

ANSWERS

By J. W. BROWETT, Optometrist

Q. Why do school children with good sight, require Glasses?
A. Mainly to rest the eyes. The eye does not obtain its growth until the child is about the age of twelve. The growing eye is taxed beyond its strength, the proper glasses rest and preserve the eyes.

Q. Why do children squint?
A. By squinting or frowning the muscle in the eye is relieved of strain, this is nature's way. Study glasses relieve this strain, and thus prevent squint.

Q. Why do children have eye headaches?
A. An eye headache is a reflex pain caused by straining the eyes; the pain may be over the eyes or through the temples. The remedy for eye headaches is relief-glasses, to be worn while studying.

PREMIER WHITNEY GETS GREAT RECEPTION FROM INGERSOLL

Additional Funds For Colonization Roads In Ontario--Rowell Asks Temperance People to Wait Awhile.

Ingersoll, Nov. 18.—Inclement weather has little effect in deterring the crowds from coming to attend Sir James Whitney's meetings. In spite of the fact that there was a regular downpour of rain here last night, the visit of the Prime Minister of Ontario brought out a crowd that comfortably filled the auditorium of the town hall.

S. M. Fleet, reeve of Ingersoll in introducing the speakers of the evening, described the record of the Whitney administration as the envy of the world.

Donald Sutherland, M.P., came all the way from Ottawa to welcome Sir James.

William McGhee, Conservative candidate for the Legislature in South Oxford, said he was proud to be a supporter of the Government of Sir James Whitney, which he described as the most efficient Government this country has ever known.

In expressing his pleasure at being among the electors of South Oxford Sir James said that party prejudice was justifiable because each party was right at certain times, and the swinging of the pendulum of public opinion in favor with the Liberals or Conservatives served to classify the political atmosphere. He drew attention to the remarkable interests that the people of Ontario now take in the great public questions of the day compared with what they did twenty-five years ago.

With regard to the expenditure for colonization roads, Sir James said that just before leaving his office to attend this meeting, he had signed an order-in-council providing additional funds for extending these roads, in addition to the money already set aside for this purpose by the Government.

The $300,000 annual rental that the Grand Trunk are paying the province for running rights over the Ontario Government railway is more than half the interest on the cost of construction of the whole railway," said the Premier. "I begin to think myself that we are good business men, my modesty kept me from saying it before, but now I must admit it."

In referring to the Liberals trying to force Sir James into the arms of the liquor interests, the Premier said it will take more tran that aggregation to force me into the arms of the liquor schools.

"All these poor people, who are suffering body and soul, are told by this much-heralded temperance reformer, N. W. Rowell, to wait till the next election before he will formulate a policy on the temperance question, and yet this man takes it upon himself to imagine that he is more capable of conducting the Government than his political opponents."

"Bilingual schools is a wrong term. I don't suppose there is an English parent in Ontario who would not like his children to know the French language or a French parent, who wouldn't like her children to know English. It is only that the English language must be the language of instruction in the schools that we are contending for."

ORIENTAL WRIGGLE BANNED; "DAWN OF LOVE" DANCE TO GO

London County Council Puts Under a Ban the New Style of Amusement.

London, Nov. 18.—Oriental twisting and wriggling, styled on the bills "dancing" appears to be losing its fascination for the London music hall public. The London County Council also at last seems to have developed a conscience on the subject.

A so-called "dawn of love" dance introduced at the Palladium on Monday night had to undergo drastic alterations before the committee of councillors would sanction its repetition. The committee witnessed a private performance of the modified version, and it intends to give its attention to the contortions of women on every vaudeville stage in the metropolis.

This new style of alleged dancing has grown into something like a general scandal. A playgoer can scarcely enter a music hall or even some of the high-class theatres without beholding a girl or a woman rushing about the stage seemingly trying to shake her head off or break her back, and wearing nothing except a flimsy tiara and girdle of ribbons.

Fifteen Are Lost.

Quebec, Nov. 18.—The Norwegian bark Antiqua, which was loading at one of the ports below Quebec, was driven ashore at Martin River during the night and went to pieces. It is believed that fifteen of the crew were drowned. Three were saved.

$100,000 For McGill.

Montreal, Nov. 18.—A deputation from McGill University waited on Sir Lomer Gouin, the Quebec Premier, yesterday morning, and after explaining their financial difficulties asked the Premier for an annual Government grant of $100,000. Sir Lomer drew their attention to the fact that the Government only gave $100,000 a year to the primaries of the whole province. He had heard that it was intended to raise a million dollars by private subscription to help the work now being done at McGill. Then, he could not forget that Laval was also petitioning for an increase in their subsidy.

For his part he was disposed to favor giving the university the largest amount possible, but he did not see how he could manage to grant them $100,000 a year. If he did grant that sum then the Government would have to be prepared to increase their grant to the primaries as well as to give help to Laval.

The deputation rose with the Premier's promise to do his best for them. Among them were Sir Edward Clouston, Dr. Roddick, Messrs. C. H. Hays, Mr. Robert Reford, and Prof. Burke.

Shocks In Switzerland.

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 18.—Reports received during the day indicate that the earthquake shock was the most severe that Switzerland has experienced in fifty years. It traversed the country from Geneva to Constance and was most violent in the Central Alps. Several towns were plunged into darkness by the disarrangement of the electric lighting systems and in some places the people spent the night outdoors, fearing that the mountains would fall upon them. Observatory instruments were damaged.

Many houses were partially wrecked. At St. Gall several persons were slightly injured by falling chimneys.

ANGLO PRAYER CELEBRATION

Five Minutes to Honor a Century of Peace.

New York, Nov. 18.—Absolute cessation, so far as possible, of the activities of 150,000,000 English-speaking people throughout the world for five minutes for silent prayer and contemplation, is a suggestion which Senator Root of New York has made for the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of peace among English-speaking peoples.

The suggestion came out last night in connection with the appointment by Mayor Gaynor of a committee of one hundred prominent New York men to have charge of the celebration of the centennial so far as this city is concerned. The national committee plans to commemorate the peace anniversary by the erection of permanent memorials, rather than through the celebration of pageants. For this reason it has been necessary to organize far in advance of the time of celebration, which will extend from Feb. 17, 1915, until some time in the summer, during which Great Britain, Canada and other parts of the English-speaking world will participate in the celebration.

The date suggested for the five minutes' stoppage of activities of English-speaking people is Feb. 17, 1915, the date of the ratification by the American and British Governments of the treaty signed at Ghent, Belgium.

Among the suggestions for permanent memorials of the century of peace one is the building of a watergate, to be erected on the Canadian and American sides of the Detroit River, at Detroit and Windsor, Ont.; another, that an arch be built on the the Canadian frontier over the New York to Montreal highway, now under construction; still another proposal is for the erection at local points along the international border of boundary monuments of artistic design and permanent character.

LIEUT. WHITE DISMISSED BY COURT MARTIAL ON THE NIOBE

Judges Decided His Negligence-Was the Cause of the Wreck.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 18.—Lieut. C. White, navigating officer on board H.M.C.S. Niobe, was found guilty by court-martial here at noon yesterday of suffering, through negligence, the Niobe to strand on the treacherous ledges off Cape Sable on July 30 last and in spite of a high tribute paid him by his commander and his previous good record, was severely reprimanded and dismissed from the ship. The finding of the court came as a surprise to most of those who had followed the intricate case.

It was felt that Lieut. White had made out a much better case than did Lord Alliston Graham, who faced the same charge and got off with a reprimand. It has been clearly shown that Lieut. White had been overworked previous to the stranding. The night of the 29th he had gone to his room for a much needed rest, leaving word with the officer of the watch to be called when the Cape Sable lights were sighted and if he had known, he said, that the officer of the watch would not call him should the Cape Sable light, when within reasonable range, not be sighted, he would not have left the bridge.

Moreover, according to Lieut. White's reasoning, and his reasoning was borne out by the evidence of the witnesses, the stranding was due either to an abnormal tide, which it was impossible to foresee, or to an uncharted rock, the existence of which rock having been amply proven by the grounding of H.M.S. Cornwall. Lieut. White also maintained he had not been informed of the facts as he should have been. In spite of all this, however, he was adjudged guilty and sentenced as stated.

"The Niobe went ashore and someone had to suffer for it," said Lieut. White, shortly after the sentence had been pronounced. He declined, however, to comment further on the decision.

It is possible that the Canadian Government will see fit to appoint him to another position at once. It could even reinstate him as navigating officer on the Niobe, but it is scarcely likely that such a step will be taken. Until he secures another position, Lieut. White remains on half pay. He is not a man of independent means. Lieut. White took his medicine with good grace. Although feeling keenly the humiliation it meant to him he is extremely popular with both officers and men on board the Niobe and all feel deeply for him in his misfortune. His wife and two children reside in Halifax. He is about 34 years of age.

PROSPECT OF HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER FOR PETERBORO GOOD

Ottawa Conference Very Encouraging—Hon. Adam Beck Claims the Scheme is for Whole Trent Valley

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—A conference which may have the result of extending the cheap power scheme, which has proved such a boon in Western Ontario, to the eastern section the province, took place between Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission; Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals; Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, and Hon. F. D. Monk, Minister of Public Works. Mr. Beck and Mr. George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., representing the province, applied to the Minister of Railways and Canals and the Minister of Justice for a lease of power at dam 4 on the Peterborough and Lakefield division of the Trent canal, and at dam 8, on the Rice Lake branch. A large number of residents of Peterborough and Lakefield were also present.

Mr. Strachan Johnston, of Toronto, acting for private parties, said the former Minister of Railways and Canals had promised to lease the power privileges at dam 4, and that rights in regard to dam No. 8 had already been granted. He said that private interests should be protected, and declared that the policy of Hon. G. P. Graham had been to centralize the control of the water powers on the Trent system. At the same time it was asserted that the city of Peterborough had been given a promise that its interests should be guarded.

Hon. Mr. Beck said that action should be taken at once, in order that the municipalities might vote upon the Hydro-Electric power by-laws in January.

"This," he said, "is a public stream. The bed of the river and the water in the river belong to the province according to the declaration of the Privy Council in England. You own the dams, but have no right to take water from the river not needed for canal purposes, therefore, you have no right to sell or dispose of the surplus water. I am aware that the Dominion Government has been in the habit of selling the surplus water from the canals, but that was before it was decided that it did not have that right. I want you to give us the right to use the provincial water passing through your dams. It is not a question of rate, but of principle. It is not something for the City of Peterborough, but for the whole Trent Valley."

Mr. Lynch-Staunton also urged that the title to the water in the stream was vested in the province. But he asked that the leases be granted irrespective of what might be urged in regard to ownership.

Finally, Hon. Mr. Cochrane promised to give a written decision in the case

ROWELL MET A TOUGH ONE

Guelph Liberal Asks Him to Show His Hand.

Liberal Leader up a Tree on Temperance Plank.

Guelph, Nov. 18.—N. W. Rowell, K.C., the new Liberal leader, declared here last night at the opening meeting of his Ontario tour, that a broader policy with regard to the temperance question would soon be formulated by himself and colleagues upon which the party would stand or fall. He also attacked the proposal of Sir James Whitney to make the Hydro-electric system a Government department, declaring that that act would injure it seriously by rendering it subject to the spoils system, and other abuses.

Mr. Rowell met some trouble with a heckler. For a time it looked as if there would be trouble, for the audience tried to cry the interrogator down. It was only by pleading with them that Mr. Rowell succeeded in quieting the hisses and cries of "Put him out," and "Shut up."

The opera house, where the meeting was held, which holds about 1,200, was not quite full. Dr. Angus MacKinnon was in the chair. J. I. McIntosh, the Liberal candidate in this riding, also spoke.

On the proposed change in the Hydro-Electric Department Mr. Rowell said: "When Sir James Whitney says he will take the Hydro-electric department, which at present is the agent of the municipalities and make it a political department of his Government he says he will do something which will be unfair to the municipalities, and he will do that which is not in the best interests of the province.

Shortly before he concluded, Samuel Carter, chairman of the local light and heat commission, a warm temperance advocate, asked Mr. Rowell to show his full attitude on the temperance question.

"That is the point that the Liberal party has fallen down on during the past twenty years," said Mr. Carter. "What are you going to do about it?"

"When I cease to be able to give a reason for the faith that is within me and the policy on which I stand then I will retire from the leadership of the Liberal party," said Mr. Rowell when he had calmed the tumult. "I am not the Liberal party, I am only the leader. I have had no opportunity to consult with the Liberal candidates on that question. The position I have taken on that matter is on my own convictions. I was too busy to confer with my colleagues, and I came out the way I did without any help.

"Should I have pledged the Liberal party on my own initiative to a broad policy on that question?"

"Yes," yelled some one.

"We will take it into consideration so soon as the opportunity is given us. We will formulate a policy upon that question upon which we will stand or fall." (Great applause.)

Turning to the tax question, he reviewed its recent history. Sir James was too good a Conservative to wish to have anything to do with such a democratic proposal as was made in the Liberal platforms, said Mr. Rowell.

"We want to give every municipality throughout the province the power to exempt improvements," he declared. The audience applauded him after he had outlined the measure. In support of it Mr. Rowell told of many Conservative newspapers which had expressed themselves in favor of it.

J. I. McIntosh, the Liberal candidate in the riding, told why Mr. Rowell had not gone further with regard to temperance. It was because it would have been presumptuous in Mr. Rowell to have formulated a larger policy in that respect without the consent of the party, he thought.

THE POWER SITUATION

The power conference at Ottawa yesterday was very satisfactory, according to the reports brought back by the Peterborough deputation. It is very likely that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be able to get either Dam No. 4 or Dam No. 8, the Dominion Government acknowledging the provincial claim that the waters of the river are provincial waters, and the commission expropriating what land and other rights that are necessary.

If this proposition goes through, it is quite possible that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be able to formulate its proposal so that there can be a vote taken in Peterborough on a definite proposal on January 1. The form the proposition is most likely to take is for the Hydro-Electric Commission to build a generating station at either of these points, and transmit to Peterborough and other municipalities power, the city taking here what it needs, and can handle, and distributing it. The Hydro-Electric can expropriate the Otonabee distributing system, or even the Peterborough Light & Power Co. distributing system.

Hon. Adam Beck is very anxious to hustle this proposition up, and judging by the way the power corporations are strongly entrenched here, the promises are for one of the stiffest power fights ever put up in the province.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AT THE HUGHES MILITARY CONFERENCE

Recommendations of Supreme Importance to the Military Forces of Canada.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught attended a luncheon tendered the officers attending the militia conference by Hon. Col. Hughes in the Parliamentary restaurant yesterday afternoon and delivered his first after dinner speech since his arrival in Canada as Governor-General. The luncheon was attended by Premier Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and many members of the Borden Government.

Upon rising to respond to the toast of his health His Royal Highness the Governor-General was greeted with hearty cheers. His highness thanked Col. Hughes for having afforded him the opportunity of being present, and expressed to the officers of his appreciation of the warmth of their reception. He saw before him, he said, the faces of many whom he had met at home on different occasions, and rejoiced to meet them again.

Referring to the conference His Royal Highness said it augured well for the country that so many should come enormous distances to deliberate upon important questions affecting the militia of Canada, and he hoped that the best results would flow from the event. A great opportunity was given to them to put into practice the suggestions formulated at the conference, and he felt that those who had taken part in it would utilise what they had learned for the benefit of the force. If they could impress their countrymen with the importance of the militia they would be doing their duty, not only to Canada, but to the Empire at large.

In conclusion, His Royal Highness expressed the hope that there would be many occasions during the time he had the honor to be at the head of the Government of the country to meet the militia.

Col. Hughes in felicitious terms proposed the health of R. L. Borden, Prime Minister, and of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, former Prime Minister of Canada.

Hon. R. L. Borden, in reply, referred to the importance of the gathering which, he said, was composed of men interested in the welfare of the militia of Canada. He felt sure that the conference would be of value to those entrusted with the administration of the Department of Militia and Defence, as well as to the officers themselves. The Prime Minister paid a tribute to the energy and ability of the new Minister of Militia.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a happy response. He observed that he was at a loss to know why Col. Hughes had called upon him except it was to the purpose of pouring balm into his wounds. (Laughter.)

As Col. Hughes had said he had always given his support to whatever promised to benefit the militia, but, he added, that was a very easy thing when there was such a good Grit at the head of the Department as Sir Frederick Borden.

However he promised to stretch his conscience to support the new Minister of Militia was equal fervor. Sir Wilfrid concluded amidst applause by declaring that though he was no longer of the militia he had not lost interest in it.

Some of the recommendations of the conference were:

Securing of more ground available for military training.

Establishment of university and college battalions.

Extension of cadet movement, and better instruction and equipment.

That the minimum pay of soldiers should be increased to $1 per day.

Legalization of sale of light beer in canteens in military camps.

Lieut.-Col. W. A. Logie of Hamilton suggests a system of universal training after the pattern of that in force in Australia.

BANK OF MONTREAL PREMISES WORTH OVER $9,000,000

New Departure Made In Very Strong Annual Report Issued by the Big Bank To-day

For years past the statements of the Bank of Montreal have contained this item, "Bank premises, $600,000."

The figure was, of course, absurdly low, but it was ultra conservative and characteristic of the ultra conservative Bank of Montreal.

Shareholders and critics have railed for years past, and have asked the bank to show what its premises and buildings were worth. Now they know.

In the annual statement issued to-day the big bank shows its land holdings to be worth no less than $4,735,000, and the buildings $4,353,000, or a total of $9,088,000. This is enormous, and, to say the least, will agreeably surprise the shareholders, many of whom have thought the land and buildings to be worth perhaps about $6,000,000.

The bank now takes its $9,088,000 valuation, cuts more than half of it off, and writes the bank premises account in the new statement at $4,000,000.

This is an increase of $3,400,000 over last year, and of this amount $3,000,000 is added to the rest, which is now $15,000,000, or equal to the capital, or what the capital will be very shortly when the new stock just issued, is fully paid up. The balance, amounting to $400,000, is carried forward.

As for the past year's results, profits are put down at $2,276,518, against $1,797,992 last year, and a balance of no less than $1,855,000 goes into next year's account. A magnificent showing even for Canada's premier bank!

The statement shows a slight increase in non-interest bearing deposits during the year, and a falling off i deposits bearing interest.

Circulation shows an increase, so do current loans, which are nearly $10, 000,000 greater than last year. Cal loans outside the country are very much smaller, indicating that the ban is now employing more money in Canada than ever before.

A few of the most important items in the statement, which shows the bank to be in exceptionally strong shape, compare as follows:

MR. HALL'S ADDRESS

Mr. Hall has issued his address to the electors at last. Having had a full week or so to ruminate on what Mr. Peck had to say to the electors, Mr. Hall has evolved, not a "skimpy chicken," but a grand, much be-feathered rooster. It is enough to make Mr. Hall smile on both sides of his face, when he thinks how cleverly that address has been handled, side-stepping carefully all the bumpy places, and getting away with some of his benevolent projects for the elevation and betterment for those down-trodden masses whom he so dearly loves.

Much of what is in the address should be commended. Mr. Hall is no slouch when it comes to assisting the needy, supporting those in trouble, and lending the aid of his genial personality to the welfare of the community, especially in preparing a political address. The common people could not wish for greater solicitude, not even the shareholders of the concern which put them on the "string." However, these are side-issues. In considering a politician's electoral address, one must go behind the record, to examine the source, the circumstances of production. In other words, a man must be judged by his actions, and not by his campaign promises.

Mr. Hall advocates changes in the Workmen's Compensation Act, remodeling it on the basis of the British and German acts, which give compensation to workmen or their families in case of accident, without the question of contributory negligence being raised. But so does Mr. Peck. Mr. Peck, if elected, will be in a position to give some force to his views as a government supporter. Mr. Hall could merely shout himself hoarse, to earn the plaudits of the dusty benches on his own side of the house.

As a fine sample of what a man, to Mr. Hall's peculiar temperament can do when he wants to "catch" the workingman just consider this section of his address:

"Many accidents happen to employees due to them working too long hours. The employer should be made liable for this increased risk. He should be forced to give shorter hours to his employees or else be compelled to assume the increased risk which follows in consequence of an employe being tired and over-worked."

Isn't this a charitable, Christian-like sentiment, anyway! We presume Mr. Hall refers to the railway companies as they are the principal offenders in over-working employes. If Mr. Hall wants the Compensation Act changed so that employers are liable for any accident, happening in any manner, to a workman—as he says he does in the same address—the employer bears all the risk anyway, long or short hours. There isn't much sense in this paragraph if the Compensation Act provisions are to be altered.' This paragraph is a grand-stand play for the benefit of the great masses, naturally, and who can blame Mr. Hall, if he can get away with it?

Mr. Hall resembles Artemus Ward in some respects—he seems to be somewhat of a chronic joker. In his remarks on education he steps carefully into the foot-prints of his new leader, Mr. Rowell. He thinks that every child in the province should have a thorough knowledge of the English language. He refrains from saying that the English language should be the language of instruction in the schools in the French-speaking sections of Ontario, which is the only way to secure that result. Oh, no, that would be too much of a good thing. He apparently would be willing to have French used as the medium of instruction, and the English language taught the same as as French is taught in the collegiates and high schools in the British parts of Ontario.

The question of bi-lingual schools—which is the question of whether school instruction shall be carried on in English or in French—is avoided. Mr. Hall has failed, like his leader, to come out on the side of the English language as the supreme language for the education of Ontario children. He would be satisfied with the instruction of the French-speaking children in French, and giving them a smattering of English on the side—which is precisely what the people of Peterborough at least, do not want.

The other parts of Mr. Hall's address do not amount to a great deal. The question of further aid to charitable institutions is one every Conservative will be interested in, and one on which the record of the Whitney government has been most gratifying. There was no aid given by the Ross government to sanatoria for consumptives. The Whitney government has inaugurated this policy. In 1904 the Ross government provided for hospitals and charities $235,000. In 1910 that amount had been increased to $352,000, by the Whitney government, an increase of practically fifty per cent. It may be that the government will be able to make increased provision along this line, though in spite of the fact that the Whitney government has doubled the income of the province, it has made such an increased appropriation that it does not boast of any too large a surplus. A government cannot have a big surplus, and give the utmost aid to the many worthy objects presenting themselves. All that the province at present can stand financially is being done.

As to provincial subsidies to radial railways, that would be a very nice thing, but the Whitney government, with the approval of the people, has abandoned the policy of railway subsidies. So that Mr. Hall's address, which has been given much more consideration than it is worth, does not amount to much after all, in spite of its flourish.

SCHOOL TEACHERS

The Liberal newspapers and candidates have been making some noise about the lack of teachers for the Ontario schools, as they are attracted west by the higher salaries. In his speech at Cobourg Sir James Whitney said that he would remedy that, to some extent. He would provide that teachers must teach at least a year in Ontario before getting their certificate, to enable them to depart in peace for the west.

The Toronto Star was complaining along with the others about the scarcity of teachers, but now it complains about the "conscription methods" of Sir James. It objects strongly to the limitation of the liberty of the teachers, even for the period of one year, allowing the province the benefit of their services for that time as a recompense for some of the trouble and outlay it is put to in giving them their training. Sir James is a czar, according to the Star, and his new plan savors of despotism, etc.

So there you are. If there aren't enough teachers, it is Whitney's fault. If he takes steps to improve the supply, he is a czar, and a despot. If he were to adopt conscription, he would be anathema to everyone. Of course, it is politics, but surely this is extreme partisanship. If teachers for the rural schools are scarce, why blame it on the government? Workers in every line of business are scarce, because the country is so prosperous. It is not the fault, but the misfortune of Ontario that her schools should be undermanned, but the cause can only be laid at the door of Canada's general commercial prosperity.

When any one tells you that imported beers are worth the price, ask this question:

Why don't foreign brewers charge their Canadian price in their home markets?

That will end the argument. The best beer brewed is just worth the cost of ingredients and production, plus selling cost and a fair profit. Order and you'll get the best beer brewed at normal cost. Try it once and you'll know exactly why "Salvador" is called "The National Drink" by the majority of Canadians.

"Salvador" (The Famous National Drink)

"Salvador" has been pre-eminent for purity and quality for over 200 years. It is pure, sparkling and refreshing, besides possessing tonic qualities which doctors recommend.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Good afternoon, have you shoveled off the slush yet?

Mr. Hall has shown himself to be a gentleman of some address.

The druggists to-day report quite rush for liniments for aching arms and blistered hands.

If Toronto adopts the tubes it is making such an ado about, it will not be Toronto the Good, but Toronto the Holey.

The man who believes that the Liberals in Ontario are able to do more than say "Me too," to the Whitney government set of polizies is a man who isn't following the trend of events just at present.

Mr. Hall in his address to the electors utters not a whisper about the bringing of the hydro-electric power system to Peterborough. He is a wise man who knows when to keep a still tongue.

The news from Ottawa that Peterborough has a very good chance to get Dam No. 4 or Dam No. 8, or both, is good news. Leave it to the Conservative government at Ottawa and at Toronto to work it out. No more handing over of valuable privileges to party favorites. The Conservatives are the true Liberals in this sense.

Sir James Whitney says that there aren't bi-lingual schools in Ontario. Constitutionally there are not, but there may be cases where the French language is used much more than is necessary to instruct the pupils. However, when Dr Merchant's report comes in, there will be action if needful. Sir James says that he will straighten things out no matter whose corns are trod on.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Whipsawed speculators in wheat to-day laid the blame for their troubles to contradictory despatches about weather conditions in the Argentine. After a day of nervous fluctuations, prices closed in ragged fashion, varying from 1-4 to 3-8 to 1-2 up and down. Corn finished a shade to 1-4c lower, oats unchanged to 3-8c up and hog products strung out from 10 to 12 1-2c decline to 5c advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ⅛d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d to ⅜d higher on corn. Berlin and Buda Pest closed unchanged on wheat.

Must Have Diet Change

They were telling baseball yarns when Dr. Mark E. Baldwin, famous old States' National and Brotherhood pitcher, pushed this one over the plate: "You all remembers Mike Kelly, one of the greatest baseball players the game ever knew. Sure you remember Mike. Well, one day he wasn't feeling any too good and called on a doctor. The latter, after an examination, turned to Mike and said: "Mr. Kelly, you have been drinking too much." This was too much for the grand old catcher, and after a minute's reflection he came back at the doctor with "That's all right, doc; but do you expect a fellow to eat all the time."

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

—BY—

CLIVE PHILLIPPS WOLLEY

(AUTHOR OF "GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO," ETC.)

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"No, of course not; though I don't suppose that it will come in. Try if you can tempt it, Mr. Anstruther."

With a piece of bread in his hand to entice the fawn Anstruther went to the main door, glad to do anything to win a smile from his offended lady, but the very elements warrel against the unfortunate lover that day. As soon as the latch gave under his hand the great door burst inwards with such a noise that the fawn fled, whilst Anstruther himself was sent reeling before the blast, and pictures, stick racks, and bear hides clattered and careered along the floor.

As usual in this confounded country he had made a mess of it. No one but a fool, he reflected, would have tried to open a door on the weather side of the house, when it would have been much easier to have brought the deer round to the lea side, but it was too late to think of that now. He had to bring that beast in. He simply dared not face those two women without it, so, with a glance at the damage he had done, he plunged recklessly into the storm bareheaded, dragging the great door to behind him.

It required all Anstruther's strength to shut the door, and for a moment he had to cling to the handle of it for support before he could make good his footing against the wind. Like most newly-arrived Englishmen he was still particular about his attire, but in less time than it takes to write it, the glory of his boiled shirt and smart collar had gone, his riding breeches, built wide in the latest fashion, were clinging to him like the skin of a fish, his long coat-tails were performing like a giddy wind-mill, and his whole appearance was such as to justify his belief that the ladies at the window were convulsed with laughter. As be crossed the paddock it occurred to him that Mrs. Rolt was signalling to him to come back, but he was uncertain, and in any case he did not mean to go back without that infernal little beast which tempted him yard by yard across the corrals, and towards the patch of shrieking and groaning timber.

Surely, he thought, the ladies were signalling to him, but he could not understand what they meant. They were calling, but the window was closed, which in itself would have been enough to drown their voices, without the deafening din all around him.

He was within arm's length now, and he made a spring at the fawn's collar, touched it, but could not secure his hold, so that he only frightened the beast, which in a few bounds reached the timber. But here it paused, as if it was as much afraid to go forward as to come back. Of course, Anstruther followed it. As he reached the edge of the brule a dry bough no thicker than his little finger, whirled out of one of the tops and struck him across the hand. The force of that blow from so small a thing should have warned him, but at that moment victory seemed within his grasp. The fawn, frightened by something the man neither saw nor understood, hesitated, until with a quick leap Anstruther sprang in and gripped the leather collar round its neck.

It would be a curious thing, the man thought, which would loosen his grip now until the provoking pet was safely in its mistress's keeping, and as the thought formed itself in his mind something happened.

To him it seemed that a terrific crash was followed by instant and complete darkness, accompanied by a curious sensation of numbness and a letting go of all things, all things except that leather collar. To that he clung instinctively, even when everything rose and went away from him, feeling and thought, wind and rain, and even the crashing of the brule, and the anger at Kitty Clifford's laughter.

CHAPTER VIII.

Jim to the Rescue

"Put it out of its misery; it's back is broken."

Anstruther recognized Mrs. Rolt's voice, and wondered in an idle dreamy fashion whose back was broken, and whether if its back was broken it would wish to be put out of its misery. His back was not broken nor was he in any misery. He wondered who was, and turning to see was struck by a hideous shock of pain, after which it was night again.

When he came to himself he knew that he was dead. He knew more than that. He was lying in his coffin; he could smell the new boards of it, and they were nailing down the lid, but this strangely enough did not worry him a bit. Death was a silly painless thing after all, very much like sleep. How even their strokes were. There were two of them at work, one on each side of him, beat, beat, beat! The ring of their hammers was rhythmical; rather good dream music he thought, but how hard they worked, and what a lot of nailing up that coffin required. He wished that they had not thrown the earth in before they nailed him down, the weight of it above him was so great that he could not move his limbs. And then quite suddenly the weight was lifted, and he drew a great breath, and again the fierce pain came and took him away into the cool dark where there was no trouble.

Reckless of falling limbs and risking, with eyes open to their danger, a fate similar to that of the man below them, two of the half-breed boys of the ranch had been swinging their axes as they had never swung them before, and as the blades bit and the white chips flew, two pale faced women, drenched with rain, and wild with grief and terror of the storm, pleaded with them to work "faster, faster, for God's sake, faster," clenching their feeble hands, and, yearning for something to do where there was nothing they could do.

Heavens! how long the time seemed. Surely between them they could lift the tree off him now, and they strained at a trunk, one limb of which was too heavy for their united strength. They might as well have tried to lift the ranch house. Those only who have handled a Douglas pine know what the weight of it is.

The Indians way was the only way, and there was no help but theirs, though by some miracle Frank Anstruther lived still. The hand that poor Kitty held in hers was limp and cold as a dead man's, but he was not dead yet. Not yet. Surely the men could work more quickly. Ah, if only Jim had been there.

At the very last the half-breeds stopped and consulted. Those two men, as if time was of no value, consulted and argued, and then one of them went to the house for a saw. That was the most insufferable five minutes of all to Kitty, and even when the saw cut through, and the ends of the log were free, the log did not rise an inch. Another cut had to be made, and all the agony of waiting endured again. Even when a six-foot length had been sawn out of the pine those two imbeciles could not lift it, a log which Jim would have carried on his shoulders.

It was well for Anstruther that they could not. But for the broken limb on the underside which had buried itself many feet deep, and held now like a tap root, Anstruther would long since have learned the great secret.

Thanks to that bough he was held as in a vice but not crushed, as a Douglas crushes what it falls upon. With levers and bars and all the ingenuity of practised loggers the men at last pried up the log sufficiently for their purpose, and drew out their man, still uncertain whether he was dead or alive.

With gentle strength they unclenched the long white fingers from the fawn's collar. Poor beast. It at any rate would not come in again from that storm. The tree had broken its back, and a merciful axe stroke had split its graceful head from end to end. And yet Kitty, who at another time would have wept for a day over her pet, had now no thought of it.

On a rude stretcher, improvised by the Chinaman whilst the Indians chopped, Mrs. Rolt and the three men carried Anstruther to the house and laid him in the warm, firelit room on the Boss's bed, and then the greatest terror, the only one of ranch life, faced those women. As long as all goes well to those who are country bred, there is no hardship in the enforced separation from the town and its thousand and one conveniences. Every difficulty is a joke to be laughed at, a puzzle which natural ingenuity will delight in overcoming. You can do without the shops and the theatres, you can hold service if you want to, and the strong man needs no policeman to protect him; but the time comes when even he cannot do without the doctor, when he would give all that the world holds for someone who could tell him what to do to save one dear life.

Anstruther might be dying for some little help which they could have given him if only they knew what was the matter with him, but they did not know.

To be continued.

Every mother who has once used Baby's Own Tablets readily admits that there is no other medicine to equal them. They are a never failing cure of all stomach and bowel complaints, and many a precious little babe owes health, and even life itself to their use. Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. Fred. They are truly a wonderful remedy for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Princess Leaves Lion Tamer.

New York, Nov. 18.—Jack Bonavitta, the lion tamer, in private life John Frederick Gentner, was served with papers yesterday at Tenafly, N.J., in a suit for divorce, brought by his wife, who, before her marriage, was the Princess de Montglyon of Belgium. Mrs. Gentner has been living at Bergenfield, N.J., where she is known as Mercy de Argenteau Gentner.

Bonavitta met the princess in Paris some ten years ago, about the time he lost almost his entire right arm in an attack by a lion, and they were married in that city in 1903. The princess during most of her stay in this country has been raising blooded dogs and cats and exhibiting under the name of Princess de Montglyon.

Coughed Up a Pin.

Chatham, Nov. 18.—Mrs. Robertson colored, 15 Foster street, who has been suffering for a year from what the doctors diagnosed as acute tuberculosis, and whose recovery was unhoped for, yesterday coughed up a rusty pin and felt immediate relief. Her cough ceased and to all appearances she is now a well woman.

Mrs. Robertson has no idea how the pin got into her lung. She does not remember ever having swallowed one. The case proves a mystery to local medical men.

ECZEMA 20 YEARS!

4 Doctors Failed. Morriscy's No. 4 Cured in 60 Days.

Mr. A. J. Kierstead, Mexico, Maine, tells in a series of letters how he was relieved.

"I am terribly afflicted with Eczema and can find no cure. I have been advised to write you, because Father Morriscy's cures are known in all parts. If you can help me, for God's sake do so. Please reply quick."

Second letter: "Thanks for your quick reply. I have been troubled with Eczema for 20 years—it is on my face, neck, arms and hands, and right now it is one solid sore. I can't seem to get any cure."

30 days later: "As you requested me to let you know how your salve worked, can say it did more good than the four doctors here who treated me. My face and neck—also my arms and hands are almost well—but I need another box of Salve."

July 16th, 1911: "I am delighted to tell you that I am entirely cured of Eczema, and am more than thankful for your Ointment. It did for me what 4 doctors here could not do, and I cannot possibly find fitting words of praise for my relief and cure."

A. J. Kierstead.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

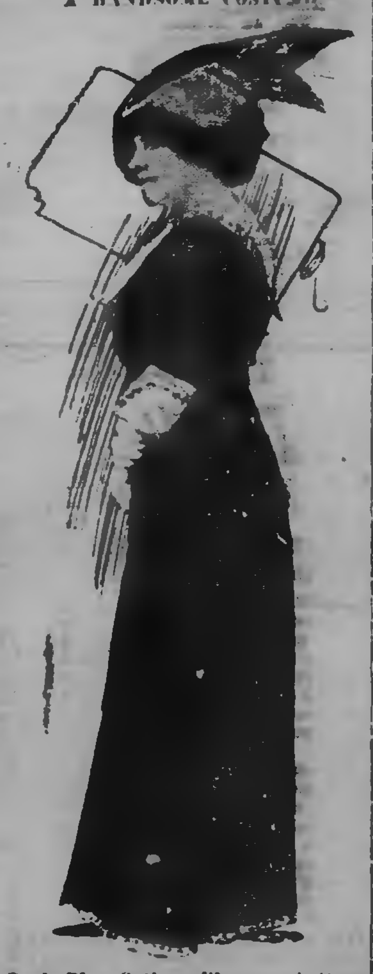
FOR A GOOD COMPLEXION

Medical Expert Hands Out Some Good Pointers to Ladies Interested in this Subject.

On the question of securing and maintaining a good complexion, there is a widespread impression that all that is necessary is to use some form of miraculous skinfood. But, points out a medical expert on the subject, the only skin food of any value is that which is taken in the usual way, and the best kind is that which suits the digestion and assimilation the best. There is no specific diet which has any direct influence on the skin, although there are some articles, such as alcohol, strong spices and condiments, strong tea, and excess of meat, which exercise a malignant effect upon it. Those who have a coarse skin should use milk and fish in preference to meat, and eat plenty of fruit and vegetables. Olive Oil is sometimes extolled in this connection, but only that quantity which is assimilated without risk is of any effective value. Efficient washing and pure, healthy blood are the only secrets of a good complexion. External applications which do not promote cleanliness are only so much obstruction to the efforts of the skin to look its best. A good supply of pure blood, flushing every capillary, is the first and most important factor in a good complexion, and it ensures the presence of a sufficient layer of fat to produce plumpness, roundness of outline, and softness of skin.

For practical purposes the following is the best method of improving the complexion. First make a paste of fine oatmeal and milk, or simply use dry bread-crumbs, and rub this with patient and thorough friction all over the face.

A HANDSOME COSTUME



Dark Blue Satin, with many buttons

Buttons are used elaborately as trimming upon a handsome dark blue satin costume. A graceful sash of satin in the back is edged on both sides with the buttons and finished with fringe. The sash is double in effect. The blouse has a tunic effect and ends at the hips. It is trimmed with a wide white satin collar and cuffs.

Homely Hints

A grain of salt added to cream will make it whip more easily.

All stains should be removed from clothing and household linen before putting it in the wash.

To revive the luster of morocco or any other leather, apply the white of an egg with a sponge.

Always have a small opening in the center of the upper crust on a fruit pie to allow the steam to escape while baking.

A tablespoon of soda added to a quart of water and boiled in the coffee pot for an hour will thoroughly cleanse the pot. Rinse well.

Physicians assert that baked potatoes are more nutritious than those cooked in any other way, and that fried ones are the most difficult to digest.

When your sewing machine becomes gummy, oil each part with a drop or two of kerosene. This will quickly clean it and cut the gum.

A Good Pickle

Many dishes which is not particularly tasty can be made palatable if a little good pickle be sent to table with it. A very nice pickle can be made with a pound of apples (cut fine), two pounds of onions (cut fine), half a pound of rather course sugar, a pint and a quarter of vinegar, also half an ounce of ground cloves, cinnamon, and ground ginger. Boil the whole gently for two hours; then bottle for use.

People who see themselves as others see them never believe what they see.

BIFOCALS
OR —
DOUBLE VISION GLASSES

Most people think, when buying Bifocal Glasses, that a large segment or reading area is required. With very few exceptions this is not so, as most bifocals are required for constant use, and the successful fitting of these lenses depends not so much on furnishing the largest reading portion possible, but on placing a minimum disk or wafer in exactly the correct position. A small wafer accurately placed will afford ample field for reading, writing and sewing, and will overcome the tendency to make mis-steps in going up and down stairs, an experience not uncommon to wearers of bifocals with too large reading segments.

We make a specialty of filling Bifocal Lenses in VISIBLE, SEMI-INVISIBLE and INVISIBLE.

About Zutoo Tablets
"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

McEWEN MADE GOOD HIS BOAST

Handcuffed by Officer, He Succeeded in Freeing Himself

The big audience at the Grand last night is still endeavoring to figure out how McEwen freed his hands from the ferocious handcuffs slipped on his wrists by Detective Newhall. It was a clever exhibition by the great McEwen who allowed the officer to slip on the darbies and turn the key with the hands of the hypnotist behind his back.

The entire program last night was pleasing at all stages and anyone suffering from chronic indigestion, will find instant relief by attending the last performance which will be given at the Grand to-night.

SPLENDID WORK BY Y.M.C.A. BOYS

Large Audience at the Gymnasium Was Well Pleased

That the members of the Young Men's Christian Association, receive a thorough physical training, was duly evidenced at the gymnasium last night, when an interesting program of physical work was given under the direction of the physical director, Mr. J. J. Thompson, and leaders, before a large attendance of parents and friends of those taking part.

Added interest was given to the evening's entertainment by the laughable antics of two clowns, L. Soden and C. Brown, who kept everything moving lively besides contributing numerous tumbling feats.

Horse and springboard work by the business boys class, under the direction of Mr. G. Gatley, came in for a goodly share of applause and too much praise cannot be given to the senior leaders for their performances on the parallel bars. Pyramid building on the parallel bars by the intermediate leaders, Messrs. Hanwell, Fitzgerald, Irvine, Flowers, Darling, Hamilton, Nichols, Hasty and Skellitter was an interesting number, as was also the mat work of the intermediate class. Their exhibitions included a long dive taken over from one to twelve boys on their hands and knees. The program was as follows:

Piano selection.
Marching by the Intermediate Class
Exhibition on parallel bars by senior leaders.
Instrumental selection.
Calisthenic drill by business and junior leader boys.
Pyramid building by junior leaders, led by E. Hanwell.
Tumbling exhibition.
Horse and springboard by business boys.
Pyramid on parallel bars by intermediate leaders.
Exhibition of mat work by intermediate class.

THE SHADOW OF POOR HEALTH
Dispelled Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills
When the shadow of poor health falls on your life, when hope begins to fade and friends look serious, then is the time you should remember that thousands just as hopeless have been cured and restored to the sunshine of health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich blood which brings a glow of health to anaemic cheeks, cures indigestion, headaches and backaches, drives out the stinging pains of rheumatism and neuralgia, strengthens the nerves and relieves as no other medicine can do the aches and pains which only women folk suffer from. In any emergency of poor health give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and they will not disappoint you. Here is a case that will bring hope to many a weary sufferer. Mrs. F. K. Sanders, St. Thomas, Ont., says: "About four years ago I took a severe cold which I neglected, thinking that I would soon be all right again. But instead I found myself in a weak and run-down condition. I seemed to have no ambition to do anything and my heart and nerves became so bad I was forced to bed. The doctor who was called in said the trouble was chronic anaemia, but in spite of his skilled attendance I was unable to sit up and eat, but had to be fed with a spoon. One day a visiting friend suggested my trying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I sent for a half dozen boxes. In a short time I began to eat better and feel better, and by the time the pills were used I felt altogether different, my heart did not bother me, my lips and cheeks regained their natural color, and everybody who saw me remarked on how well I was once more looking. Wishing to be on the safe side, I took two more boxes of the pills which made a complete cure, as I have had neither ache nor pain since, and I now weigh 146 pounds. I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I hope that this letter may be the means of suggesting relief to many of my sisters who suffer as I did."
Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LACK OF EXERCISE
Brings on Troubles which are Best Corrected by
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Sedentary Habits Develop Constipation

Man was intended to live an active, outdoor life, and his digestive system was modelled accordingly. Indoor work with hands or head, long hours sitting or standing still, especially in air that's none too good, slow down the healthy activities of stomach, liver, kidneys and the millions of tiny skin glands.
Constipation, headaches, indigestion, biliousness, rheumatism and similar troubles follow.
Then the worth of that good old reliable family medicine, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, is appreciated. Though it has been in use for over half a century, modern science has not been able to devise a safer or better cleanser for the whole system.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are largely vegetable in composition, free from any harmful drug, and mild yet most effective in their action. They are "Mother's standby" in hundreds of homes because they nip in the bud so many of the common ailments.

W.M.S. CRUSADE A GREAT SUCCESS

Gathering to Celebrate Getting of 69 New Members

A glad and happy group of ladies were the crusaders of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street Methodist church on Tuesday afternoon when they gathered in the parlor of the church bringing their sheaves with them. Sixty-nine active and eight associate members were announced as the great result of the crusade up to date of meeting. This announcement was received with great joy and the singing of the Doxology. The president, Mrs. Kendry welcomed the new members, followed by a bright talk from Mrs. A. K. Campbell, who said she had been praying for this result. Miss Gladys Pentland delighted all present with a recitation, showing the diversified character of our rapidly growing population and censuring the appelation of "Dago, Sheeny and Chink," so frequently applied to a part of them after which Miss Gertrude Allison sang "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old" with tenderness and feeling. Miss Jessie K. Munroe addressed the meeting, and in a heart to heart talk, impressed all present, with the great importance of individual effort, and individual cooperation, each taking for her motto "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

The pastor, Mr. Couch, welcomed the new members and congratulated the crusaders on their success and impressed the need for true knowledge of things Divine. A half hour of very pleasant social intercession and a cup of tea brought this extremely helpful and interesting meeting to a close.

R. R. HALL'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH

In Which He Sets Forth His Platform as Justification of the Support of the Electors—To Safeguard Popular Rights and Promote Progressive Measures

GENTLEMEN:

As the unanimously nominated candidate of the Liberals of this Riding, it is incumbent upon me to suggest some of the considerations and features of policy I favour in order to justify me in soliciting your support. I therefore submit to you some of the main planks of the Liberal platform and my own on which I stand and if, as a result of your support, I am elected, I shall use my best endeavours to have them given effect.

WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workman's Compensation Act should be radically remodelled, embodying the best features of the English and German Acts and extended so that full and ample damages may be given to a workman or his family on account of any injury he may sustain in the course of his employment and that without a law suit.

Moreover, the workman or his family under such a law should not be called upon to fight an expensive law suit in the courts with a wealthy corporation and be dragged from one Court of Appeal to another with the evident advantage in the long run to the longest purse, or else be compelled to accept a mere pittance for the injury he has sustained.

THE FACTORIES ACT

In order to prevent accidents to workmen, provision should be made for a more frequent inspection by competent inspectors, whose duty should be to see that dangerous machinery and places are properly guarded, fire escapes furnished, sanitary and ventilation facilities improved, and every step taken to protect and preserve the life, limb and health of employees.

Many accidents happen to employees due to working them too long hours. The employer should be made liable for this increased risk. He should either be compelled to give shorter hours to his employees or else be compelled to assume increased risk which follows in consequence of an employee being over-tired and over-worked.

EDUCATION

A more progressive and adequate educational policy is urgently needed. More liberal grants should be given in aid of primary education, in the promotion of industrial training and technical schools in urban and rural communities; and in the establishment of night schools for the benefit of those who have been forced to leave school at an early age to earn their own living. Model schools should be restored with a view of increasing the supply of efficient and qualified teachers.

Two great general principles should underlie our educational system in this English-speaking province which forms such an important part of this English-speaking continent, namely:

(a) Every child in the Province should have a thorough elementary education.
(b) Every child should have a thorough knowledge of the English language.

To attain this end, necessary laws and regulations should be passed and enforced and liberal aid should be given to provide further adequate training schools and a sufficient supply of competent and qualified teachers for every School Section in every part of the Province.

Were this done, tens of thousands of our fellow citizens would not be as they are now deprived of the opportunity of acquiring any knowledge of the English language.

AGRICULTURE

The rural population of Ontario is declining in this Province, which contains the richest and best farm lands on this continent. This state of affairs can be reversed by bringing about the active immigration into this Province of suitable people for settlement and employment upon our farm lands; by the building of good roads throughout Ontario, and thereby facilitating traffic and insuring quick delivery of farm and garden produce; by increasing the rural telephone service; by the location of a demonstrator in every rural riding, and by the establishment of suitable demonstration farms in each riding, and by showing to the farmers through such demonstration farms the results of successful experiments in every branch of agriculture.

NEW ONTARIO

New Ontario should be developed and settled and its railway facilities utilized and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway should be made to do service as a colonization road, and should be extended to the Hudson Bay, and branches should be built as the development of the country demands.

A speedy end should be put to the neglect to settle, and develop, the agricultural possibilities of New Ontario, such as has marked the past seven years. A government with an earnest desire to do something to develop the agricultural possibilities of this splendid farming region, would do something to facilitate its settlement which is now handicapped from lack of roads to give new settlers access to or egress from their premises. Without roads or the sympathic attitude of a government the settler in New Ontario is greatly handicapped and the settlement of the country is correspondingly retarded.

TAXATION

The Assessment Act should be so amended so as to permit a municipality, if it so desires, to exempt improvements from taxation, either in whole or in part, and to provide for the removal of the existing inequalities of taxation.

AID TO CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

The alarming prevalence of tuberculosis calls for the aid of the Provincial Government, which it is not now receiving, (and is rudely denied) to assist in the provision of facilities for curative or pallative treatment for those whose means prevent this. To this end I would favor amendment of the Succession Duties Act so as to impose an additional percentage of taxation on the estates of very wealthy men, say $250,000.00 and over, to provide a fund to be devoted to the maintenance of tuberculosis sanitaria and the aid of the work of the Children's Aid Society.

PROVINCIAL AID TO RADIAL RAILWAYS

Peterborough is particularly well located for the establishment of a system of radial railways in this district owing to the large number of water powers that would furnish cheap operation. These railways would provide the city with more of the necessaries of life at a cheaper rate; would furnish cheaper and better accommodation to farmers in bringing their produce to market; and attract tourists to our summer resorts. Aid should be given to attain this end, with a percentage of profits to be returned to the Province, after roads are in operation and earning reasonable dividends.

In addition to what I have above recited I shall feel it my duty to support any measure to meet the legitimate demands of a progressive people. If you think that I shall be able to give you valuable and effective, as it shall be my aim to give you, faithful service, I respectfully ask your vote and support.

As it will be impossible for me to personally call upon all the Electors, I trust that this means of communicating my position will meet with your approval and secure me the favour of your vote and support.

Yours respectfully,

R. R. HALL.

The Best Yet

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" as presented by May Robson, is now numbered as one of the best American comedies ever produced before a cultivated audience in a London theatre. It was an odd type of character as given by Miss Robson, one of a class found in the New England states, and nowhere else, and yet this genuine actress with an alert apprehension of humor, ease and fluency, presents the eccentric old lady so vividly that the majority of the audience recognizes the special type, as the counterpart even exists in London. The situations and the incidents developing them are very funny and yet consistent and entertaining."—London, Eng., Globe.

Terrorized by Woman.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 18.—Farmers notified the police yesterday that an unknown demented woman was terrorizing people living on Welland County farms. She refuses to tell to people what she wants.

Captain Klaus Larsen, who three weeks ago navigated the Whirlpool Rapids, is here to-day after abandoning his motor boat trip to Detroit. Larsen is broke. Thieves stole his newspaper clippings and clothes while he was in Welland, he claims.

By the arrest over the river of William Schultz, the police believe they have a member of a gang that has been systematically smuggling goods both ways for months. Nushor Justikian obtained a warrant for Schultz's arrest, claiming he stole two hundred pounds of tobacco he had agreed to smuggle into Canada.

Bridge Sale This Time.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The U. As a precaution against a repetition of the terrible disaster of a few years ago, when the bridge collapsed, Canada asked the Department of Commerce and Labor for the loan of a device possessed by the bureau of standards, by which the security of a bridge can be tested during the stages of its construction. Secretary Nagel yesterday granted the petition and authorized experts to go along with the apparatus.

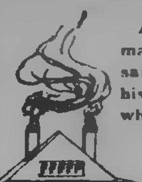
The Peerless Peninsular

a cast-iron range with modern oven and equipment



A wealthy mustard manufacturer once said that he made his profit not out of what people ate, but what they left on their plates.

The coal dealer might say about the same thing.

It's not the coal you use that buys his six-cylinder car, but the coal that goes up the chimney.

You might as well save some of that coal.

Building ranges to do good cooking and at the same time to save coal has kept us thinking and working over in Preston for upwards of 50 years. Every year improvements in range construction have been made. The flues have been widened here; a wall made thicker there; weight reduced in one spot and added to another. But every change has made the oven heat with less fuel and the construction of the range strong and durable. The perfect range which these years of study have produced is called "Peninsular."

Nickel ornaments, the number of lids, the special features or the size do not affect the internal construction or honest materials and workmanship that go into the "Peninsular." So that when buying one, a housewife may feel free to consult her own tastes as regards finish and appearance. If the range is "Peninsular" she will know that it will give her good bakings for the least amount of coal.

The Peerless

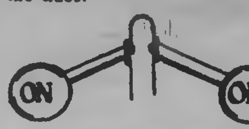
The PEERLESS Peninsular is a modern cast-iron range. Modern, because it has all the advantages of cast-iron and none of its disadvantages. In fact, it should be called a combination range—a combination of cast-iron steel. It has the firm close-fitting parts; the durable everlasting frame and the cosy home-like appearance, dear to all women; but—and here it differs from other cast-iron ranges—it also has a quick oven—an oven that heats evenly on every side, top and bottom—a square oven big enough to cook four pies at once; and it has a drop-oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

The PEERLESS Peninsular may be had with a steel warming closet and hot water reservoir and with a low closet under the oven for pots, pans and irons.

The PEERLESS is a perfect beauty and has many a convenience not found on other ranges.

Take the top of the Peerless Peninsular.

It is made in three separate sections which are interchangeable and which slide along or lift out whenever you want to clean the flues.



In most ranges the oven is either "on" or "off." That is, it is getting full heat or none at all. The Peerless Peninsular oven is regulated by means of a sliding damper so as to get just as much heat as you need. This is another way you save fuel.

Get "The Cost"

"THE COST of a Range" tells more about these Peninsular Ranges—not a list of pictures and prices, but a book showing that the after-cost is the big cost and how the "Peninsular" cuts it down. Yours, for the asking.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Charges that Chicago gamblers kept a fund on hand of $40,000 for use in "easing up public officials," were made by Harry Brolaski, former gambler, before the civil service commission yesterday in its investigation into public gambling and other vices.

Brolaski said he came to Chicago last May at the request of Benj. Hyman and other friends, with the intention of investigating gambling and cleaning up the city. He said he found Chicago a wide-open town with gambling controlled by Mont. Tennes, Tom McGinnis and others.

WITH THE HUNTERS

Enjoying Life in the Woods

TALES FROM THE SCRAP-BOOK ON HUNTING AND FISHING DEEDS

Hunting outfits have been relegated to the attics or cellars and the season of 1911, is at an end, save for the aftermath of story telling of game that fell or did not bite the dust.

A pleasing feature on the 1911 program is that no serious shooting accidents have been recorded. It used to be that news from the hunters was received more quickly because the message brought the information that some member of a party had been mistaken for game of some sort and had received the contents of the gun.

"The hunters are more careful now and the system of using signals nowadays makes hunting less dangerous," remarked an old hunter the other day.

THE SHAWANAGA CLUB.

That splendidly organized party, the Shawanaga Club, has returned after a successful outing, with the veteran, Mr. Chas. Gladman, as captain. Twenty deer, and about one hundred and fifty partridge were bagged and this in the face of weather that included wind storms, resembling cyclones, thunder and lightning demonstrations, rain and snow.

One member of the party tells of how he left the camp one day for a walk and so suddenly and severe did a snow storm come on that he feared for some time that he might not be able to find the trail back to shelter.

LADY KILLED BEAR.

Another member relates the killing of a bear by a lady hunter, some three miles distant. Bruin's presence was discovered by the pet dog, and Mr. Bear retreated to his den, with his diminutive canine enemy close on his heels. The party secured guns and the animal was shot right at his own fort by the lady in question.

The party too had numerous visits from a lone wolf.

Experiences amusing and otherwise are told by others.

But of all the local parties who have had their fling and returned again with the spoils, not one reports the capture of a moose. Some big fellows have been seen, but in every case it would appear, the moose obtained the first look.

MOOSE SHOT AT HARVEY.

To an employe on the farm of Reeve Shaw of Harvey, however, is due the honor of bagging one of these monarchs, which had wandered into the fields. By some adroit manoeuvring good aim was obtained and the moose fell to the earth. He weighed, so it is said, about 800 pounds.

73 LB. FAWN.

"Bossie" Mitchell, who was out with the Eagle Lake Hunt Club, bagged a young fawn, weighing 73 pounds, on a second shot. Mr. Gus Sowers, who has been tramping the northern country for many years, shot one buck, which went 214 pounds. The party got eight in all and had indifferent success at fishing.

GREEN ISLAND HUNT CLUB.

The Green Island Hunt Club, as usual got all coming to them at their camp on Lake Memesagamesing, in Parry Sound, and the local members of the party returned last evening. Each member had a deer and also brought down numerous partridge. The personnel of the club this season was Rev. G. W. Henderson, Robert Neill and F. Brownscombe of Peterboro, Rev. D. J. Shorey, Ed. Gregory, and John Anderson, of Lindsay; Jas. N. Shannon, A. T. Howe and Neil Gregory of Toronto and Rev. A. M. Irwin of Cannington. Mr. Wm. Jackson of Peterboro was cook.

Local members report high winds during the camp, but on the whole, the weather was pleasant for such an occasion. Sleighs were used to haul the spoils and outfits from camp to the steamboat landing, a distance of ten miles, where the boat was taken to North Bay. Rev. Mr. Henderson, and Rev. Mr. Irwin acted alternatively as captain.

SHRUBB'S GREAT RECORD

Out of a Long List of Over Two Thousand Starts Has Lost Only Ten Races.

"England is a good place for a rich man to live in and it may be possible that when I make my pile I may return to the Motherland but Canada is one of the greatest countries in the world and Toronto promises to be one of its big cities. For the last three years I have been acting as coach for the Harvard Cross Country team and am going to Cambridge to take charge of their team for this coming season." Asked with regard to the number of races in which he had competed, Shrubb stated that he had run in all 2002 races and had lost ten. He does not think much of the marathon distance. "It is too long a grind, and it will kill any runner inside of three or four years. From ten to fifteen miles is a good distance and any man can stay in the game for a good many years if he only takes care of himself. I have been running between thirteen and fourteen years. I made my best records in the amateur class and hold all the world's records, from two to ten miles and also for the one hour distance." His ten mile record was 50.40 and a fraction made some seven years ago and he has covered the same distance in a number of other races in 51 and a fraction. "Gee, I could run in those days but I am kind of getting to be a has been although I can hold my own with a good many that are still racing".

Shrubb is now the proud father of a five year old lad and says that he has a small race track on his lawn for the little fellow to practise and he expects him to be a world's beater when his day comes. His reminiscense are of a very interesting character and his unassuming manner makes him an ideal talker. His pastime outside of running is shooting and he is going to endeavor to pay a visit to the Province later this year during the moose season to see if he cannot get a head to adorn his home in Toronto.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

FOOTBALL IN FRANCE

The Rugby Game Gains Rapidly in Public Favor, and Splendid Players are Seen.

Lack of team-work keeps France from turning out an international championship football team. Members of the Wales team, champions of Europe, so express themselves.

Football was introduced into France in 1889 and the country now has over 50 football clubs. In individual play the French are greatly superior to the Welsh, Scotch and English players, but lack of team work caused them to go down before Wales after they had surprised Europe by defeating Scotland.

The French player is very quick and alert and uses his head all the time. He follows the ball closely and is quick to take an opening. Last season was France's most successful. Easy victories over in Austria, Germany and Italy and the defeat of England and Scotland left only Wales between her and the title. In this contest the score remained 0 to 0 until within five minutes of the close when Wales scored a single touchdown.

The game is popular with the public 65,000 persons crowding into the enclosure last season in the final game for the French title while thousands clamored to be admitted.

THE ITALIAN AT HOME

Sober, Frugal and Withal Cheerful, the Italian in His Native Haunts Exists Pleasurably.

The Italian peasant, poor and overtaxed, is of necessity economical, but he is by temperament sober and frugal in his mode of life. Macaroni and olive-oil seem to be his staple articles of diet. Beans with oil and salt are held by the peasantry to be a dish fit for the gods. Chestnut trees flourish on the Apennines, and the nuts form a nutritive food — even being ground into flour and made into a kind of bread — for the poorer peasants of the country. The dwellers in the Italian towns are also, for the most part, frugal and abstemious in their habits; they eat and drink sparingly and are good cooks. They are, too, addicted to such harmless pleasures as café or theatre visiting. There on Sunday or Thursday nights (the latter the weekly half-holiday) the good burgher and his wife may be seen clad in their Sunday best. They spend little but seem to enjoy life. The Italian woman is clever with her needle, and does wonders in the way of dress. But she is proud, and would rather stay at home than look shabby or unfashionable in public. They dress carefully, and are careful of their dress, and men and women are invariably well groomed.

Away in the South of Italy, where even the aristocracy are impoverished, those who cannot afford to keep a carriage and a pair of horses (and this is imperative in such circles), a number of families will club together to use a common vehicle in turn on certain days of the week, and by a simple arrangement they are each able to drive out in a coach that bears on its panels their own particular armorial device.

WARS COST IN CASH

Military Men Calculate the Ruinous Cash Outlay Entailed by a Modern Franco-German War.

The Army and Navy Gazette calls attention very appropriately to this subject. The war of 1870-71 cost France 12 milliards of francs, while some French writers set down the cost at about 10 milliards. The cost from July 17, 1870, to the 18th of the following May, on which day the Treaty of Frankfort was ratified, was 1,912,000,000 francs or about $385,000,000, this being for war charges, properly so called. This sum works out at something like $1,560,000 per day. But, if other indirect charges are included, and the vast indemnity of five milliards, with its interest be added, the total cost of the war is brought up to the colossal figure of $1,970,000,000, and to a rate of some $8,100,000 per day. The cost of the war to Germany is estimated, with contingent charges, and the reorganisation of the Army, but not the ordinary military budget, to have been $675,000,000. In modern conditions a year of war would cost France $2,200,000,000 while for Germany the outlay would be something approaching the vast sum of $5,500,000,000.

The Gael and His Societies

The "clan society" is, of necessity, a comparatively modern institution. In the days when nearly all the bearers of a surname were to be found in one Highland region, united for mutual protection, owning direct personal allegiance to their chief, the clan itself was literally a clan society. There is, indeed, a notable similarity between the causes of coherence in the old days of the clan and in the new days of the clan society. Both were groups of people of the same name, who claimed the right to elect their own leaders, who considered themselves as members of one great family, and, as such, bound to help each other in adversity, sickness, or danger. It is interesting to note that there is a traceable relationship between the time of a clan's misfortune as a historical entity and its formation of itself into the modern form of association — the clan society. Two of the most cruelly wronged clans in Scotland were the Mackays and the Macgregors. Each became the victim of harsh oppression, though in dissimilar forms, and we find that these two clans were among the very first to adapt themselves to the new conditions, and, though exiled from their ancient lands, to ally their respective members to face the new problems as resolutely as their forefathers had faced the old.

Strengthening Jamaica's Defences.

Kingston, Jamaica, Nov. 18.—Owing to the decision of the United States Government to fortify the Panama Canal, the defences on the Island of Jamaica are being improved. The forts commanding the outer channels to Port Royal and Kingston will be remodeled and more guns placed in them, and when this work is completed the island will be one of the most strongly fortified of the British possessions.
